LINDBERGH GOES ON STAND; TELLS OF CURTIS HOAX

Relates Details of Kidnaping.

BY TOM PETTEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Flemington, N. J., June 27.—[Special.]—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh today confronted John Hughes Curtis, the man who hoaxed him in the hunt for his kidnaped baby when, it was charged, he knew the actual kidnapers. Curtis was on trial for obstructing justice.

The tiny, jammed courtroom, packed to the windows, sensed the drama and sat hushed as the airman strode briskly to the witness chair and began the narrative of as strange a story as fiction ever produced.

Col. Lindbergh, slenderer than he was six months ago and pale in comparison with his sun tanned neighbors, looked directly at Curtis, who sat beside his eleven year old daughter, Constance Curtis.

Shows No Emotion.

There was no emotion in Col. Lindbergh's face as he sat easily in his chair. He appeared interested only in getting the account of his strange dealings with Curtis written into the record. He did not show a trace of resentment, nor was there a sting in his voice. Instead, he spoke almost coldly—not at all like a man seeking vengeance.

A few minutes earlier a jury of five women and seven men had been selected to try Curtis. Only twenty-five of a panel of 100 had to be called as everyone appeared eager to qualify.

Anthony M. Hauck Jr., prosecutor of Hunterdon county, had told the newly chosen jury that the state expected to prove that Curtis had been in connection with the actual kidnapers, that he knew their names and that he could have brought them to justice.

Instead, Mr. Hauck told the jury, Curtis had wilfully misled Col. Lindbergh and the police, told them strange stories while on a wild goose chase aboard a yacht and when Col. Lindbergh and the police were hot on the trail of the kidnapers, had prevented them from capturing them by decoying the police away when he knew where and who the kidnapers were.

Betty Gow In Court.

Since early morning Col. Lindbergh had sat quietly at the prosecutor's table seemingly oblivious to the fact that the entire courtroom was staring at the back of his curly haired head. Over in the witness section of the room, Betty Gow, the Lindbergh nurse, who is to take the stand tomorrow, glared at the spectators and at Curtis and his three lawyers. Beside her, stolid Ollie Wheatley, the butler, sat, unsmiling.

County Judge Adam O. Robbins, a thin middle aged man in a skimpy black robe, had refused to quash the indictment on a plea by Lloyd Fischer, chief of the Curtis legal force, who maintained it was faultily drawn and placed Curtis in double jeopardy, because it named no specific act in thwarting justice. Mr. Fischer argued that Curtis could be reindicted on specific charges after being tried on a blanket indictment.

After a few minutes of preliminary questioning by Prosecutor Hauck, Col. Lindbergh was directed to tell of his experiences with Curtis. The flyer related the first meeting in his home at Hopewell when Curtis was brought there by an old friend, Rear Admiral Guy Burrage, and a Norfolk minister, the Rt. Rev. Dobson Peacock. Lindbergh said such an introduction caused him to put confidence in Curtis' story that he was in touch with the men "who took my son."

Talks of Son Unmoved.

There was no break in the colonel's voice when he spoke of his son, nor did his voice waver when earlier he had replied to a question:

"Yes, I had a son at that time. He is dead now."

The colonel related how Curtis had begun discussing ransom money on his first visit and that he had told him he would set no sum until he had proof that the band Curtis had contacted was the actual kidnap gang. Curtis, Col. Lindbergh said, suggested $25,000 as the amount the kidnapers wanted.

Col. Lindbergh told of going to Cape May, N. J., to keep a midnight date with Curtis and said he expected to get his son back almost any day. Curtis, however, put him off and told him another long, sensational story of his contact with the kidnapers in a fishing boat at sea.

The courtroom was growing dark and the janitor switched on the lights. There was a startled gasp from the

TEST LOBSTERS WITH A SHOCK OF ELECTRICITY

Boston, Mass., June 27.—(AP)—Any lobster that does not jump or at least give a good vigorous wiggle in response to a mild jolt of electricity will not henceforth be accepted for use on Massachusetts tables.

Raymond J. Kenney, director of fish and game, announced tonight the adoption of an electrical device which, it is claimed, can be absolutely relied upon to determine a crustacean's fitness as food.

The device, which is a simple electrical appratus, was developed by Dr. David L. Belding.

If the lobster is in good condition, according to Kenney, "an immediate response is indicated by a sharp contraction of the lobster's tail and by the more delicate movements of the small flippers and swimmerettes."

Lobsters which do not react in this manner will be condemned.

The new test, Kenney said, will be applied to the millions of pounds of lobsters offered for sale in this state annually.

RULES DRYS MAY DRIVE 70 MILES AN HOUR IN CITY

Prohibition agents in Chicago have authority to drive automobiles at speeds of 60 to 70 miles an hour in the pursuit of liquor law violators, provided they do so "in a careful manner," according to M. L. Harney, local prohibition administrator.

"Our agents are under instruction," Mr. Harney said, "to break local traffic laws only in an actual pursuit and then only when necessary. At no time are they permitted to endanger the lives of private citizens. The life of the agent does not matter. It is his job to risk his life."

The fact that dry agents may break the traffic laws with immunity was disclosed in Washington when congress failed to pass a bill allowing damages of $5,000 to George Jeffcoat, husband of a woman killed by the car of a speeding prohibition agent. Amos W. W. Woodcock, prohibition director, testified that agents may drive at such speeds as are necessary to overtake a suspect.

SUES TO RECOVER $2,000 HUSBAND SPENT FOR RUM

Minneapolis, Minn., June 27.—(AP)—Mrs. May Curry of Minneapolis filed suit here today against John Baldigo, seeking to recover $2,000 she alleges her husband, David Curry, spent for liquor from Baldigo in the last six years.

The money squandered for liquor deprived her of the necessities of life, Mrs. Curry alleged. She also asked $1,000 because her husband often was "rendered sick, sore and lame" and was "almost continually drunk."

Baldog filed an answer denying all allegations.

Committee Votes to Keep 2-Thirds Rule

By a vote of 30 to 20, the committee on rules of the Democratic national committee last night recommended retention of the two-thirds nomination rule, but only for six ballots. If no candidate is nominated after six ballots, the proposition of abrogating the two-thirds rule would be submitted to a majority vote of the delegates.

The committee also voted, 31 to 18, to report out a rule on the order of business placing the nomination of candidates on the agenda before the report of the platform committee. This stratagem was assailed by the anti-Roosevelt leaders, who said it might present the paradox of a confirmed dry nominated for President and learning later that he was to run on a dripping wet platform.

Huey Has His Say.

"Why that's the same old Wilsonian system we had out in San Francisco in 1912," said Senator Huey P. Long, the Louisiana Kingfish.

"Not in San Francisco," some one suggested.

"No, I mean St. Louis," said Long. "No, you mean Baltimore," said Chairman J. Bruce Kremer of Montana.

Although Gov. Roosevelt of New York had instructed his campaign managers earlier in the day to cease their fight for abolition of the century old rule, the hedge resolution was put through by the Roosevelt forces.

It was introduced by former Gov. Richard Metcalf of Nebraska, and adopted after three hours of debate fraught with heckling, old fashioned Democratic oratory, and charges of steam rolling. Former Judge Daniel F. Cohalan of New York, Tammany member of the committee, engaged in a heated altercation with Chairman J. Bruce Kremer of Montana, a Roosevelt leader, whom he accused of favoring the abrogationists. Late at night Gov. Roosevelt, in Albany, said he had not authorized the Metcalf resolution.

Tells 'Em What It Means.

At the very outset of the meeting Senator Long essayed to run the show, "taking the liberty" of reading Gov. Roosevelt's long telegram to the other members and telling them just what Mr. Metcalf's resolution meant. He shouted for almost an hour in support of the measure and constantly interrupted speakers on the other side.

Former United States Senator Atlee Pomerene of Ohio, after arousing the indignation of Kingfish Long by demanding to know who had just spoken, introduced an amendment to the Metcalf resolution striking out all but the first sentence calling for nomination by a two-thirds vote. This amendment was later defeated 29 to 20.

Today's Program

The Democratic convention will be called to order at noon by Senator Barkley of Kentucky, temporary chairman. The order of business follows:

PRAYER—By the Right Rev. Msgr. F. G. Ostrowski, St. Josaphat's church, Chicago.

REPORTS—Committees on credentials and permanent organization and election of permanent chairman.

ADDRESS—Permanent chairman.

REPORT—Committee on rules.

ELECTION—New national committee. Resolutions and speeches.

EX-BANKER, ILL, TO BE ARRAIGNED AT HOME TODAY

Edward D. McCabe, 73 years old, former president of the closed Lake View State bank, will be arraigned today in his home at 456 Briar place on a charge of making false statements to bank examiners. In order to expedite the hearing Judge Rush agreed to hold court at the bedside of McCabe, who is seriously ill with heart disease.

McCabe will be asked by the state to allow the case to proceed in his absence, it was said yesterday. William O. J. Hattstaedt, former chairman of the board, and Daniel M. Rives, former cashier, are co-defendants with McCabe.

Olar A. Christensen, former president, and Walter T. Larsen, former cashier of the closed North Town State bank, appeared yesterday before Judge Rush and obtained a change of venue. They are charged with embezzlement of $19,000 of the bank funds. The case was sent back to Chief Justice Harry M. Fisher of the Criminal court and reassigned to Judge James J. Kelly.

"L" EMPLOYES SIGN AGREEMENT FOR 10% PAY CUT

A new wage agreement was signed last night by the Chicago Rapid Transit company and its union employes, according to John J. Bruce, president of the workers' organization.

Under the agreement, the employes will take a 10 per cent cut. They are guaranteed a day of at least 7 hours and 45 minutes whenever they go to work, and are granted an 18 minute lunch period. Slight adjustments were made in the overtime rules. The new rate for motormen will be 71 cents an hour instead of 79 cents, and conductors will receive 66 cents an hour instead of 74.

The employés twice rejected the proposal of a 10 per cent cut, but at a third meeting Saturday empowered the committee headed by President Bruce to sign a contract on the terms indicated.

DIN OF VICTORY HOPE RESOUNDS IN THE STADIUM

Cheer Barkley Plea for Wet Test.

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

Sheaves of oratory—nearly 30,000 words of it.

Full throated demonstrations against prohibition—these spontaneous and recurrent.

Warm hearted welcomes to the round dozen American front pagers who also are Democratic grandees—among them suave Ritchie, emphatic Al Smith, who at the moment is—for him—a shade subdued; lean visaged McAdoo, bland John Davis, once "titular head" of the party; polite, patient John Raskob, the party's sugar daddy; slick James Walker, grim, laconic Walsh of Montana, who drove one presidential cabinet minister into oblivion and another into prison, and gaunt Murray of Oklahoma with alfalfa in his hair.

JOHN J. RASKOB.

Rounding Out a Century.

Such the high lighted incidents and such the outstanding personalities of yesterday's first session in Chicago's Stadium of a Democratic national convention, which rounds out a century of the American convention system founded by President Andrew Jackson at Baltimore in 1832.

The setting is the same as for the 20th Republican national convention that met here two weeks ago.

But the spirit is heartier.

Pale apprehension stalks off the scene and joyous expectancy marches on.

The seats that were filled by delegates anxiously mapping a defensive now are occupied by a burlier type of men who are raring to deliver an offensive and who are fluent in damnatory words.

Raskob Starts It Off.

Polite, patient sugar daddy, who used to be a Republican, deprecates the damnatory words. Smiling his cooling, soothing smile, John Raskob, chairman of the Democratic national committee, says in his introductory keynoting:

"Let our platform speak kindly or not at all of the dead. Denunciation of the Republican party will be a pure waste of words in our platform.

"They have been floundering pathetically.

"Like little children calling names they say that we have been 'smearing' them. At a loss to know what they meant, we consulted the dictionary and found that 'to smear' means to prepare a dead body with sacred oils before burial."

The burly men catch the point. They guffaw and promote gentle John to the atta boy class.

A Teapot Dome Thrust.

Cheered by their cheering, he makes another thrust, saying:

"There is great charity in Democratic hearts! Otherwise we would use Teapot Dome instead of 'sacred oils' for this smearing purpose."

At that a thousand eyes are turned toward the grim, laconic one from Montana who made Teapot Dome a fount of woes to the Harding administration. But Thomas James Walsh does not lift his eyes.

The burly men want raw meat. 'Tis more to their taste than Raskob's subtleties.

The sweet June afternoon has drifted past 3 o'clock when Barkley of Kentucky—once Judge Barkley of Paducah—but United States senator now and temporary chairman of this centennial convention—throws them their favorite viand.

Barkley Feeds the Tigers.

Here are morsels to which the delegates leap as one—one tiger:

"Any American in the exercise of the functions of citizenship has the same right to advocate the change or repeal of any law that he has to advocate its enactment in the first instance.

"This government is the people's government. The constitution is their constitution.

"Two weeks ago in this place the Republican party promulgated what it called a 'plank' on the subject of the eighteenth amendment. But it is not a plank. It is a promiscuous agglomeration of scrap lumber.

"Under these circumstances this convention owes it to the people of the nation to make its declaration

TAKING ON THE PILOT.

The party of Al Smith, Albert Ritchie, James Reed, and Anton Cermak is also the party of Huey Long, John Garner, Robert Wagner, and Tom Connally. The party of Thomas Jefferson was also the party of William Jennings Bryan. The party of Andrew Jackson's nationalism has in it the internationalism of Baker, Cox, and McAdoo.

Now with the nominating convention in action the question is which prophets will prevail and what voices will be heard. The convention is full of hope. It may also be full of hope. It may take its ideas of social relief from Wagner and Connally, its doctrine of government expenditures from Garner, and its tax theories from Long. If then it reverts to Woodrow Wilson for principles of international relations and to Bishop Cannon for dogmas of federal autocracy it will enter its season of opportunity with the long ears of the mountain nightingale on the long face of intolerant and intolerable bigotry.

It is improbable and seems incredible that the party should do all of this. It may do none of it. The alternative is to set Reed above Long and Ritchie above Garner, to listen to Al Smith rather than Roosevelt, to believe that Jefferson had sounder ideas of government than Bryan and that Melvin Traylor is a better diagnostician than the billion dollar subsidy grantors who would extirpate the taxpayer to save the country and break the treasury to recover prosperity.

There is unquestionably an opportunity to win votes which are now in doubt or, worse, in despair. Bad times have not completely overturned the rudimentary common sense of the country, although they may have touched the heads of many politicians. The decision of the November election must be conceded to disaffected elements in the population who could believe that Mr. Garner's pork barrel will float them to shore or that Mr. Long's confiscations will pay the rent and the grocery bill.

A success won by subscription to the least intelligent dogmas of communism and an administration under the red flag of the public auctioneer if not the red flag of the commissars is a success to be enjoyed with forty years in the great American desert. There'll be nothing to administer except bad debts, an empty treasury, and industrial wreckage.

It is still believable that the coming campaign turns on the honesty and sanity of political action; that a majority of the American people are not as crazy as many public men have proved themselves to be; that the doctrine of impoverishment is not generally mistaken as the rule of national well being; that there is a recognition of the true functions of government and a knowledge that the country cannot be restored by the tax collector or revived by the destruction of private and public credit.

N. Y. GOVERNOR IS WEAKENED BY FIGHT ON RULES

Faces Showdown in Convention Today.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

With the nomination for President almost within his grasp, Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York was perceptibly slipping last night, following his surrender in the face of impending defeat of his move to abolish the 100 year old two-thirds nominating rule which blew the lid off the first session of the Democratic national convention.

While Roosevelt delegations showed signs of wavering in their allegiance to the New Yorker, favorite son delegations that 24 hours ago were preparing to leap for the Roosevelt band wagon experienced a sudden change and began digging in for a long contest.

Forging to the fore in the calculations of the leaders devoted to the undoing of Roosevelt came Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland, who is reputed to command substantial strength in 18 delegations. Close behind him was Newton D. Baker of Ohio, who will be trotted out by the anti-Roosevelt contingent if Ritchie should fail to make the grade.

Illinois Turns on Roosevelt.

The Illinois delegation, it was learned, is now definitely enlisted in the war on Roosevelt. It will vote for Melvin A. Traylor so long as there seems a prospect of achieving his choice, Michael L. Igoe of Chicago having been selected to place the banker in nomination.

Gov. Ritchie is said to be the second choice of the overwhelming majority of the Illinois delegates and will receive the greater part of their votes if the nomination of Mr. Traylor should appear impossible. Ritchie is also expected to receive the support of the delegates committed to Al Smith in the event of the latter's retirement from the contest.

Mississippi Is Split.

First of the delegations hitherto counted for Roosevelt to show signs of cracking was Mississippi, the revolt of which, together with other southern delegations, against abrogation of the two-thirds rule, caused the New York governor to drop that project like a red hot poker.

Caucusing last night, the Mississippi delegation found itself split on the nomination of the ticket. While half of the 20 members was for Roosevelt, the other half was for either Al Smith or Newton D. Baker of Ohio. No candidate having a majority, the delegation postponed further action to a caucus tonight.

Series of Battles Today.

The struggle for the nomination will begin in the session today with a series of pitched battles between the Roosevelt and anti-Roosevelt forces. First will come the clash over the election of the permanent chairman. The committee on permanent organization voted last night to recommend Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana, the Roosevelt candidate. The anti-Roosevelt leaders will propose Jouett Shouse.

Although the committee recommended Senator Walsh by a vote of 36 to 12, Mr. Shouse at midnight was claiming he has a majority of the convention in his favor. For example, the New York delegation last night in a caucus voted, 67 to 26½, to support Shouse for permanent chairman.

Next will come a fight over the report of the rules committee recommending a modified form of abrogation of the two-thirds nominating rule. Under this plan, put through the rules committee by 30 Roosevelt delegations against protest of 20 anti-Roosevelt delegations, the convention would take six ballots under the two-thirds rule. Then, if there had been no nomination, the convention would decide by a majority vote whether to suspend the two-thirds rule for the remainder of the balloting.

Act on Roosevelt's Plea.

Although Gov. Roosevelt had called off the fight on the two-thirds rule this modified plan was brought forward by the Roosevelt forces in conformity with their construction of a plea in the governor's telegram to do all possible to avoid a "protracted convention." This move to carry forward the fight on the two-thirds rule though in a modified form was disowned, however, by Senator C. C. Dill of Washington and other originators of the first project which Gov. Roosevelt repudiated.

This disavowal of Roosevelt responsibility for the committee's modified two-thirds rule was reiterated later by James A. Farley, Roosevelt's manager in chief, who stated: "The rules committee's action was spontaneous, and neither the governor nor myself was consulted in the matter in any way. The governor's position was clearly stated in his message this morning and he authorized me to say that he has not changed in any way."

Nominate; Then the Platform.

With numerous minority reports from all committees impending, there will be still more fighting today over the program presented by the rules committee which proposes the adoption of the platform after the nomination of the ticket.

The purpose of this reversal of the usual procedure is to cut the platform, particularly the liquor plank, to fit the candidate instead of picking a candidate who can stand on the platform. The Roosevelt leaders who dominated the rules committee decided upon this order of business with a view to putting through without much opposition the kind of a liquor plank Roosevelt wants. They calculate that after the nomination there will be a general disposition to let the nominee have his way in regard to the platform.

Farley Shows Misgiving.

Misgivings as to whether Roosevelt can be nominated under the two-thirds rule cropped out of the Roosevelt high command itself. Two hours after the adjournment of the convention session Mr. Farley, Roosevelt's manager, stormed into the headquarters of a midwestern delegation chairman, complaining bitterly of the New York governor's repudiation of the project to scrap the two-thirds rule. Mr. Farley proclaimed it as not at all unlikely that in so doing Gov. Roosevelt had "let himself in for a trimming" in the fight for the nomination.

This was Mr. Farley behind the scenes. Out in front of the footlights, addressing the newspaper reporters, he continued to predict the nomination of Roosevelt on the first ballot, whether under two-thirds rule or majority rule.

Hague Counts Votes.

Encouraged by this first licking administered to the Roosevelt high command, the anti-Roosevelt leaders were more confident than ever last night of their power to prevent the New York governor from obtaining the 770 votes constituting two-thirds of the convention and to force a compromise on another nominee.

Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City, Al Smith's floor manager, asserted that Roosevelt will never receive more than 642 votes, 128 short of the necessary two-thirds. He relies upon the following 512 votes to "stop Roosevelt" permanently:

California	44	Instructed for Garner
Connecticut	16	Unit rule—Smith
Illinois	50	Traylor
Indiana	22	Uninstructed
Maryland	16	Instructed for Ritchie
Massachusetts	36	Instructed for Smith
Missouri	36	Instructed for Reed
New Jersey	32	Smith
New York	65	Voted for two-thirds rule
Ohio	52	Instructed for White
Oklahoma	22	Instructed for Murray
Pennsylvania	34	Instructed for Smith
Rhode Island	10	Unit rule—Smith
Texas	46	Instructed for Garner
Virginia	24	Instructed for Byrd
Canal Zone	2	Unit rule—Smith
Dist. of Columbia	2	Probably for Ritchie
Total	512

Gov. Roosevelt's surrender to superior numbers in the fight over the rule was made known to the convention in the following telegram Mr. Farley received from the governor and immediately made public:

"This is no time for petty strife and momentary advantage. That truth becomes the more apparent when an honest difference of judgment is exaggerated by the opposition press into grave internal dissension. It is to avoid such an impression that I send you this message.

Would Avoid Conflict.

"The need of the nation—the need of the world—in these distressing days requires avoidance of personal animosities and discussion of procedure and calls for concentration and attention on principles and leadership.

"With this in mind I have been giving much thought to the subject of adopting a majority nomination rule instead of the two-thirds rule used by previous conventions.

"I believe and always have believed that the two-thirds rule should no longer be adopted. It is undemocratic.

"Nevertheless, it is true that the issue was not raised until after the delegates to the convention had been selected, and I decline to permit either myself or my friends to be open to the accusation of poor sportsmanship or to the use of methods which could be called, even falsely, those of a steam roller.

Asks Friends to End Fight.

"I am accordingly asking my friends in Chicago to cease their activities to secure the adoption of the majority nominating rule at the opening of the permanent organization.

"I ask this of those delegates who are honoring me with their support and who number many more than a majority. I trust, however, that the committee on rules may recommend some rule to insure against the catastrophe of a deadlock or a prolonged balloting.

"If thereby a greater emphasis on harmony and the more important objectives of the convention is attained, we will have best served our party and our nation.

"At the same time I ask all delegates to accept this in the spirit in which this is written and to do all possible to avoid a protracted convention and recriminations on any subject.

"Will you be good enough to communicate this to the committee on rules which, I understand, meets tonight?"

Counter Attack by Hague.

Mayor Hague promptly took advantage of Gov. Roosevelt's retreat from Moscow to point a moral. He said it incidentally illustrated most comprehensively the governor's lack of sincerity, his vacillation, and propensity to sacrifice principle for expediency.

"With the sanction of Gov. Roosevelt the fight to abrogate the two-thirds rule was started," said Mr. Hague. "If it was right in principle at this particular time to institute this attempt to substitute the majority rule the governor never should have abandoned the fight.

"Mr. Roosevelt can never stay put for even the shortest length of time. It is also an effective illustration of Mr. Roosevelt's lack of sincerity in connection even with matters where principles or fundamental loyalties are involved.

Mr. Hague then reviewed the history of the incident, relating how the move to abolish the two-thirds rule was conceived by Senators Huey Long, the Louisiana Kingfish, and Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, both flaming radicals, who "sold" the idea to Mr. Farley, who "sold" the idea to Gov. Roosevelt. He also described the governor's ill fated personal appeal to the North Carolina delegation to stand with him to abrogate the rule.

"Now the governor," Mayor Hague continued, "leaves Field Marshal Farley in the lurch. He puts on a tail to his statement which leaves open the road to abandonment of the two-thirds rule, provided it leads ultimately to the nomination of Franklin D. Roosevelt.

"It is important to remember that Gov. Roosevelt did not turn about face until his lieutenants in Chicago had informed him that there was not the remotest possibility of his obtaining enough votes in the convention to bring about the abrogation of the two-thirds rule.

"The people of the country have had two enlightening demonstrations of Gov. Roosevelt's lack of loyalty:

"1. To a personal promise made to Mr. Shouse, and

"2. To a principle which he originated and approved, only to abandon for reasons of political expediency."

Although Mr. Farley takes the position in private that he could have won the fight to abolish the two-thirds rule had not Gov. Roosevelt "run out on him" it appears that a poll of the delegations disclosed the move doomed to defeat. There were 532 delegates for abrogation and 622 against it. This fact was communicated to Gov. Roosevelt early yesterday morning, though possibly not by Mr. Farley.

What jolted the Roosevelt managers the hardest was the rebellious attitude displayed by a number of delegations which had come to the convention to support Roosevelt for the nomination and had gone along with the Roosevelt managers on their program until the question of abolishing the two-thirds rule bobbed up.

Personal Plea Falls.

As mentioned by Mayor Hague, Gov. Roosevelt himself had talked with the North Carolina delegation Sunday night by long distance telephone, pleading with them to stand by him in the fight. He failed to move the delegation, which thereafter voted by an overwhelming majority in favor of retention of the rule. Both before and after the calling off of the fight, however, the leaders of the North Carolina delegation said its 26 votes would be cast for Roosevelt for the nomination.

Another severe blow for the Roosevelt program was struck by the solid Roosevelt delegation from Alabama, which voted 16 to 6½ for retention of the rule. The Alabamians were gratified at the subsequent dropping of the fight by the governor, taking credit to themselves for helping to effect this result, and said they would vote for Roosevelt so long as his name is before the convention.

Iowa Also Fights Abrogation.

Iowa, although a unit of 26 votes for Roosevelt for the nomination, voted 14½ to 11 for retention of the rule, thereby contributing 26 votes under the unit rule to the opposition to abrogation of the rule.

The Michigan delegation with 38 votes for Roosevelt nevertheless was unwilling to go farther than consenting to suspension of the two-thirds rule after five ballots.

Mississippi, a majority of whose delegates favor the nomination of Roosevelt, exhibited opposition to abrogation of the rule. Maine, another Roosevelt delegation, voted 4 to 8 against abrogation. Indiana, which is 20 to 10 for the nomination of Roosevelt, was 10 to 20 against changing the rule.

These and other defections in the ranks of their supporters gave the Roosevelt managers pause and a final summary disclosed that they were nearly 100 short of a majority for abrogation of the rule. Their advice to Gov. Roosevelt to abandon the fight quickly followed. It was in the midst of Temporary Chairman Barkley's keynote speech that word of the Roosevelt surrender in the rules fight reached the floor of the convention. It created a sensation and sent Roosevelt and anti-Roosevelt leaders into huddles canvassing the bearing of the development on the nomination fight.

McAdoo Praises Decision.

William G. McAdoo, who is a Garner leader, said he thought Gov. Roosevelt had "made a wise decision." Senator Walsh of Montana, Roosevelt candidate for permanent chairman, welcomed the action because it would "dispose of a very controversial subject," and added he thought Gov. Roosevelt "a good sport."

"This is evidence that Roosevelt believes he has enough votes to win the nomination under the two-thirds rule," said V. Y. Dallman, Roosevelt delegate from Illinois.

Mayor Cermak said he thought "Roosevelt must have counted noses and found he couldn't put it over."

Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City, floor manager for Al Smith, said it was only what he had expected, as he knew the Roosevelt crowd was letting itself in for a licking if it persisted in its course.

Senator Huey Long, the Louisiana Kingfish, said it would mean the nomination of Roosevelt on the third ballot instead of the first.

"Governor Roosevelt's telegram is a first class repudiation of his leaders who are here speaking for him," said Daniel J. Cohalan, New York member of the rules committee. "While they may call it a withdrawal from the fight over the rule, it really is a confession of defeat."

Carter Glass Is Suspicious.

Senator Carter Glass of Virginia was inclined to be suspicious.

"I think it is meaningless," he said. "It says not to undertake abrogation of the two-thirds rule at the opening of the convention, which is a clear implication that they may try it later."

Jouett Shouse attributed Roosevelt's step to the revolt stirred by the move to do away with the two-thirds rule at the eleventh hour before the balloting on the nomination.

"The Roosevelt forces," he said, "attempted in an improper way and at an improper time to upset a century-old tradition of the Democratic party. Without defense or criticism of the two-thirds rule, if it is to be abrogated it must be done in an orderly manner, not on the very eve of the nomination, and must carry with it abolition of the unit rule. The two actions, if taken, must be synonymous to insure the opportunity for a fair nomination by a clear majority.

"It was unbelievable that this mistaken attempt should be made. It is gratifying that the response to the effort by the convention delegates was such as to cause its abandonment."

COMMITTEEMEN VOTE TO RETAIN TWO-THIRDS RULE

Agree It Shall Be Dropped After Six Ballots.

Kingfish Reads Message.

"This rule was written in to protect slavery," said Long. "It should have been abolished when slavery was abolished. Gov. Roosevelt's position makes no difference with me. But I want to say a word about that telegram. It doesn't mean what we have been led to believe. I'm going to take the liberty of reading you this telegram," which he did.

"I can well understand how he takes this position," said the Kingfish when he had concluded the document. "By the way, the Republican press is leading the fight against abrogation of the two-thirds rule, particularly THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. But they nominate their candidates by a majority vote.

"I most heartily indorse the last part of that telegram, the part where he says this convention should avoid prolonged balloting and deadlocks. We don't want another Madison Square Garden fiasco, with a hundred and some—just what was that number of ballots, Mr. Chairman? It's not right to let half a dozen Republican states keep us from nominating a man who can win."

Goes Back to Harding Régime.

Then the Kingfish, with no apparent bearing on his theme, launched into a denunciation of the Harding administration—"the frauds of the Harding administration, reeking with fraud"—and informed the audience that an attorney general was put out of office and Secretary Fall sent to the penitentiary.

The Kingfish closed his eruption with a motion to table Mr. Pomerene's amendment resolution, which automatically precluded further debate. When Mr. Pomerene politely stated that fair play decreed that he have an opportunity to speak there was a loud rumbling of opposition to Long's discourtesy and the Kingfish withdrew his motion to table the amendment.

Pomerene Backs Rule.

"I insist upon proof that we can get a better candidate with the majority rule than we can with the two-thirds rule," said Mr. Pomerene. "No one in this assembly admires Gov. Roosevelt more than I do and I am here to pledge my support to any man who may be nominated. But if Gov. Roosevelt were my own brother, I'd say, 'Play the game, brother.' You can't afford to change this rule on the eve of the convention, even after the convention has started. We are more interested in the election of a Democrat than in the nomination of any one candidate."

Long leaped to the floor demanding to know whether this convention had any rules.

"No, but the two-thirds rule is the common law of the party," replied Mr. Pomerene.

"It's the constitution of the party," shouted Thomas D. Lyons of Oklahoma. "It can't be changed except by the state conventions of the party."

"How can we change this rule after standing by it for 100 years?" Mr. Pomerene resumed.

"We stood by slavery 100 years," Long bellowed. Mr. Pomerene merely gazed at the Kingfish, seemingly in pity.

Challenge from Missourian.

Former Congressman D. E. Decker of Missouri said he didn't presume to speak for the south, but he challenged the Kingfish's right to speak for the south.

"Andrew Jackson was thought pretty well of in the south and he wrote that rule 100 years ago, not to protect slavery, but to protect the welfare of the party and of the United States," said Mr. Decker. "I've lived in Missouri all my life and I know how Missouri stands. I'm very much older than you (to Kingfish Long), but I look much younger. I've got my conscience clear. We didn't change the rule for Champ Clark when he had a majority. You can't change the constitution without a two-thirds majority. Daniel Webster called this limitation a protection against a bare majority, a dangerous thing.

"What we want is a square deal for Alfalfa Bill, or anybody else who might have a chance. Alfalfa Bill may have a chance. He wouldn't be called an aristocrat down in Loosiannie."

Argument with Chairman.

The altercation between the chair and Mr. Cohalan came after the placing of a five minute limitation on debate by a vote of the committee. Mr. Cohalan said he made the most of the time allotted by the chairman, to which Mr. Kremer objected, declaring the members had voted to limit debate.

"But I saw you give that man an hour before the limitation was voted upon," said Mr. Cohalan.

"The other side talked as long as they wanted to," said Mr. Kremer. "The chair will not tolerate criticism of his conduct in this meeting."

"I have as much right as you to my own interpretation," Mr. Cohalan shot back. He ended his remarks with a veiled threat that Tammany would not support Roosevelt in the event of his nomination by a majority vote. "Give us a chance to help him carry the state of New York," he said.

Mr. Pomerene's amendment will be taken to the floor of the convention.

ADMIRAL BYRD DEMANDS FIGHT ON U. S. SPENDING

Majority Must Organize, Explorer Declares.

Organization of "the one hundred million inarticulate citizens of this country" into a legion to combat national bankruptcy threatened by pork barrell raids on the national treasury and governmental extravagance was urged last night by Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd. He spoke before the national conference of the Young Democratic clubs of America in the Hotel La Salle.

Rear Admiral Byrd charged organized minorities with misuse of the constitution to raid the treasury. He held the constitution was not written to permit confiscation, by taxes, of a citizen's property through governmental extravagance or abuse. The constitution did not anticipate, he said, that 120,000,000 people would support 18,000,000 public officeholders, who should not number more than 3,000,000.

No Part in Politics.

In sounding his challenge against waste, Rear Admiral Byrd said he knows nothing about politics and takes no part in politics, but was persuaded to speak because of the crisis reached in the depression.

"The time has come," he said, "for the inarticulate majority in this country to express itself and force its will. I am one of the hundred million inarticulate citizens. Every one of these citizens, who gets an opportunity to express himself, should do so straight from the shoulder. I am going to be blunt.

"The great majority of the citizens of this country have chosen from indifference or carelessness to allow a selfish minority to impose its will upon them. Our enemies are ourselves and the organized minorities. The majority must organize to prevent complete national bankruptcy caused by raids on our treasury by organized minorities, and from pork barrels and wild extravagance on the part of national, state and city governments.

Majority Must Act Now.

"The minority misuse the constitution to raid the treasury. Let the majority use it to enjoy the freedom and cut ourselves from the chains that bind us. The majority must and will organize to fight for sanity in these things and throw up bulwarks against the avalanche that is leading us to bankruptcy."

The nominee of the Democratic party, Rear Admiral Byrd said, must fight fearlessly against treasury raiding minorities and waste of public funds. The nominee should put the country above the party in a crisis worse than war, he affirmed.

"The inarticulate hundred million must form themselves into a loyal legion to kill the selfishness that is leading the chaos, to end that we may engage in the pursuit of happiness and taste freedom," he said. "This can, will and must be done.

"This great majority bears the burden of our country. Its aroused voice is invincible. Minorities can organize and have organized to harm the country. The majority can organize and will organize to protect itself and save the country just as it does when a war comes. This emergency may be worse than war.

The plea for economy was sustained by other speakers. President Robert M. Hutchins of the University of Chicago charged the Republican party with stupidity, selfishness, and rapacity. He attacked the straddle plank on prohibition.

Mayor Cermak seconded the economy proposal, expressing the hope the Democratic party would take a strong stand on the question. Tyre C. Taylor, president of the conference, and Floyd M. Kinlay, president of the Chicago group, also pleaded for a stand against waste.

WOMAN OFFICIAL, A 'DRIPPING DRY,' FAVORS REPEAL

Miss Martha Byrne, a member of the New York delegation, is register of deeds of New York county. She explained yesterday why she favored the repeal of the prohibition law.

"In my contact with penal institutions I learned the harm prohibition is doing to the youth of the country," Miss Byrne said. "I've been a dripping dry ever since. By that I mean I'm dry myself, but I believe in repeal.

"This convention is not going to pussyfoot on the liquor question. There will be no straddling."

DEMAND PLANK FOR 2.75% BEER AND PROSPERITY

Wets Want Quick Action by Congress.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

A movement for a dripping wet plank to put the Democratic party on record for immediate modification of the Volstead act to legalize 2.75 beer, and favoring repeal of the 18th amendment as well as the submission of the repeal question to the states, appeared to be making headway last night among members of the resolutions committe, which prepares the platform.

It presages a battle in the committee, and perhaps a fight on the convention floor, the issue being the degree of wetness of the liquor plank.

Wet Conference Held.

With a group of midwest states—Michigan, Iowa, Wisconsin and Illinois—as its nucleus, a group of wet members of the resolutions committee held a conference early in the evening and decided to battle for a party policy espousing repeal and a quick change on Volsteadism.

Eleven states were represented in the conference, Connecticut, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Ohio, Michigan, Illinois and Wisconsin.

The wets reported that when they appeared in the resolutions committee, after the conference, they were greeted with open arms by the other delegates, some of them from the traditional dry belt. Senator David I. Walsh of Massachusetts, one of the wet spokesmen, declared after the resolutions committee quit work that 20 members of the 55 are lined up, with prospects of more in sight today.

"We were joined by Iowa, Vermont, New Hampshire, Florida, Louisiana, the Canal Zone, Colorado, the Virgin Islands, and Alaska," said Senator David I. Walsh of Massachusetts. "There is reason to believe that this so-called wet minority group will actually become the majority group on the committee."

The wet advocates argued that quick modification of the Volstead law by congressional action legalizing 2.75 beer would reduce unemployment, get income for the government which is now diverted into the pockets of bootleggers and racketeers, and promote temperance and law observance

Use Michael Igoe's Plank.

The plank which Michael L. Igoe of Illinois submitted Saturday was taken as the basis of the wet plank. The Igoe plank was trimmed in text without changing its content, as follows, the two final paragraphs [No. 5] being alternatives on which no decision has been reached:

"1. We favor the repeal of the eighteenth amendment.

"2. We demand that the congress immediately propose such repeal to conventions in the states.

"3. We favor immediate modification of the Volstead act legalizing the manufacture and sale of beer and other beverages of such alcoholic content as is permissible under the constitution.

"4. We urge that the Democratic party coöperate in the enactment of such measures by the several states as will actually promote temperance, effectively abolish the saloon and bring the liquor traffic itself under complete state supervision and control.

"5. We declare in favor of a reservation accompanying the repeal which will retain federal power to protect states which prohibit the sale of liquor against illegal importation, or

"5. We favor the exercise by the federal government of its power to protect states which prohibit the sale of liquor against importation of such liquor."

Second Conference Held.

Later a second conference of wets was held in the rooms of Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore, at which Senator Walsh was elected spokesman. The senator reported 19 resolutions members were represented—Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Illinois, Iowa, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Wisconsin, Alaska, Hawaii and the Philippines. New York and Vermont had proxies. Another session is to be held today.

"You can see from this the contest is close in the committee," said Senator Walsh. "Four or five others have indicated they may line up with us. One can infer from the size of the states represented and the number of delegates they have that a favorable vote may be rolled up on a convention roll call."

Full Committee Meets.

The full resolution committee now officially created by the convention, held a brief session. It kept the organization set up last week, when it met informally and unofficially. Gilbert M. Hitchcock of Nebraska, former Wilson floor leader in the senate, was made chairman. The subcommittee of nine, which has been writing the platform, with A. Mitchell Palmer, former attorney general, as chief penman, was retained.

The subcommittee of nine platform writers will meet this morning. It expresses a hope that it will be able to turn the platform in to the full committee by 8 o'clock tonight. The pending battle over prohibition forestalls prospects of a report being ready to the convention before tomorrow. The committee, however, has plenty of time to fight out the liquor battle leisurely, for the rules committee, switching from traditional custom, has given the resolutions the last place on the agenda, coming after the nominations.

Prohibition and farm relief were the only planks on which the sub-group of nine had not acted last night. It agreed on an unemployment plank, patterned on the principles of the Wagner relief bill, recently passed by the senate. It is in general terms and it dwells upon federal loans to states, and on public construction when in the public interest as a measure of relief employment.

Most of the work of the subcommittee was in the polishing of the rough draft as published in THE TRIBUNE yesterday.

Sub Group Rather Dry.

The preponderance of Washington big wigs on the sub group of nine plank planers led the wets to a suspicion that the liquor plank the group might send out would be less wet than

HOOSIER DELEGATION ADOPTS A STRATEGY OF WATCH AND WAIT

Hoosier statesmen are playing a game of watchful waiting at the Democratic national convention.

PAUL McNUTT.

The delegation has gone on record on only one major issue before the convention, and that was in support of Jouett Shouse for permanent chairman. This is in opposition to the wishes of the Roosevelt leaders, but Tom Taggart, national committeeman for Indiana, declared that he had pledged his support to Shouse months ago and simply was keeping his word.

No vote has been taken in the Indiana caucuses on candidates, but reports have it that Roosevelt will poll some 20 of the 30 Hoosier votes on the first ballot. The Indiana Democrats were gratified yesterday when the resolutions committee called for a copy of their state convention plank on prohibition. It stood for repeal of the 18th amendment.

The Indiana delegates took no action on the two-thirds rule, which left them without having made any enemies yesterday when Gov. Roosevelt telegraphed instructions to give up the battle for abrogation of the rule.

Reports that the Hoosiers were holding back their decision on candidates because of a movement to put Paul V. McNutt, Democratic candidate for governor of Indiana, on the national ticket were emphatically denied by Mr. McNutt.

Frank M. McHale of Logansport was elected chairman of the delegation at the first caucus of the Hoosiers. Mr. Taggart and Mrs. Samuel B. Ralston were reëlected to the national committee.

the body of the delegates. Hence the movement to increase its moisture content.

The Roosevelt forces dominate the nine carpenters, six to three, but the Roosevelt men are divided over the degree of wetness that should be given the prohibition plank.

So to take time by the forelock, the wets began to organize for the fray, in case the plank sent to the full committee by the nine draftsmen does not come up to their specifications.

Agree on Submission.

Party chieftains for the last ten days have been in practical agreement that the plank will at least call for submission to the states by congress of an amendment to repeal the 18th amendment.

The subcommittee has been particularly studying the Indiana Democratic state plank. This is almost the image of the Bingham plank for submission of repeal which the Republican national convention voted down. In turn the Bingham plank was modeled upon the submission of repeal plank which the Hoosier Republicans adopted June 9 in bone dry Indiana, which even prohibits whisky as a medicine. In the developments of the month centering upon the two national conventions the Indiana action is regarded as having contributed the most momentum at the most auspicious time.

"I am for a plank coming out in favor of repeal as well as for submission of repeal," said Delegate Pollard of Iowa. "I am also for immediate modification of the Volstead act. In the recent primaries, Louis Murphy of Dubuque, who won the Democratic nomination for senator, swept the state on the wet issue, and our state ticket is predominantly wet. We are for a plank that will aid the Democrats in carrying Iowa in November."

Count 800 Wet Votes.

The wet leaders declared that a count of noses shows 800 delegates for a straight plank to make the party favor repeal as well as submission of repeal, and they hold that the delegate body is much wetter than the subcommittee of nine plank framers, which includes four senators, an ex-senator, and three members of the Wilson cabinet.

An unofficial poll of the Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, Michigan delegations is reported to indicate that the delegations by large majorities will stand by the proposal to include modification of the Volstead act in the plank. Propulsion was given the movement in the open hearing last week by William Green, head of the American Federation of Labor, who argued that the legalized 2.75 beer would be "an electric spark for industry."

Teachers Present Plank.

A proposed education plank was presented from a committee from the American Federation of Teachers, now in annual convention at the Knickerbocker hotel. In part, it said:

"The Democratic party, as a friend and supporter of public education and especially state control of education, pledges itself to mtaintain and, where possible, to improve educational standards during the period of depression. While wholeheartedly supporting educational economy in the sense of eliminating educational waste and duplication, it is opposed to a suicidal form of educational economy which expresses itself in the form of curtailment of necessary educational activity, in teacher salary reduction, in the increase in the size of classes or in the shortening of the school year."

Seek Six Hour Day Plank.

Proposed labor planks were sent in by the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, signed by A. C. Whitney, president. They called for the six hour day with no reduction in wages, retirement insurance laws, old age pensions, and abolition of child labor in industry.

"The Democratic party," it says, "should pledge its support to the six hour day and the shorter work week in government service and in private industry in order to realize the great social advantages wrought by machine efficiency of our modern industrial system. This is necessary to relieve technological unemployment and to establish our unemployed and part time employed as effective purchasers, as well as to compensate the workers for their increased productive efficiency. Adoption of shorter hours of work should not be accompanied by reductions in pay."

N. Y. VOTES, 67 TO 26½, FOR SHOUSE FOR CHAIRMAN

Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt suffered another setback last night when the New York state delegation, by a vote of 67 to 26½, indorsed Jouett Shouse for permanent chairman of the convention. Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana is the governor's choice for that important post.

Former Gov. Alfred E. Smith led the opposition to Senator Walsh. He addressed the state delegates and at one point asserted that the Roosevelt supporters were attempting to control the convention. State Chairman Farley, manager of the Roosevelt campaign, did not attend the meeting, but cast an absentee vote for Walsh.

Max D. Steuer, New York lawyer and member of the committee on permanent organization, which selects the permanent chairman, requested the delegation to authorise him to vote for Shouse. He said that Shouse's selection had been a commonly understood matter. Mayor Walker, John McCooey, John W. Davis, John F. Curry, George W. Olvany, and Samuel Untermyer voted for Shouse.

REPEAL IS VOTED BY DELEGATES OF WISCONSIN

Growing sentiment among the Wisconsin delegates quartered at the Palmer house indicated yesterday that a number are undergoing a change of heart concerning abrogation of the two-thirds rule for nomination. The delegation voted on Sunday night to support abrogation as urged by the Roosevelt managers, but many now feel that the rule should be retained.

Whether this feeling was manifest because the Roosevelt supporters now feel certain that their candidate can be nominated on the first ballot without abrogation could not be ascertained. Wisconsin is pledged to the New York governor and also to support Thomas J. Walsh of Montana for permanent chairman.

At a morning caucus in their headquarters, the delegates discussed a prohibition plank and finally adopted this sentence: "Resolved, That the prohibition laws be repealed." The vote was 24 to 2, according to Congressman Michael L. Reilly of Fond du Lac, one of the wet leaders.

Wisconsin's choice for Vice President still hangs in the balance. Some delegates favor Melvin A. Traylor, the Chicago banker, while others are for Speaker Garner. There was talk yesterday favorable to the candidacy of Bruce A. Campbell of East St. Louis, who is backed by the Illinois delegation.

IOWA DELEGATES VOTE TO RETAIN TWO-THIRDS RULE

Iowa's delegation to the Democratic convention voted against abrogation of the two-thirds nominating rule in caucus yesterday. After a great deal of debate a motion to support abrogation, in accordance with the proposal made by Franklin D. Roosevelt's backers, was defeated by a vote of 11 to 14.

GEN. M. A. TINLEY.

The Hawkeyes are instructed for Roosevelt and also for a favorite son for Vice President, Maj. Gen. Mathew A. Tinley of Council Bluffs, commander of the 34th division, National Guard.

Prohibition was not discussed during the caucus, but the Iowans, according to Frank O'Connor of Dubuque, chairman, are "as wet as any one could wish." The state convention held in Davenport adopted a plank calling for repeal of the dry laws and the immediate modification of the Volstead act to permit beer of a satisfactory alcoholic content.

LONG WINS FIGHT FOR SEATS WITH NOISY ORATORY

Credentials Group Acts on Contests.

Wrangling until nearly 3 o'clock this morning, members of the credentials committee finally decided, by a vote of 34 to 17, to seat Huey P. Long, the Louisiana Kingfish, and his delegation in the 20 seats allotted to the Pelican state. A motion to seat each of the contesting delegations from Louisiana, giving one-half vote to each delegate, lost by a close vote.

The decision of the committee was no sooner announced than several members declared that they would draft a minority report favoring the seating of the delegation led by former Gov. Jared Y. Sanders. This report will be presented to the convention today, and the fight to oust the Kingfish will be conducted on the floor of the convention.

Minnesota "Regulars" Win.

The committee also voted, 36 to 15, to uphold the action of the national committee in seating the "regular" delegations from Minnesota and Porto Rico. Indications were that the fight on these delegations will not be carried to the floor of the convention.

A suggestion was made to the committee that it draft a resolution warning Senator Long never again to pick a delegation through the state central committee, which he controls. Action on this suggestion was reserved.

The same scenes of disorder which have characterized Senator Long's every appearance at Democratic committee meetings were repeated at the credentials committee meeting as the Kingfish and his delegation attempted the second hurdle in their fight for permanent seats at the convention.

Appeal from National Committee.

The junior senator from Louisiana and his delegation were placed on the temporary roll call of the convention by the national committee last week. The contesting delegation, led by former Gov. Sanders, appealed from that ruling to the credentials committee which was created yesterday.

A noisy crowd packed the floor and galleries of the Gold room of the Congress hotel to listen to the delegation contests which provided so much excitement and amusement last week. Chairman John S. Hurley of New Hampshire threatened to clear the room of all but committee members on several occasions after the crowd had mingled applause and jeers during the arguments of the Kingfish and his opponents.

Storm Breaks Early.

The tumult started immediately after Chairman Hurley rapped for order. Thomas A. Edwards, committee member from Louisiana and a Long henchman, moved to accept the report of the national committee without argument on either side.

A storm broke loose at this motion. Cries of "None of that Hooey here!" broke from the galleries. Edwards hastily withdrew his motion and the arguments were on. Chairman Hurley declared that the debaters were not to indulge in personalities.

Howard Warren of Shreveport, La., and former Gov. Sanders presented the arguments in behalf of the contesting delegates. They declared that the Long delegation had been chosen by the state central committee in defiance of a precedent which had been set more than fifty years ago. The Sanders delegation was chosen by a general convention.

Says Long Broke Precedent.

"Since the days of carpet bag rule, the Democrats of Louisiana have chosen delegates to the national conventions by the convention method," said Warren. "That precedent was broken in 1928 by the then Gov. Long in order that he might handpick the delegates.

"Gov. Long was warned at the convention in Houston in 1928 not to try the same trick again. Nevertheless, he vetoed a law providing for the election of delegates by convention and is here before you again with a delegation selected through the same method which was branded unethical in 1928."

Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley of New Orleans and Senator Long presented the case of the Long delegation.

Not "Henchman" of Long.

"I am not a henchman of Senator Long's," Mayor Walmsley began. A roar of laughter arose. The mayor waxed indignant.

"I tried to keep him from being elected senator," he roared, shaking his finger at the Kingfish, who looked displeased.

Applause and boos greeted Senator Long's appearance on the platform. The chairman banged his gavel and yelled for order.

"That's all right, Mr. Chairman," said the Kingfish kindly. "I'm used to that."

But a moment later, when a yell of "No!" came from the rear of the hall in answer to a rhetorical question from the speaker, he turned to the chairman heatedly and said:

"Now I can give you a man to take care of that fellow, Mr. Chairman."

Repeats Arm Waving Speech.

Senator Long then repeated his arm waving speech of last week in which he asserted that he alone represented the people of Louisiana and was therefore entitled to pick the delegation.

The Minnesota delegation contest between a group led by Elnar Holdale and one headed by Neil Cronin was more subdued than last week, when the arguments were enlivened by a number of cries of "You're a liar!" and "You're a dirty crook!"

Delegates Get Wets' Plank; Drys Ask for Enforcement

More than a thousand of the 1,150 delegates to the Democratic national convention assembled for the opening session at the Stadium yesterday with printed copies of the suggested repeal plank of the allied wet forces in hand.

Taking their cue from THE TRIBUNE, which gave Republican delegates the text of the Hoover prohibition plank at their convention last week, the Crusaders, young men's liberal organization, distributed a proposed repeal plank to the Democrats.

The distribution was made by Marshall Sterns Jr. and George C. Homan, both of New York, members of the Harvard university battalion of the Crusaders. They reported that only the Minnesota delegation of 24 and the Idaho delegation of 8 refused to accept copies of the plank.

Text of Proposal.

The statement, drafted by the United Repeal council and sponsored by such potent liberals as Pierre S. du Pont, Mrs. Charles H. Sabin, Maj. Henry Curran and others, read as follows:

"The United Repeal council was organized under the following resolution:

"Evil times have fallen upon the nation and have driven our people to look beyond the courses of their private lives and uses to the policies of our national government.

"An overwhelming majority of our people have come to see that national prohibition breeds disrespect for law, supports organized crime, corrupts public officials, increases unemployment, foments class discontent and sectional hatred, and has resulted in imposing insufferable taxes on our overburdened citizens.

"Refusal by members of congress to propose repeal creates a condition intolerable to our people.

"In order to return to the several states the right to govern their own affairs, it is necessary that all forces desiring liberty unite to repeal of the 18th amendment.

"Now, therefore, be it resolved that we, the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, Women's Organization for Prohibition Reform, the Crusaders, Voluntary Committee of Lawyers, and American Hotel association, do hereby associate ourselves as the United Repeal council for the purpose of obtaining from each party a plank urging congress to submit to the several states for ratification in state conventions, in accordance with article V. of the constitution, a resolution for an amendment repealing the 18th amendment and pledging the best efforts of the party to accomplishment of such ratification."

The repeal plank, identical with that submitted to the Republican convention, is as follows:

"We, the representatives of the Democratic party, believe the 18th amendment should be repealed. We therefore urge congress immediately to propose an amendment to the constitution repealing the 18th amendment to become effective when ratified by conventions of the people in three-fourths of the states, and we pledge the best efforts of our party to the accomplishment of such ratification."

DRYS GIVE WARNING

The Illinois Conference of Associations Supporting the Eighteenth Amendment, comprising all the state and national dry groups, met in executive session yesterday and adopted a resolution warning the Democratic party to "put the country before party" and stand fast for prohibition.

The resolution was immediately forwarded to the Democratic resolutions committee and read before that committee by Charles R. Jones, executive vice president of the American Business Men's Prohibition foundation.

The resolution adopted is as follows:

"For the Democrats to propose repeal or so called resubmission of national prohibition at this time would be to invite disorder, lengthen the depression, and encourage criminality of every kind.

"The great masses of loyal, patriotic, intelligent citizens demand the continued support of the constitution, including the eighteenth amendment.

"Repeal would at once affect the purchasing power of the nation, which is now at its lowest ebb, and divert already scanty funds from legitimate industries that employ far greater numbers than the brewing and distilling rackets ever employed in their palmiest days.

"Every cent that would be taken by a relegalized liquor traffic would be diverted from the tills of legitimate business; hence benefit would suffer to the extent that booze prospered.

"Put Country First."

"The present unrest and unemployment would be intensified many fold by restored booze. We therefore urged the delegates to put country before party."

Among the organizations sponsoring the statement were the Women's Christian Temperance union, Anti-Saloon league, Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers, Saracens, Salvation Army, Woman's National Committee for Law Enforcement, law observance committee of the Illinois Federation of Women's clubs, National Christian forum, International Order Good Templars, Illinois Council of Churches and Chicago Committee of One Hundred.

G. O. P. BATTLE FOR VOTES TO START JULY 5TH

Washington, D. C., June 27.—[Special.]—The Republican fight to beat the man nominated for the presidency by the Democrats this week will be launched at Chicago immediately after the Fourth of July, Chairman Everett Sanders of the Republican national committee announced today.

Although administration officials made no official comment on the progress of the Democratic convention, the general opinion expressed was that Roosevelt will be nominated. Harry New, former postmaster general, following a call at the White House, said that "if Roosevelt is nominated Hoover will be elected."

Chairman Sanders announced today that Robert E. Lucas, executive chairman of the Republican national committee, had been named as his assistant and would make his headquarters at Chicago.

PARADE SEEKS PEACE PLANK IN PARTY PLATFORM

Jane Addams Leads Caravan in Loop.

BY KATHERINE KELLEY.

As army airplanes, participants in the military show, zoomed overhead, proponents of international disarmament paraded through the loop at noon yesterday, their eyes fixed in the direction of the Chicago Stadium and a peace plank in the Democratic platform.

JEANNETTE RANKIN.

There was one plane, however, that competed with the war birds—a plane bearing the word "Peace" in great white letters and piloted by Miss Joan Thomas of 2017 Touhy avenue, a worker at Hull house. While the peace plane raced through the skies Miss Jane Addams, founder of Hull house and co-winner of the Nobel peace prize, led the parade of 105 motor cars decorated with peace slogans, balloons, and pastel pennants, through the noonday crowds west on Monroe street. The parade circled past the Stadium, to impress the Democratic delegates waiting for the initial session of the convention, and then disbanded.

Youngsters Wave Banners.

With Miss Addams rode Miss Mary McDowell, head resident of University of Chicago settlement. Behind came a carload of settlement youngsters waving a banner, "No more war for our sakes." Fifty students from colleges and universities throughout the country followed. In the balance of the parade were delegates from peace organizations from South Dakota to Georgia and from California to Connecticut. It was the second "peace plank parade" to form in Grant park and move across the city upon the convention center as a demonstration of "unorganized public opinion regarding peace."

Shortly before the parade left Grant park Miss Addams received a telegram from Amelia Earhart Putman, sent from Rye, N. Y.

"I deeply regret not being able to take part in the demonstrations for world peace at this time," the message stated. "I am much interested in efforts to abolish war and obtain effective action for political parties in that direction."

Meeting After Parade.

Two hundred peace followers gathered at the Chicago Woman's club immediately after the parade for a luncheon given by the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom. Miss Addams presided.

Miss Jeannette Rankin of Montana, first congresswoman, urged all present to write to the Democratic presidential nominee "and ask him if he saw the parade and what he thought of it, then a few weeks later to write again and ask what he expected to do about peace."

KEYNOTER URGES DEMOCRATS TO SUBMIT REPEAL

Rips Republican "Regime of Mismanagement."

Senator Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky, temporary chairman of the Democratic national convention, delivered the keynote address before the delegates at the opening session of the convention yesterday in the Stadium.

Senator Barkley urged the convention to favor a vote by the people on repealing the 18th amendment and called upon the nation to turn the Republicans out of office. Describing the Republican plank on prohibition as "a promiscuous agglomeration of scrap lumber," he said the Democrats should recommend passage of a congressional resolution repealing the 18th amendment, to be voted on by state conventions chosen solely for that purpose.

Barkley denounced the Republicans and President Hoover for the "exorbitant and indefensible rates" of the Smoot-Hawley tariff act and urged the Democrats to "lift tariff making above the sordid processes of logrollers and back scratchers."

Rips G. O. P. Farm Policy.

He excoriated the administration's farm policy and said the Democrats would undertake "to remove from the shoulders of agriculture a portion of the unnatural burden which it bears because others have been able to shift it there through special legislation in their own behalf."

Paying his respects to the Hoover administration, the keynoter recalled that the President "and his Republican congress took charge of the government" on March 4, 1929, and added:

"But every prediction, every promise, every assurance made by them to obtain votes has turned to ashes in their hands, and every pretense has been exposed in all its naked affectation.

"Agriculture has continued its collapse. Industry has languished beyond any previous record. Credit has been restricted until finance and productive enterprise are frightened and stagnant and there is constantly marching a greater army of unemployed men and women in search of honest toil than has ever been experienced by this or any other nation."

"10 Years of Mismanagement."

"There is nothing wrong with this republic," Senator Barkley added, "except that it has been mismanaged, exploited and demoralized for more than a decade by a leadership incomparably shortsighted and bereft of true statesmanship, incapable of understanding and dealing with fundamental causes, and incapable even now in the midst of its fearful havoc of understanding the extent of its own mischief."

Declaring that "we must by a major operation remove from the body of our nation and the world, both of which are sick and dejected, the dead flesh and decayed bones resulting from 12 years of Republican quackery," Barkley continued:

"We must apply to the hopeful but misused patient the recuperative processes of a Democracy which for a century and a half has responded to the emergencies which have always beset us at the end of every period of Republican control which lasted long enough for its virus to take effect."

Discusses Prohibition.

Senator Barkley took up the subject of prohibition in these words:

"Any discussion of the functions and problems of the state and national governments is incomplete without some reference to the policy involved in the 18th amendment to the constitution. While the discussion of this subject frequently arouses prejudice which clouds the soundness of judgment and the wisdom of decision, nevertheless at this time it deserves that calm and earnest thought which may lead the American people to its wise and permanent solution.

"It serves no useful purpose now to quarrel over the process by which it was incorporated in the constitution. It was adopted by the same constitutional methods which were followed in the adoption of all other amendments to that instrument. So long as it is a part of that constitution no citizen of the republic has a legal or moral right to violate it.

The Right of Change.

"But any American in the exercise of the functions of citizenship has the same right to advocate the change or repeal of any law which he has to advocate its enactment in the first instance. While those who have supported this amendment have been and are actuated by the loftiest motives of service to society, we must admit that neither the amendment nor the laws made for its enforcement are beyond the power or right of revision, amendment or abrogation by the will of the people.

"It is manifest, therefore, that a reexpression of the will of the American people on this great question is advisable and justified in the most direct and effective manner possible under the constitution.

Let the People Decide.

"This government is the people's government. The constitution is their constitution.

"From its foundation the Democratic party has believed in the people, has extended their power and relied on the soundness of their ultimate conclusions. It is not afraid to risk their judgment now upon a great moral and economic problem which affects their homes and their national welfare.

"Two weeks ago in this place the Republican party promulgated what it called a 'plank' on the subject of the 18th amendment. But it is not a plank. It is a promiscuous agglomeration of scrap lumber. At one point is proclaims its opposition to the repeal of this amendment and at another it announces its support of its repeal in states where the people want it repealed or made inapplicable. It defies definition.

Constitution Supreme Law.

"Whatever may be the divergent views of men and women on the merits or demerits of the eighteenth amendment as a national policy, it is inconceivable that this or any other part of the constitution of the United States should apply to only a part and not the whole of the American nation. That great instrument declares that 'this constitution and the laws made in pursuance thereof shall be the supreme law of the land.'

"But it cannot be the supreme law of the land if it can be abrogated by the people of a part of the land while remaining in force over the rest of them. Such a conception destroys the very nature and structure of the constitution, for if it can be made thus to qualify one of its provisions it may be made to qualify all of them. This would be the end of the constitution itself.

Urges Party Not to Straddle.

"Under these circumstances this convention owes it to the people of the nation to make its declaration upon this subject clear, understandable and unequivocal. There is no reason why the people should be deceived and deluded. There is no reason why a political declaration should look in every direction and see nothing.

"In order, therefore, to obtain the present will of the American people on this subject of universal controversy, this convention should in the platform here to be adopted recommend the passage by congress of a resolution repealing the eighteenth amendment and its submission to the people of the states through conventions whose delegates shall be chosen upon this issue alone.

For a Definite Decision.

"If the people are to pass again upon this question, let them pass upon it in such bald, naked and unequivocal terms as to make their decision intelligent and certain.

"If their verdict shall be in favor of retaining the eighteenth amendment in the constitution, let every true citizen of the nation accept the decision and abide by it in letter and in spirit.

"If the verdict shall be for the repeal of the amendment, then let every branch of the national government exercise all the powers they possess to protect the states in the observance and enforcement of the laws which they shall enact to control, regulate or prohibit the traffic in intoxicating liquors."

Reviews Republican Régime.

Senator Barkley went back to 1920 and reviewed the intervening years of Republican leadership.

The Harding administration he described as "the darkest chapter of public betrayal in the history of this or any nation."

On President Coolidge and Secretary Mellon he heaped the blame for "an orgy of speculation and inflation that had no foundation in real values." He declared:

"Stocks were manipulated, prices pyramided, then split up, then distributed among innocent people under the opiate of fabulous financial hopes built up by the most gigantic campaign of official ballyhooing ever witnessed in the annals of American history."

Under President Coolidge, Barkley said, expenses of the national government increased "more than $650,000,000." He gave credit to the present Democratic house for reducing President Hoover's requests for appropriations "by more than $100,000,000."

The senator promised that the Democrats would "abolish every useless office, every unnecessary bureau and commission which has grown by what it fed on until the total has become an insufferable weight upon all the activities and resources of the American people."

"They will never be abolished by those who now operate them," he said. "A new Hercules must clean out these Augean stables."

In dealing with the tariff, Barkley proposed that the Democrats inaugurate friendly international trade conferences with a view to reopening normal trade channels in the world and make the tariff commission a fact finding body for congress.

For agriculture's relief he advocated enactment of laws setting up cooperative agencies through which the farmer may work out his own problems over a period of years, taking the government out of the "dubious adventure of speculation" in farm problems. He urged installation at the head of the department of agriculture a secretary who has "some knowledge of the subject and some sympathy for those who struggle with it."

For Revision of Bank Law.

For strengthening the banking structure, Senator Barkley proposed giving consideration to revision of the federal reserve act to insure more direct contact with commercial banks and borrowers.

Speaking of unemployment, he ridiculed "fine spun" distinctions between local and national responsibility and deplored "sophomoric" dispute over the identity of first aid" while the nation's "defenders or their dependents suffer from want or neglect."

Society, he said, must find a way by which members displaced by invention and advances may sustain themselves and their families in comfort and self-respect.

He advocated consideration of the five day week or the six hour day as a possible solution of employment problems growing out of the country's industrial advances.

"Nation Turns to Democrats."

In conclusion Senator Barkley said: "In all the generations of American history the people in every great crisis have turned to the Democratic party to lead them from the wilderness of disappointment and disaster.

"It will be so in 1932 when the principles here announced and the leaders here chosen will in the name of a people betrayed, bewildered and misled redeem for them a land despoiled and made barren by those who know not the ways of wisdom or of Providence.

"Such a nation, such a people need only the glimmer of a new hope, the inspiration of a new goal, the stimulus of a new battle cry, and the marching orders of a new commander.

"That hope, that goal, that battle cry, that commander we shall present to them ere we shall adjourn this convention. He will be the choice no less of farm than of city dwellers. He will be experienced and tested no less in national than in state affairs. When chosen to the high station whereunto we shall nominate him we pledge his dedication to the service of the whole nation without regard to class or creed or section."

CONFER IN CONVENTION

OLD SEN. PEGLER STRIKES A BLOW AGIN EVERYTHING

Has to Give Up Repeal; It's Too Popular.

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

In a startling address to the Democratic national convention in the opening session at the Chicago Stadium yesterday, United States Senator Westbrook Pegler declared himself against the repeal of the eighteenth amendment because, he said, too many of the delegates and candidates were in favor of repeal. The venerable statesman said he had formerly advocated repeal but had had the courage to change his mind when Al Smith, Albert C. Ritchie, Franklin D. Roosevelt and others indorsed the idea.

"I changed my mind," he hollered, "because I realise that I can be wrong, but I know they can't be right."

Commander Evangeline Booth of the Salvation Army hopped up on a chair and began to cheer as the Honorable Pegler announced his new policy. Wheeling sharply about, the distinguished solon yelled, "Why don't you sit down and behave yourself? I'm against them, but don't get any idea that I am for you. I'm against everybody. I am a Democrat."

There's Too Much Harmony.

Senator Pegler produced a profound sensation among the Democrats when he warned them that the party was sacrificing its old character for harmony and victory. If prohibition were abolished, he insisted, there would be nothing left for the people to get sore about now that the Hoover administration has made good its promise of a chicken in every pot and solved the great labor problem of the past by the efficient process of abolishing practically all the jobs in the country.

"I am not a dry," the senator said with a faint hiccup, "and I am not a prohibitionist, but I protest against the revolting and degrading spectacle of the so-called leaders of our party defiling the name of Democrat by their shameless and indictimous conduct in coming before this convention all for repeal. I warn this convention that unless there is a reawakening of the Democratic spirit before November, we may win this election and bring down upon our party all the blame for everything that happens in the next four years.

A Dangerous Dilemma.

"You will not forget that I worked for Smith at the last convention because I realized that he was the one man in the party who positively could not win. The Republicans have had to take the responsibility for the last four years and now we have come to another crisis and what do we hear? We hear our speakers sounding off up here on this platform about the grand and glorious Democratic party. This is dangerous propaganda. As a matter of fact, the Democratic party is not so hot, and I warn you against the folly of deceiving the people who may then elect our man and blame us for the next four years.

"It is contrary to Democratic tradition to elect a Democratic President. With a few exceptions, our party has elected Republican Presidents and this issue of repeal is a matter on which every Democrat in the country should take a firm stand, provided, however, that no two of them take the same stand. United, we take the fall."

Boos Cheer Him Up.

There were prolonged sneers and boos from the floor as Hon. Pegler thundered this warning and he stepped back slightly from the microphones to thumb his nose and stick out his tongue at the throng.

"That is encouraging," he said. "It shows that the spirit of the Democratic party is not yet dead.

"I attended," he went on, "a meeting at which Miss Evangeline Booth told of little babies who had been brought to their graves by liquor. I am opposed to that, too. I do not believe little babies ought to drink whisky. They do not appreciate it and they cannot stand their liquor. They yell and throw things and fall on their faces. But, remember, the Republicans were in power when this was going on, and if they had been any good at all they would have produced some mild nutritive form of baby bourbon to be poured on oatmeal and make strong, healthy Americans of the babies.

Gin Before Age of 4.

"But even in this mild form I would never give it to them straight, except for colds or maybe one old-fashioned before dinner, after the age of 4. Below 4 years gin would do just as well, because they haven't any taste, and one thing is just as good as another f.. them just so they get a boot out of it.

"However, I am not sentimental about babies and don't believe in coddling them, and I think you can spoil them if you break out the quart and throw a slug into them every time they haul off and let fly a little sneeze. If you did that some of them would be taking pepper or sneeze powder and yelling for a jolt every ten minutes.

"Now," said the Hon. Pegler, steadying himself with his arms around a stanchion, "what about our domestic trade? The stock market is dead and our party is content to let it die without offering a substitute.

How to Save the Party.

"If there is one thing that will save our party from victory and four years of trouble, it would be a plank calling for government crap games and the teaching of the fundamentals of craps, including all the odds, and when to take down or shoot it all, in our public schools by instructors selected from the enlisted ranks of the army.

"Craps is a fairly respectable game, as we all know, and likely to be more or less honest at times, whereas the stock market was conducted strictly with readers and tops, and our citizens never got an even break. We must remember that our citizens are very dumb and that if we come out for government craps they will yell murder and give our candidate a terrible bouncing around in our glorious solemn referendum next fall.

"Beware!" Hon. Pegler screamed. "The sinister spectre of harmony is twisting its slimy trail through the warp and woof—the woof, woof, woof, cock-a-doodle-doo, what does the kitty say, the kitty says pfst, meow!"

Consternation followed the picturesque old statesman's address as he was removed in a state of collapse. Three hypos were administered during the night.

MICHIGAN GROUP SEES VICTORY FOR REPEAL PLANK

Michigan's leading representatives in the Democratic national convention last night were predicting victory in their fight to get a plank in the party platform advocating straight repeal of the 18th amendment.

William A. Comstock, Michigan's member of the resolutions committee and a member of the subcommittee of nine which is drawing up a tentative platform, declared that he would fight to the last for the repeal plank and that, if necessary, he would submit a minority report and take the fight to the floor of the convention. He had the full support of the Michigan delegation in his stand.

Mr. Comstock is likely to emerge from this convention as the party's choice for the Democratic nomination for governor of Michigan. A conference of party leaders last night was urging Mr. Comstock to make the race, promising him financial and united political support.

The action of Gov. Roosevelt in giving up his fight for abrogation of the two-thirds nominating rule removed a sharp issue from the consideration of the Michigan delegation. The Wolverines had been split on the issue, but a majority yesterday brought about the election to the rules committee of James H. Baker of Adrian after Mr. Baker had announced his intention to advocate before the committee the abrogation of the two-thirds rule after five ballots of the convention had failed to nominate a candidate by that time.

Horatio J. Abbott of Ann Arbor and Miss Evelyn Mershon of Saginaw were reëlected to the national committee at the caucus.

Democratic Convention Notes

"One Eyed" Connelly, the celebrated gate crasher, wormed through police lines into the Stadium yesterday with the aid of an "Active Press" badge. Ten feet inside the doorway Chief of Detectives Schoemaker collared him, but the old sporting character slipped from his grasp with placating words and scurried through the crowds, his single orb twinkling beneath the battered bill of a checked cap. "Business in the east" kept him from the Republican convention, he said.

Ex-Champion Gene Tunney sat quietly with the Connecticut delegation.

The Tammany chieftains were in close formation in the New York section. Al Smith sat in front of "Jimmy" Walker and the dapper little mayor was flanked by stern-faced Boss Curry of Manhattan and the beaming veteran, John H. McCooey of Brooklyn.

Cornelius Vanderbilt Jr., who has been acting as a sort of unofficial doorkeeper at Roosevelt headquarters, turned a deaf ear when Lieut. Gov. Lehman of New York reached for the doorknob and said quietly, "I'm Mr. Lehman." "Never heard of you," replied Vanderbilt, blocking the way, which he continued to do until several friends came to Mr. Lehman's aid.

Among Illinois Republicans who silently watched the Democratic show from boxes were Lieut. Gov. Sterling, Senator Richard J. Barr of Joliet, and National Committeewoman Bertha Baur. "I'm listening to all the speeches so I'll know how to answer them in the fall," said Mrs. Baur.

The Republicans used a man shorthand reporter to take their proceedings. The Democrats employ a personable young woman who manipulates a soundless teletype just behind the chairman's rostrum.

Police Lieutenant Guy Brooks of Mayor Cermak's office stood at the delegates' entrance and passed out courtesy cards. Delegates were given bronze and gold cards and alternates paper cards with gold engraving.

Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, president of the board of health, is in charge of a corps of fifteen physicians and eleven nurses who are ready to give first aid treatment in two emergency wards established in the Stadium.

City Prosecutor Michael Rosinia was halted at the door because he lacked his delegate's card. He showed his badge, entitling him to a seat in the Illinois section, but was not admitted until after a lengthy interview with the chief doorkeeper.

Col. W. E. Freiday of South Orange, N. J., a delegate, was praising the honesty of Chicagoans yesterday after a wallet containing $290 in cash, which he left in a house phone booth at the Morrison hotel, had been returned to him at the Blackstone hotel by Thomas Sadler, manager of the Morrison.

Edward N. Hurley, the Chicagoan who brought both national conventions here and had charge of seat distribution, found himself temporarily barred from the Stadium yesterday. He had his badge, but no accompanying entrance ticket, so a doorman stopped him until a newspaper reporter established his identity.

Josephus Daniels, Wilson's secretary of the navy, was seen to leave the convention floor yesterday when the wet demonstration began during the keynote address. Observers suggested it was merely a coincidence.

Democrats' Stand on Economy Called Vital in Vote Getting

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

Probably no pledge of the Democrats will have more influence in the November election than their promise on tax reduction. The rough draft of an economy plank, put out yesterday, is not highly impressive. It indicates less concern for the taxpayers than did the Republican plank on the same subject.

The Democratic plank, as now worded, reads: "We favor economy in national government by abolishing useless commissions and offices, retaining only necessary functions, consolidating departments and bureaus, and thus increase efficiency and eliminate extravagance."

In comparison the Republican plank says: "We urge prompt and drastic reduction of public expenditures, and resistance to every appropriation not demonstrably necessary to the performance of essential functions of government, national and local."

Protests in Past Cited.

The Democratic platforms of the past contained vehement protests—as did the speech of the Democratic keynoter yesterday—against the extravagance and waste of the Republicans. In these times it is appropriate that the Democrats make a definite and specific pledge to reduce the cost of government. The promise of the Republicans has been given and it is a very easy matter to write a stronger plank and still be within the realm of accomplishment.

In 1928 the Democratic platform said that the party "stands for efficiency and economy in the administration of public affairs" and in the 1924 platform asserted that "the burdens of taxation have become unbearable." For the year ending June 30, 1924, congress appropriated an aggregate of four billion twenty million; and for the year ending next Thursday congress appropriated four billion 674 million. What the deficit for this year will be has not been estimated, but for the first 11 months of this fiscal year the expenditures were four billion 455 million and the income was only one billion 770 million, which leaves a deficit for 11 months of two billion 684 million.

The Democrats cannot be charged with that responsibility because the Republicans were in power; but for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1933, the Democrats have a majority in the house. The proposed appropriations are above four billion.

Compare Spending in Past.

But there is comparatively little difference between the Democrats and Republicans in the spending of money. Each spends as much in normal times as it deems discreet to levy in taxes. Let that be demonstrated.

The last Democratic national administration was that of Woodrow Wilson, who had four years of normal times before the war. For the ordinary operations of the government he spent all the income, and a little more. The previous four years were those of William H. Taft. He, too, spent all he got in, and a little more. Wilson spent $185,000,000 more in his four years than Taft, but that should be expected as attributable to the growth in population. Official figures compare the ordinary receipts and expenditures for fiscal years ending June 30 of the two administrations as follows:

	Woodrow Wilson
Year.	Receipts.	expenditures.
1913	$734,111,230	$734,511,963
1914	734,073,167	735,081,431
1915	697,916,827	760,586,892
1916	782,534,548	734,056,202
Totals	$2,959,235,772	$2,954,236,288

	William Howard Taft
Year.	Receipts.	expenditures.
1917	$809,601,904	$809,281,534
1918	701,835,911	961,504,615
1919	675,511,715	695,817,665
1920	604,330,498	695,743,985
Totals	$2,874,374,228	$3,768,443,798

It will be noticed that Wilson spent $15,000,000 more than he got in in the four years, while Taft overstepped his income by $94,000,000. Those figures also indicate what the ordinary taxpayer is thinking about what he urges that expenditures of the federal government be gotten back to the expense before the war, where business, trade and commerce are now traveling. But the ordinary expenses of the government are three times as much as in pre-war days.

New Revenue Bill Passed.

A new revenue bill has been passed which it is estimated [in Washington] will increase federal taxes one billion 118¼ million. The big fight at present over appropriations centers on two bills, one by Speaker John N. Garner of the house, a Democratic candidate for the presidency, and the other by Senator Robert F. Wagner of New York, another Democrat. Each of these "relief" bills calls for the approximate appropriation of two billion 300 million, and and the treasury department has estimated that either will unbalance the budget to the probable extent of one billion 300 million.

It is under these conditions that the Democratic chieftains are attempting to write a plank on economy in Chicago for presentation to the convention today or tomorrow. There is little of a constructive or convincing nature—with one exception—which the framers of the economy plank can copy from the previous platforms of the party. In the 1924 platform the Democrats suggested an executive budget, which Gov. Albert Ritchie, candidate for the presidency, is now urging upon the party leaders at the Congress hotel.

KEYNOTE GIVES WOMEN EQUALITY IN PARTY ARENA

Feminine Campaigners in the Spotlight.

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES HERRICK.

Democratic women aren't so dumb. Ever since the Republican convention closed they've gone about boasting how much better their men folks were going to treat them at their convention. Stealing a trick from the Republican men, the Democratic women have heaped so many pre-convention bouquets on their men for their fifty-fifty treatment of feminine political colleagues that the men, now the convention is here, have got to come through 100 per cent on the fifty-fifty equation.

MRS. GEORGE BASS

So yesterday Keynoter Barkley, in all his 10,000 words, never once fenced off the women of his party in any flowery bower of isolation. It was always "men and women," "men and women." And he used the same businesslike, matter of fact tone for the word "women" as for the word "men."

It was his keynote to the Democratic women. Whether or not it will be the convention keynote to the Democratic women remains, of course, to be seen.

It remains to be seen, too, whether the women really relish a fight more than flowers. It seems to me they do.

Women Campaigners Busy.

For yesterday, over at the Stadium, the light of attention was not focused on the ladies who are married to the men who want to be President, but it was turned full force on the ladies who are campaigning for the men who want to be President.

Mrs. George Bass made more news than Anna Roosevelt Dall, daughter of the man whose candidacy Mrs. Bass is boosting. Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank was a lot busier than Mrs. Melvin Traylor. Mrs. Henry Moskowitz was in an incessant swirl of conferences, while Mrs. Al Smith had leisure no end.

Lavinia Engle, Maryland legislator, who's so good looking that I'm sure she won't mind being called bright, was far more important, as she rounded up women delegates to "Win With Ritchie," than Mrs. David Winebrenner, Gov. Ritchie's cousin.

Wilson's Widow Present.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, widow of a President, sat in a box far across the room; Mrs. Stella Hamlin, Louisiana committeewoman who's fighting Huey P. (Call me Kingfish) Long, sat upon the platform. Mrs. Thomas Marshall, widow of a Vice President, was obscured in the crowd; Mrs. Isabella Greenway, Arizona committeewoman, whose name is going to be put into nomination for the vice presidency, sat in the councils of the mighty.

That Greenway boom is merely a gesture, however. Nobody knows it better than Mrs. Greenway.

Mrs. Greenway made her debut with the girlhood friend who later became Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt; she was bridesmaid at the Roosevelt wedding. That makes her a close personal friend of Gov. Roosevelt; not, however, his political choice for a running mate should he win the nomination.

Somewhat naively, Mrs. Nellie T. Bush, Arizona delegate, who will nominate Mrs. Greenway, said yesterday:

"The Roosevelt headquarters are in sympathy, but I don't know who their first choice is."

"Handwriting on the Wall."

As a gesture, however, many of the women regard it as helpful handwriting on the wall of politics for many men to read.

"I don't think, frankly, that she'll get the job," said ex-Gov. Nellie Taylor Ross of Wyoming, vice chairman of the national committee, "but there will be a time when such a woman will occupy such a job."

Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, Mrs. Ross' predecessor as vice chairman, was also disposed to regard the nomination as a not stupid strategy on the part of women to accustom men to what is, she feels, surely coming some day.

More than a gesture, however, will be the speeches which several women will make as they second the nomination of presidential candidates. They will be in dead earnest.

Will Second Nomination.

Mrs. Carroll Miller, Pennsylvania's committeewoman, will second the nomination of Roosevelt. She did the same thing for Smith four years ago. This change in camps caused her to face a lot of questions.

"Surely, I still admire Mr. Smith tremendously," she declared yesterday. "But he can't be elected and Gov. Roosevelt can; that's why I'm nominating him."

Congresswoman Mary T. Norton of New Jersey will second Smith's nomination. There will be other women, too, for other candidates.

For, as Keynoter Barkley told us all yesterday, the Democratic party is made up of "men and women."

"FULL CIGARET CASE" IS SLOGAN OF DELEGATES

Women at Convention Eat and Smoke Well.

BY COUSIN EVE.

Same nice weather, same Stadium, same flags, bunting, and what not. Same wildly cheerful bursts of organ, same crashing band. "Happy Days Are Here Again," a storm of applause from hundreds of delegates. But are they? "Maryland, My Maryland" and there comes Ritchie, with quick, energetic step, a fine figure of a man, in white flannels and blue coat. Same vacant seats.

Immense crowds of women bear down on the Stadium. They have been breakfasting at the Stevens ballroom, and breakfasting well. Red raspberries, Rocky Fords, bacon, eggs, doughnuts, coffee. The delegates have eaten and also smoked well. Their slogan may not be the full dinner pail, bu it sure will be the full cigaret case. It is a happy thought, this 9:30 breakfast, with all kinds of adroit keynoting from Mrs. Conkey, chairman of the occasion; Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis, and Mrs. George Bass.

"Mrs. Alfalfa Bill" Popular.

Mrs. "Alfalfa" Bill Murray, a tall, stately woman in black, sits at the speakers' table. The wife of the governor of Oklahoma, I met her Sunday while taking a course of teas and garden parties on the north shore. Somehow I fell for her; she is so simple, yet so grand. Lots of people in the east would like to see her in the White House. And so that night she saw to it that I met Alfalfa Bill. And that in itself was a wild experience. I thought if the governor of Oklahoma were my property I would rush him to the nearest beauty shoppe and have him trimmed and garnished for the fray. Emitting clouds of smoke from a long cigar, it struck me Alfalfa Bill was a very live volcano.

Acquires "Vote Wet" Button.

First happening at the convention. Daphne Field Kelley pinned a "Vote Wet" button on me. And then I boxed myself, took out bird glasses, and gloated over all the nice fresh Democrats.

In clean linen suits and panamas they huddled under their state pennant, and the first man I noticed was Gov. Murray, looking like Beau Brummel in a pale striped suit—he certainly was as elegant a candidate for the presidency as any, in the strong sunny light of the Stadium. Soon a lot of girls came round selling programs, pamphlets, and things; in white pique and pinafores they did look sweet. Peggums Hambleton, Betty Field, Paula Wilms, and scores of others.

And then the boxes began to fill. Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Dunham had a large party, the Nelson Barnes, Mrs. Ralph James, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Schwarz. Way over on the platform was Mrs. "Bordie" Harriman. In black and white figured suit, with black waistcoat, she sits divinely, and has the grand manner. Her sympathies are deeply involved in the Democratic race, as three of the candidates are dear old friends. Mrs. Hugh Wallace, also in black, deep mourning for her husband, former ambassador to France, sits beside her.

Al Smith Arrives.

Mrs. Longworth, in mauve linen, has a detached, aloof air. Just below in the press area, Gene Tunney sits absorbing atmosphere, and "Neely" Vanderbilt comes and goes. He seems to be doorkeeper and live an active life. But hark! the organ spills "Baby Mine," and amidst uproarious excitement Al Smith cuddles in with the New Yorkers, in purest white. Near by me I discovered Bernard Rogers, Albert Lasker, Edith Cummings in a box with a very startling big black hat on, and some sleek looking men she must have inported from New York. We don't grow them so glossy in our middle west! There are the Tracy Drakes in the mezzanine, Mrs. Nevins Johnson with Mrs. W. A. Yager, Mrs. Edward Carry in a box with Mrs. Edmund Russell, Mrs. Chalmers boxed with Mrs. Ernest Graham, Mrs. Albert Sprague in demure brown. And then among the delegates, Richard Crane III. of Westover, Va., rooting for Gov. Byrd. In white linen, he wears a Byrd badge big as a blue plate. But his choicest possession is a tall daughter, Bruce. Really dazzling. Such a brunette, midnight hair and eyes, gleaming teeth and rather the odd oriental beauty that marked Constance Coolidge Atherton in days of old.

Charles R. Crane stepped quietly into the Stadium in time for Evangeline Booth's prayer. This seemed to be a keynoting prayer, with lots of hints to Divine providence what'd best be done about it all. Fact was, it was quite a long, long prayer.

Lawrence Houghteling was an early comer; also Mrs. James Cox, wife of a former Ohio governor; Mr. and Mrs. Harold Amberg in a box, and Melvin Traylor, and that charming person, Mrs. William Mitchell, in brown with a crisp white organdie flower.

The band plays "Dixie" with the usual uproarious results. I have often wondered why people cut up so over it.

Down there under Arizonia's banner I discover a red hat, and under it the beautiful Mrs. Greenway. I use the adjective advisedly. She struck me as a divine delegate. Also immensely clever, they say. Back of me sits Mrs. Sabin, Chicago is her old home. I hear a man named Doc Weller reading Thomas Jefferson's first inaugural address. In nasal tones, the grand thoughts and words of the first Democrat do not come across. Mrs. Woodrow Wilson sits cozily with Barney Baruch.

We languish in our seats. Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis appears in pure white, also Miss Gertrude Ely of Philadelphia, pal of Bernard Shaw; Mrs. Ollie James, Miss Elizabeth Howey, Mrs. Yager's guest, both from Washington, and Mrs. George Nichols Jr., with Hunter Marston of New York, she of the hard working "anti-dry" groups.

Personally I think this is a bigger and better convention than the Republican. But I may be wrong.

CONGRESSMEN GIVEN RADIO REPORT OF CHICAGO CONVENTION

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 27.—[Special.]—Special radio facilities were set up at the capitol to bring Senator Alben W. Barkley's keynote speech to congress.

Scores of senators and congressmen heard it through a loud speaker in the big Democratic caucus room on the house side. Others assembled around a receiving set in the office of Speaker John N. Garner [Dem., Tex.].

"We want to give the Republicans a chance to know who the next President will be," said Representative James V. McClintic [Dem., Okla.] in explaining that radio equipment would be continued through the Democratic convention.

CHICAGO GIVES VISITING WOMEN AN IDEAL DAY

Kept Busy at Parties and at Convention.

BY KATHLEEN McLAUGHLIN.

It won't be so bad if all the rest of this convention program goes masculine. For yesterday was ladies' day at the Democratic powwow, and what a slick time they had—all the five hundred. Chicago was en fête for them. The weather man was nice to them. Their political big brothers were gallant, and the parties were grand. In fact, the parties all but submerged the politics, temporarily.

First in time and size of the functions was the pre-convention breakfast at the Stevens hotel, where 3,000 women poured into the grand ballroom when less than 600 had been expected originally. Somehow enough food was produced to serve the throng, and over their orange juice and scrambled eggs and bacon a Garner booster from California chattered vivaciously with a Roosevelt adherent from New York, and a Maryland delegate disputed good naturedly with a friend of Alfalfa Bill Murray, whose wife was there, too.

Cheer Leaders of Party.

Democrats all, they joined in the demonstrations of enthusiasm for such prominent party figures as former Gov. Nellie Taylor Ross of Wyoming, now the major domo of the feminine camp; Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, her immediate predecessor as vice chairman of the national committee; Mrs. George Bass, lately christened "Dean Elizabeth," who, as some one remarked, "created the rôle" all three have played; Ruth Bryan Owen and Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, both nationally known, and others.

Mrs. Elizabeth A. Conkey of Chicago, chairman of the Illinois Democratic women's national convention committee, wielded the gavel and presented the speakers after a brief but warm welcome to the guests. Her summery tailored suit of white Shantung was set off by the scarlet hat crowning her black hair, and bright red costume jewelry. Mrs. Ross was in navy georgette with pearls, Mrs. Owen handsome in black georgette and pearls; Gov. Roosevelt's daughter, Mrs. Curtis Dall, wore a sports frock of yellow and a turquoise hat to add to gayety of the scene.

Cermak Gets Ovation.

Mayor Cermak got an ovation when he was introduced by Mrs. Conkey and stood to deliver the official greeting of this metropolis. He paid his compliments to the women as politicians, and to the forest preserve and the city of Chicago as worthy of their attention.

Mrs. Ross and Mrs. Blair, in individual phraseology but identical philosophy, urged the women to hold the temper of the convention steady by their own coolness, come what may. Former Gov. Ross even added an admonition about rocking the boat, warning the women it is up to them to hold it steady.

Then they all went to the Stadium on the west side—the official 500 and all the rest who had seats anywhere—and listened to another woman, Evangeline Booth, deliver the invocation that officially opened the convocation. Politics held the stage, but only briefly.

Because as soon as the oratory was over the feminine officials and distinguished visitors were ushered to a fleet of buses awaiting them at the door of the Stadium. Immediately they were bowled away to the Hall of Science on the Century of Progress grounds for a trip of inspection and a cup of tea.

Fashion Show Canceled.

A fashion show and tea scheduled for 4 o'clock at the Marshall Field store was canceled because of the press of engagements on the calendars of the visitors, as no other date appeared available.

But the day didn't end even then, for many of the women dashed back to Michigan boulevard to attend another tea, in the newly opened headquarters of the Illinois League of Women Voters at 225 North Michigan avenue.

Miss Marguerite Wells of Minneapolis, chairman of the committee representing the National League of Women Voters before the resolutions committee, and her delegation, including Mrs. Roscoe Anderson of St. Louis and Mrs. William Gold Hibbard of Winnetka, were popular guests at the tea.

STORES REPORT CLEARANCE DRIVE HELPS BUSINESS

Preliminary reports indicate that the efforts to create business through National Clearance week are meeting with success. This enterprise, organized by merchants with the cooperation of the American Legion, aims to clear merchandise from the shelves of retail establishments, thereby resulting in orders for the wholesalers for renewals. In turn the wholesalers are expected to go to the factories for fresh goods, with the result that employment will be increased.

Among reports made to leaders of the enterprise was one from Arch McFaul, sales promotion manager of the Davis company, who said that his company was surprised at the results from the National Clearance week campaign. Sales are better than they have been for a long time, he said.

Fred Meier of the Meier company, 5808 West Chicago avenue, said his organization had received heavy calls for goods as a result of its participation in the campaign. He said his men's sock department had been cleared out.

3 big shots for The Fourth

$10 comes off the price of a grand and glorious lot of Silver Gray Worsteds
They're shot down to $20
two trousers included

Here's where we start some fireworks—with a couple of good old-fashioned "bargain days", for a couple of hundred smart men!

Every one of these keen new Silver Grays carries the famous Bolton weaver's stamp of tested quality. You know you've captured the last word in good taste, with a Bolton worsted in your wardrobe.

And the $10 price-cut is nothing to sneeze at either! It gives you a sweet saving on a suit of clothes that really shows its quality—and then keeps at it all through those extra months of service.

Be sure to see these "big shots" before the Fourth!

Delegates Cheer Barkley Plea for Wet Test.

Rising excitement!

It culminates in a 13 minute demonstration.

The senator's stingers—his sharp, short, driving sentences which excited men can assimilate—fire those men with enthusiasm.

His shout, "Fraud!" when he mentions the Republican prohibition plank brings them to their feet. But he gives his hearers more than quick firing epigrams.

He gives them this 60 word sentence which, long as it is, any bright schoolboy can follow:

In order to obtain the present will of the American people on this subject of universal controversy, this convention should in the platform here to be adopted recommend the passage by congress of a resolution repealing the eighteenth amendment and its submission to the people of the states through conventions whose delegates shall be chosen upon this issue alone.

Delegates Start Marching.

The cry of "fraud," the brief, pithy sentences, and the bold, comprehensive declaration have satisfied the great majority of the convention. Delegates now are marching up and down the aisles. Bands of music lead them—those convenient bands which convention strategists so readily summon for the purpose of instilling pep into the pepless and raising the caloric content of those already well pepped. The pipe organ contributes pep making pieces—"Happy Days," "Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here," "How Dry I Am," and "The Maine Stein Song."

A banner lettered "Win with Litchie" is unfurled. Onlookers in the balconies rise and join in the cheering. Barkley, knowing full well that pounding for order is a pep producer ne'er found wanting, pounds for order. The sound of a gavel composed of wood from forty-eight commonwealths is unheeded by delegates from forty-eight commonwealths until the thirteenth minute has ticked itself away.

Calm Returns to Stadium.

Then composure. The delegates feel that they have vividly affirmed Barkley's best epigram, which runs:

There is no reason why a political delegate should look in every direction and see nothing."

The senator having keynoted to the extent of nearly 12,000 words—and 12,000 means nearly two hours of speaking—now extends mercy.

"A few more words," he says, "and I shall have finished."

In 600 more he does finish, closing thus:

"God of our Fathers, in this hour of the nation's travail, amid broken hearts, blasted hopes, faces that are drawn and feet that are eager for the road to labor and to happiness,

"'Be with us yet,
Lest we forget,
Lest we forget.'"

Second Session at Noon Today.

The demonstration with conviction in it and sincerity propelling it was the most significant event of the first session of a convention which resumes business at noon today.

The rest of the opening session was mostly decorous trimmings along the familiar lines of convention routine—the singing of the national anthem, the utterance of welcoming speeches that everybody took for granted, the vexed demands of chairmen and sergeants at arms and police captains, "the aisles must be cleared," and the bustling of secretaries and parliamentarians and reading clerks and tally clerks and official reporters.

One and all of the lesser platform functionaries were very busy about nothing much and were gazed upon with awe by spectators who at no time filled more than two-thirds of the seats in a hall that has for this occasion nearly 21,000 seats. How many lines of care and importance an American with a tinkling badge on his coat can acquire in the course of the first fifteen minutes of his beloved "publicity." After that nobody notices him—and he slumps.

Evangeline Booth Gives Prayer.

Of the preliminaries the prayer alone was not routine.

Nor is the person who made that prayer a routine person.

She is indeed a personage.

Evangeline Booth, for twenty-eight years commander of the Salvation Army in the United States and its possessions, probably wields more power over the destinies of men than any crowned queen in Christendom. Daughter of the old general who founded the army, her features recall his countenance, and that was eaglelike.

Like him she is tall and slender and, again like him, her bearing is the bearing of perfect composure masking deep feeling. To the compilers of "Who's Who" she does not give her age but she must be, considering the work she has done in the world, in her early fifties. She does not look it. Her golden hair seems untouched with gray and her voice, though worn by much speaking in the open air and in vast halls, is still strong and carries far.

Just before the prayer Mr. Raskob led Miss Booth to the speakers' desk for the ordeal with the photographers. Below her bands were blaring and above her the organ was thundering, and behind her notables were visiting. They meant naught to her. She stood with hands clasped and eyes closed, seeming to be praying.

Once as she stood thus a sweet smile irradiated her ascetic face. It was like the smile of her father and he, irascible though he could be when he thought that the Lord's work was being interrupted, had a smile that disarmed men.

When Evangeline Booth bowed her head to ask heaven's blessing on the convention she addressed her petition to "Almighty God, wonderful councilor, everlasting father, prince of peace, the king of eternity, the measurer of time."

The Measure of a Nation.

She besought the people to remember that great fleets and armies and the wealth of treasuries are not alone the measure of a nation's strength. Its ascendancy in goodness and in truth—that is the true measure, she said, and, amid breathless silence, she made the petitions for guidance:

"Give us, dear heavenly Father, the wisdom to untangle the threads of national problems.

"Touch our poor mortal eyesight with immortal vision.

"Give us to hear new sounds and to feel new sympathies.

"O, rock of ages, grant that our anchorage may be in thee. Grant that if poverty comes we shall not be so poor, if sorrow comes that we shall not be so sad, and if death comes that we shall not be afraid."

Awe enveloped the assemblage. Would you know the beauty of the spell Evangeline Booth created, the serenity and the honest piety she diffused? Then take down tonight your copy of "Adam Bede" and read that second chapter in which George Eliot describes the prayer Dinah Morris made on the village green at Hayslope.

Sings "Star Spangled Banner."

Then "Star Spangled Banner," sung by Mme. Rose Zulaliam, an Armenian from Boston. She was effective—good drama in the wide gesture she released on the closing words—but the audience sang only tentatively. A more difficult national anthem for a multitude successfully to maneuver itself through does not exist.

An easier air followed. Edward N. Hurley, Chicago's champion convention getter, appeared on the platform and the roaring organ flabbergasted him with the strains of "He's a Jolly Good Fellow," and a jolly good fellow as well as great fellow citizen he is. But he had not come to make a speech about that. It was his pleasure, he said, to introduce the mayor of Chicago, adding, "a man who is doing his job well for the community—and no mayor ever faced such problems as he is facing and solving."

Mayor Cermak told the delegates that Chicago greets them "with enthusiasm." His little pause before the words "and with hope," roused laughter. All knew where his heart was.

Frankly he disclosed his sympathies. "I am part of you," he declared. "My whole life's work has been influenced by the philosophy of Jefferson, Jackson, Cleveland, and Wilson." Learned John W. Davis could say no more than that. Truly we have an erudite mayor who must have spent many a studious hour over the writings of Jefferson, Jackson, Cleveland, and Wilson thus to have had them "influence his whole life."

After a few kind words about Chicago's salubrious attractions—from the green girdle of the forest preserve to the charms of the lake shore—Mr. Cermak said:

"The President who is to assume office next March has not yet been named. [Cheers.] The American people are expecting you to name him. They are sickened to the soul of the empty promises and the hypocrisy of those whom they have trusted.

Convention Cheers Mayor.

"But they have not given up hope. They want men to lead them who talk their language, simply and frankly. . . . And if the prayers of a plain, simple man are to be answered, my prayer is that a divine providence guide you in your deliberations." [Prolonged cheering.]

Loudest cheers of all, though, when the mayor became downright specific; when, in short, he said:

"The American people believe that we shall have more respect for the constitution with the 18th amendment out of it. . . . Let it be recorded in history that in this convention America was reborn."

Just then belated Al Smith was hurrying across the hall to his seat in the New York delegation. A scream of delight, coming more from the mezzanine floor and the first balcony than from the delegates' seats, greeted him, but by no glance or gesture of recognition did he enlarge the cheering to the proportions of a "demonstration." Easily he could have done that, for the Massachusetts delegation, pledged to him, rises and gives him three cheers.

Davis Sits Beside Walker.

In the New York delegation John Davis, scholar, diplomat, expounder of the constitution, sat next to Jimmy Walker, the slicker. Politics does truly make strange seat-mates. The mayor of New York was, as always, natty in aspect; in manner he was unobstrusive—and that was a new note. It was not cheered.

In his speech of welcoming and of preliminary keynoting John Raskob said that when he was elected to the chairmanship of the Democratic national committee he knew little of political life and strife and that the chairmanship had been "a splendid education and experience."

One blessed thing it certainly has taught him, if he did not know it before, and that is to be brief. And yet he was not meagre.

I caught off these detached pungencies of his:

"We come to rescue our country from a pit of depression that seems almost bottomless—and we shall all be subjects of charity if this is not soon accomplished.

"We should strip our party of all barnacles and isms.

"Demand, delegates, a platform that will breathe a courageous determination to stamp out rackets and all forms of license that today are undermining the morals and exhausting the financial strength of our nation."

Those were not empty words, for Mr. Raskob came on the last of his three pages of this specific proposal:

I strongly recommend and urge that our platform pledge Democratic members of the United States senate and house of representatives to propose to conventions of the several states, as provided in article V. of the constitution of the United States, a constitutional amendment that will definitely repeal the 18th amendment and definitely vest in the federal government all power necessary to assist and protect the several states against violations of the laws by liquor invasions.

Jefferson Address Read.

The best speech the convention heard yesterday was one made 131 years ago. For, by way of ritual, the program makers pinned a white carnation on Isadore Dockweiler of San Francisco and gave him the text of Thomas Jefferson's first inaugural address, a model of brevity, in which the third President of the United States said momentous things in about 1,500 words.

Mr. Dockweiler read well but his hearers, restless as schoolboys, missed most of the Jeffersonian pearls of wisdom and warning. That was a pity, for many of those pearls still are timely.

For example:

"Sometimes it is said that man cannot be trusted with the government of himself. Can he, then, be trusted with the government of others?"

Economy Advice Recalled.

And this—after Mr. Jefferson had enumerated the blessings bestowed by Providence on our country:

"With all these blessings, what more is necessary to make us a happy and a prosperous people? Still one thing more, fellow citizens—a wise and frugal government which shall restrain men from injuring one another, shall leave them otherwise free to regulate their own pursuits of industry and improvement, and shall not take from the mouth of labor the bread it has earned."

And Jefferson's gospel of peace in a dozen words:

"Peace, commerce and honest friendship with all nations, entangling alliances with none."

Thus spoke the founder of the Democratic party to the party's centennial convention. And the convention chatted!

BARKLEY REPEAL DEMAND PRAISED BY CONGRESSMEN

Democrats Enthusiastic; G. O. P. Is Guarded.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 27.—[Special.]—Following Senator Alben W. Barkley's keynote demand for a repeal plank in the Democratic platform, Representative William A. Sirovich [Dem., N. Y.] announced today that he would press for adoption of his resolution to keep congress in session until legislation proposing repeal of the 18th amendment and wiping out all enforcement acts, has been passed.

WILLIAM A. SIROVICH.

"Why wait for another congress?" asked Mr. Sirovich. "The Republican platform stands for submission of a so-called modification amendment. The Democratic keynoter, once a Chautauqua speaker for the Anti-Saloon league, has come out for repeal. There remains no doubt that the prohibition plank will be modeled after his statement."

Sheppard Withholds Comment.

Congressional reaction to Senator Barkley's keynote declaration was favorable. Democratic praise was fulsome; Republican criticism was guarded. At least one Republican, Senator W. Warren Barbour [N. J.], frankly expressed a preference for the proposed Democratic plank over his own party's declaration. Senator Morris Sheppard [Dem., Tex.], author of the eighteenth amendment, withheld comment until the prohibition plank itself has been drafted.

In announcing he would fight to keep congress in session to settle prohibition legislation problems before the campaign, Mr. Sirovich put more teeth into his battle by introducing a new resolution incorporating his proposal for immediate submission of the question of repeal, but adding a section calling for abolition of the Volstead act and Jones law, pending ratification of the constitutional amendment by the states.

The Sirovich resolution proposes wiping from the statute books all enforcement legislation, pending approval of complete repeal, at which time the laws in force in 1915 governing the manufacture, quality, taxation, license, transportation, sale, and use of liquor would again come into force.

While Senator Barbour made no bones about expressing his preference for the Democratic keynoter's recommendation on prohibition, he said that there was no question that both planks were wet, "and in their major aspect identical."

Senator J. Hamilton Lewis [Dem., Ill.] could not help taking a sly shot at Senator Barkley's aboutface on the prohibition issue.

"I felt that my good friend, Senator Barkley," he said, "made a magnificent presentation, but specifically in having to announce for repeal of the eighteenth amendment was so opposite to the position which he had had to advocate in the past had confused the harmony of the proceedings. Where he had food for thought on many things, he was now for to drink what before was politically an obnoxious beverage."

Rainey Praises Speech.

Representative Henry T. Rainey [Ill.], majority leader of the house, said the keynote speech was especially forceful in pointing out the inconsistencies of the Hoover administration.

Senator Charles L. McNary [Rep., Ore.] said the speech was characteristic of most Democratic keynote declarations, "which usually are confined to criticism."

Senator Joseph T. Robinson [Dem., Ark.], minority leader of the senate, who also is hopeful that the presidential lightning might strike him, pronounced it "a forceful statement of Democratic principles" and certain to appeal to the country.

Senator Robert F. Wagner [Dem., N. Y.] thought it was "a most admirable address.

Senator Marcus A. Coolidge, Massachusetts wet, and Al Smith partisan, in a statement issued today, called upon his fellow Democrats to take a forthright stand on prohibition, giving the voters of the country an opportunity to say whether or not they wish to retain the 18th amendment.

"There must be no pussyfooting on the prohibition question by the Democratic party, if it is to succeed in 1932," Senator Coolidge said. Citing the evils of twelve years under the 18th amendment, he declared his belief that "the people cannot be fooled longer."

SENATORS AWAY FOR CONVENTION PERIL ECONOMY

20 Democrats Congressional Idlers—Moses.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 27.—[Special.]—The absence of more than a score of Democratic senators and some three score of Democratic representatives, who are in Chicago for the convention, threatened to wreck the whole federal economy program and to cast government fiscal affairs into a state of chaos.

There is a tangled mess of legislation in which are jammed the economy and relief bills and no less than nine appropriation bills carrying the great bulk of the billions on which the government is to run during the next fiscal year.

By next Thursday at midnight the appropriation bills must be passed and signed or the government will be without funds.

Not to Appoint Conferees.

Speaker John N. Garner [Dem., Tex.] declared he would not appoint new conferees to struggle with the problem created by the senate's rejection of the economy bill conference report last week. Two of the house conferees, including Chairman John McDuffie [Dem., Ala.], are in Chicago. Unless the senate reconsidered, the speaker declared, the economy bill would have to await the absentees' return.

In a stormy scene on the senate floor, Chairman Wesley L. Jones [Rep., Wash.], of the senate conferees, paved the way for such a reconsideration. He sought, he said, to save the economy bill and prevent a critical tangle of appropriation bills. On a test vote he won a majority support, 29 to 17.

Senator George H. Moses [Rep., N. H.], denounced the Democratic members in Chicago as "congressional idlers," and pointed out that they have brought about a "complete stagnation" of essential legislation.

The senate today refused to cut appropriations. The independent offices supply bill, carrying as its heaviest section the appropriation for the veterans' administration, was increased a net of $2,407,350 before its passage late in the day. Two million of this increase was for the valuation bureau of the interstate commerce commission. A further boost was prevented when a vote of 12 to 33 defeated an effort to restore the amount stricken from the farm board appropriation last week. The bill entered the senate carrying $979,585,556 and left with $981,992,906.

Chicago's Chances for Aid.

Chicago's chances for federal aid depend in large part on the action of the relief bill conferees. Representative Fred A. Britten [Rep., Ill.] said that he hoped the 300 millions for direct relief might be distributed on the basis of need, instead of population. The fight for loans available to pay unpaid city employés, he said, would be continued.

It appeared that Chicago's chances of help were none too good. It is probable that 200 millions of the direct relief fund will be distributed according to population, with only 100 millions to be sent to places of special need. And it was considered improbable that loans to pay back salaries would be authorized.

WED SECRETLY

MRS. HENRY G. TOTZKE.

Benton Harbor, Mich., June 27.—[Special.]—The secret marriage of Miss Jane Filstrup, prominent Benton Harbor society girl and singer who reigned as queen of the ninth annual 1931 southwestern Michigan blossom festival, to Henry Graham Totzke, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Totzke, prominent local pioneer family, was announced today by the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Filstrup. The marriage took place June 15 in Ann Arbor before Judge Ira Payne.

Mr. Totzke is completing his law studies in the Wayne county probate office and at Detroit university. The couple will live at 52 Florence street, Highland Park, Detroit.

2 BANDITS SLUG WEALTHY INDIAN; IS NEAR DEATH

Chief Robert Red Wing, 34 years old, wealthy Cherokee Indian, was slugged, probably fatally, and robbed of $700 by two unidentified bandits last night. His home is in Tulsa, Okla., and he is an actor and president of the Red Wing Film corporation of Hollywood, Cal.

The Indian was found unconscious in his automobile at Sheridan road and Crescent place by Lincoln Park Policemen Arthur Waddington and Frank Breslin. His skull was fractured and his pockets were turned inside out. At the American hospital physicians said he probably would die.

During a few moments of consciousness Chief Red Wing said that he had cashed a check in the Chicago avenue district earlier and that when he parked his car at Sheridan road and Crescent place two men jumped inside, beat him, and robbed him. The Indian is living in Chicago at 4108 Kenmore avenue. He told police that his wife, Princess Marie, a wealthy Osage, is in Hollywood suing him for divorce.

Copeland Asks $100,000 to Send Them Home.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 27.—[Special.]—A resolution appropriating $100,000 to give food, shelter and transportation home to the bonus expeditionary force was introduced in the senate today by Senator Royal S. Copeland [Dem., N. Y.].

W. W. WATERS.

Senator Copeland said he introduced the measure because he considered the presence of the 20,000 men in Washington a menace to the health and welfare of the capital. His resolution was laid on the table temporarily, but will probably be called up tomorrow.

Rift Becomes Wider.

Meanwhile the rift between conservatism and radicalism threatened to split the ranks of the bonus force wide open, with indications that the controversy may become acute enough to divide the force into two separate "armies."

Walter W. Waters, who resigned as national commander of the bonus army last Saturday, said today that his resignation represented an effort on his part to bring to a head the factionalism that has been growing in the ranks of the bonus force.

Several other leaders of the bonus force, he said, have condemned his policies as too peaceful and have advocated more "active" steps in the campaign for payment of the bonus. It was to give the rank and file of the men an opportunity to choose between his conservative attitude and the more radical views that he tendered his resignation, Waters declared.

Six Agitators Arrested.

An outbreak of communism in several of the bonus camps today added to the troubles that are besetting the leaders of the army as it goes into its fifth week of encampment.

Six men were arrested by the "military police" of the veterans today as they were distributing literature issued by the communistic "Ex-Service Men's league," condemning the policies of Waters.

All six of the alleged Reds were taken to the fourth precinct police station, where they were booked for investigation. Later it was reported that two of them had been escorted to the city limits by a delegation of the veterans.

Waters' successor, according to present plans, will be chosen at a national convention of the veterans to be held here July 4.

TEACHER GROUP WIRES PLEA TO U. S. FOR FUNDS

Asks Federal Loans to School Systems.

A petition for federal aid was addressed to congress by 100 delegates to the sixteenth annual convention of the American Federation of Teachers at the Knickerbocker hotel yesterday. The teachers asked that the relief bills now before congress be amended to allow funds to be advanced for the support of school systems, under full state control.

The petition was telegraphed to Washington following the adoption of a resolution introduced by the Chicago Men's Teachers' union, requesting that congress authorize the Reconstruction Finance corporation to lend funds to states for the payment of teachers' salaries in cases where municipalities are unable to get funds on reasonable terms through banks or from the general public.

"Education Faces Crisis."

"American education faces a crisis," the telegram to congress read. "Thirteen thousand localities have been forced to curtail constructive educational activity, or to shorten the school year, or to reduce salaries and lower teaching standards."

The petition also asked for the immediate passage by congress of the Wagner bill, amended to make possible the feeding of thousands of undernourished children. "as the government fed the starving children of other lands." The federation plans to address a similar appeal to President Hoover today.

New York Radical Speaks.

Dr. Abraham A. Lefkowitz of New York City, leader of a radical element, was applauded by the teacher delegates when he said: "Our fight is with the bankers of the country. Democracy is a sham. We have government of money, for money, and by money."

Dr. Henry R. Linville, president of the federation, described the "scandalous indifference of the Illinois legislature, tax authorities, city and other officials, political parties and their economic sponsors and backers" as a virulent disease, to be kept from spreading throughout the nation only by the unionization of teachers.

Resolutions were adopted by the convention for the preservation of teachers' tenure, for unemployment insurance for teachers, in opposition to salary cuts, and for the preservation of academic freedom.

WOMAN SEEKS $300,000 IN SUIT OVER MILK FUND

Miss Naoma McAllister, who is now recovering from an operation in an Elgin hospital, filed the praecipe of a $300,000 suit yesterday in the Circuit court against Mrs. Ernest R. Graham. Mrs. Frank P. Donahue, and Charles S. Tuttle, vice president of the Central Republic Bank and Trust company. According to Attorney J. Raymond Bodkin, who filed the praecipe, Miss McAllister seeks damages because she was forced out of the administration of Chicago Babies' Free Milk fund, of which Mrs. Graham was president. Mr. Tuttle was named because he was treasurer of the fund, and Mrs. Donahue because she obtained the original charter for the organization.

TREASURY DEFICIT OF U. S. FOR 1932 IS 2½ BILLIONS

This Will Bring the Public Debt to 19 Billion.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 27.—[Special.]—The twin factors of diminishing revenues and increasing expenditures will account for a gross increase in the public debt of close to two and a half billions dollars for the 1932 fiscal year, ending Thursday, it was learned today.

Although the final figures for the fiscal year will not be available until later in the week, indications today were that the gross deficit will run just under two billion, nine hundred million dollars, while the net increase in the gross public debt will be about two billion, four hundred and fifty million dollars. This would bring the public debt up from sixteen billion 801 million dollars at the end of the last fiscal year to close to nineteen billion two hundred and fifty-one million dollars.

No Larger Than Anticipated.

In spite of the fact that the gross deficit is expected to be the largest in the nation's peace time history, treasury officials were inclined to see a ray of hope in the fact that the deficit is no larger than had been anticipated by the department's statisticians last February. It was said also that the total expenditures, not counting the extraordinary spendings for the Reconstruction Finance corporation capital and the federal land banks, will run considerably below the estimated expenditures for the fiscal year.

Through June 24 the deficit for the year was two billion eight hundred and forty-two million dollars and the expenditures four billion nine hundred and forty-four million dollars. This figure included 404 millions used for debt retirement, as required by law, 500 millions for capitalizing the finance corporation, and 125 millions used for purchasing federal land bank stocks.

If the extraordinary expenditures totaling 625 millions were subtracted from the total deficit, the figure left would be two billion two hundred and seventeen million dollars. This latter figure is more than 250 millions below the estimated expenditures for the full fiscal year which were worked up last winter.

No Unusual Increases.

If no unusual increases are registered in expenditures, it is possible the treasury may be able to point to a considerable decrease in ordinary expenditures below the estimates. It is apparent, however, that expenditures, including the extraordinary items, will run well above five billion dollars. Receipts will run not much above two billion dollars. The biggest fall-off was in income taxes, where a total drop of in excess of 700 million dollars is anticipated.

The deficit for the fiscal year 1931 was 903 million dollars, of which 440 millions was attributable to sinking fund and other statutory debt retirements.

Increase in Public Debt.

The balance of the deficit, plus an increase of 183 millions in the general fund balance accounted for a new increase in the gross public debt of 618 millions. November estimates showed a deficit for the fiscal year 1932, of two billion 123 million dollars, indicating an increase in the public debt of one billion 711 million dollars.

The estimate of the gross increase in the public debt was boosted 117 million dollars in February. To this also was added 500 millions for the finance corporation and 125 millions for the land banks, bringing the total estimate for debt increase to around two billion four hundred and fifty million dollars.

"Fountain Pen Charlie" Collapses on Street; Dies

Charles Smith, 66 years old, 24 East Illinois street, known in the Chicago avenue district as "Fountain Pen Charlie," collapsed and died, supposedly of heart disease, in front of 240 East Illinois street last night. For years he had sold and repaired fountain pens about the neighborhood, and had acquired the nickname of his vocation.

THOMAS ENDS DANDRUFF GROWS HAIR

Dandruff clogs the hair follicle, causes itchy scalp, falling hair, and keeps new hair from replacing hair which has dropped out. Because there are several types of dandruff, cure-all surface remedies usually do not correct the trouble. One of the most dangerous types of dandruff is caused by a germ deep in the scalp, known as "flask bacilli of Unna."

Thomas treatment attacks this destructive germ by modern therapeutic agents and restores the scalp to a normal healthy condition. When your scalp is once rid of baldness producing germs, hairfall stops, and new hair starts to grow again. Call at a Thomas office today for a free scalp examination and learn for yourself just how Thomas treatment can make your scalp healthy.

LINDBERGH GOES ON STAND; TELLS OF CURTIS HOAX

audience, so tense was its emotions. Col. Lindbergh leaned far out in his chair and prepared to relate the climax of his experiences with Curtis. But Judge Robbins was tired and adjourned court with Col. Lindbergh only half through with his story. The climax will come tomorrow.

Examined by Prosecutor.

Direct examination by Prosecutor Anthony M. Hauck Jr. and questions and answers follow:

Q.—Colonel, will you please state your name? A.—Charles Augustus Lindbergh.

Q.—Where do you live? A.—In East Amwell township, Hunterdon county, New Jersey.

Q.—East Amwell township—what is your address? A.—Hopewell, N. J.

Q.—Are you married? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Where did you live on the first day of March of this year? A.—In East Amwell township.

Q.—Do you have any children, colonel? A.—I did at that time.

Q.—What was its name? A.—Charles Augustus Lindbergh Jr.

Q.—When did you last see your child alive? A.—About the evening—Sunday evening preceding March 1, 1932.

Offers to Stipulate Kidnaping.

Rymon Herr of the defense here interrupted to say:

"If the court please I might save the colonel some trouble if we admit that the child was kidnaped, and we admit this, so it will not be necessary to prove it."

"We want no admissions, sir," retorted Joseph Lanigan, assistant attorney general, who is assisting the prosecution.

By Mr. Hauck: Q.—Colonel, were you home on the evening of March 1, 1932? A.—Yes, I was.

Q.—Tell the court what occurred at your home on March 1, 1932, colonel. A.—At between about 7:30 and 10 o'clock on the evening of March 1, 1932, my son was taken from the nursery of my home.

Q.—About what time did you discover the absence of your child, colonel? A.—About 10 o'clock.

Tells of Meeting Curtis.

Q.—Will you tell the court and jury where the nursery is—on what floor? A.—The nursery is on the second floor corner room.

Q.—On what side? A.—On the southeast side.

Q.—After you found your child was missing did you spread the alarm? A.—I did.

Q.—How old was your child? A.—Twenty months.

Q.—Colonel, do you know John Hughes Curtis? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—When did you first meet him and where? A.—At my home in East Amwell township about the middle of March.

Q.—Under what circumstances did you met him when at your home in East Amwell township? A.—Mr. Curtis came to my home with Admiral Burrage and Dean Peacock.

Q.—Did you know Admiral Burrage? A.—I had know Admiral Burrage since about 1927.

Q.—Did you know Dean Peacock? A.—I did not.

Introduced by Admiral.

Q.—Did you know Mr. Curtis until he came to your home with Admiral Barrage? A.—I had not met Mr. Curtis up to that time.

Q.—Who introduced you to Dean Peacock? A.—I believe Admiral Burrage.

Q.—Did you know that Admiral Burrage is a man of good standing? A.—Yes, I trusted him.

Q.—Who introduced you to Mr. Curtis, colonel? A.—Admiral Burrage.

Q.—The fact that Mr. Curtis and Mr. Peacock were brought to your home by Admiral Burrage, did that have any bearing on your confidence in these men? A.—It did to the extent that I was willing and glad to listen to their story immediately.

Q.—Colonel, what was the purpose of the meeting at your home? A.—The purpose of the meeting was to have Mr. Curtis give me information which he said he had received from parties he had been in contact with at Norfolk.

Q.—Did he state to you who they were, at that time?

Counsel for the defense objected on a legal technicality regarding the wording of the indictment claiming it barred answer to this question. The court finally permitted the question, the court itself reading it.

BY THE COURT. Q.—Mr. Curtis was present at that time? A.—Mr. Curtis was present at that time. Mr. Curtis stated that he had been approached while in the vicinity of Norfolk, Va., by a man who claimed to be able to bring about the return of my son. Mr. Curtis wished to know what amount would be paid or what amount I was willing to pay for my son when returned. Shall I give the reply?

Wanted $35,000 Deposit.

Q.—Yes. Go on. A.—I replied to Mr. Curtis that I could not discuss any amount of ransom unless I had positive identification to the effect that I was in contact and dealing with people who were in a position to bring about the return of the baby. Mr. Curtis said that the amount of $25,000 had been suggested and that the people whom he was in contact with were willing to give me an opportunity to identify the baby before they received payment. He said it would be sufficient to deposit this amount at the bank and they had agreed to receive payment after identification had been made by me.

Q.—Was that all that was said, Colonel? A.—I do not know whether that was all that was said. That is just an outline of what happened at that meeting.

Q.—Did Mr. Curtis say that your child was being properly cared for by a woman that he stated was a German nurse and that he wanted you to believe that the child was in ——?

Mr. Herr: "Now, now, now, now, now."

Prosecutor: "I withdraw the question and will put it in another form."

Q.—What further was said at that conference, if anything, colonel, about the baby and the kidnaping? A.—Mr. Curtis agreed to return to Norfolk and either there or elsewhere to submit my reply to the people or party he had been in contact with.

Second Visit of Curtis.

Q.—When did you next see Mr. Curtis? A.—I believe Mr. Curtis was again at my home a few days before, or approximately the first of April.

Q.—In the day time or night time? A.—I believe in the afternoon again.

Q.—Will you tell us who was present and what happened? A.—I cannot recall, certainly, who was present at that meeting—the meeting was about the first of April.

Q.—Was Mr. Curtis there? A.—I am not certain of that time. The next meeting when he was at my home was a few days after the first of April.

Q.—Can you tell us what happened the next time that Mr. Curtis came to your home and will you please fix the time if you can, colonel? A.—Is it satisfactory to look at this book?

[The witness takes a small memorandum book from his pocket and looks at it.]

Allowed to Use Memorandum.

PROSECUTOR—If that is your memorandum, in your own handwriting? A.—Yes.

Q.—Colonel, it is used by you for the purpose of refreshing your memory? A.—Yes, sir.

THE COURT—The witness may answer.

A.—The first date I have recorded here, when Mr. Curtis was at my home in East Amwell township, is the 18th of April. Prior to that time, however, he had been there. He had been there a few days after the first of April.

Q.—Tell us what happened on the 18th. A.—On the 18th of April Mr. Curtis and Mr. Bruce came to my home in East Amwell township, and the most important subject discussed at that time was a statement by Mr. Curtis that he had seen several hundred dollars of the ransom money that I had paid through Dr. Condon. Mr. Curtis said that he had personally checked various numbers on the ransom bills against numbers which had been published in the newspaper list, and that they were identical, and Mr. Curtis said that there could be no question as to the numbers of the bills that he had seen and the numbers on the newspaper list, which he had checked, as to their corresponding.

Decides to Be Nearby.

Q.—What else happened, if anything, colonel, at that time? A.—At that time I suggested to Mr. Curtis that when he made his contact with the leader of the group which he had claimed to be in contact with that I be in the general vicinity where he made his contact with these men. I suggested this on the assumption that there might be a decision to make, an agreement to make, and that this would require less time if I were in the general vicinity—that was supposed to be in the vicinity of Cape May, New Jersey.

Q.—What did he say to that? A.—He agreed to that.

Q.—Did he tell you where to be, colonel? A.—To be in the general vicinity of Cape May. After arriving there I was to contact with him through the Prince George hotel in New York and he would give me the location where I would stay until he got in communication with the men.

Q.—Was there anything else that happened? What was said at that time that you can recollect? A.—It is very difficult to tell what was said at each one of these times. It would be comparatively simple to tell what was said in the total. I believe we discussed the five people with whom he was in contact at that time.

Hard to Sort Out Conversation.

Q.—Who discussed them? A.—Mr. Curtis, Mr. Edmund Bruce and myself.

Q.—What did Mr. Curtis say were their nationalities? A.—He said that the men he had been in contact with were all of Scandinavian descent and that they all spoke with an accent with the exception of one, who was a Scandinavian Jew, and others, he said, were all of Norwegian and Swedish extraction.

Q.—Did he give the names, colonel? A.—He gave me one name, at least, at that time. The man who had contacted him at Norfolk or whom he had contacted, he said, at Norfolk. He said the first name of this man was Murray.

Q.—Did he tell you his last name? A.—Not at that time. It was at a later date.

Q.—Was there anything else said that you can remember at that meeting at which Mr. Curtis was at your home? A.—Well, that covers everything that I can be sure of at the present time that they said at that meeting. Other things had been said prior to that.

Goes to Cape May.

Q.—Colonel, did you go, according to Mr. Curtis' instructions, to Cape May? A.—I went to Cape May Court House the following evening.

Q.—Did you get in contact with Curtis at the Prince George hotel? A.—When was that? The following evening we went to Cape May Court House.

Q.—What happened when you got to Cape May? A.—We went to Cape May Court House to a hotel there and either Mr. Bruce or Lieut. Richard called the Prince George hotel and got in touch with Mr. Curtis.

Q.—After you arrived at Cape May Court House, did Mr. Curtis put in an appearance with some parties, and if so when and where? A.—Mr. Bruce and Lieut. Richards and I arrived at Cape May Courthouse in my car. Mr. Curtis came to Cape May Courthouse and contacted us there about midnight.

Q.—What happened? A.—Mr. Curtis said that he had been in contact with the gang which he had spoken of and that they had given him a list of questions which they wished him to ask me.

Q.—Was anything further said after that? A.—The questions?

Government Activity Questioned.

Q.—Were any questions asked then? A.—One was in regard to certain government activity in the vicinity of Cape May. One was in regard to the action I would take to rescind the published list of ransom notes in case the baby were returned. One was in regard to a man who, I believe, was named either Hitner or Hitler. There were other questions also. Those are all that I recall at the time.

Q.—After Mr. Curtis asked those questions, what else was said then, if anything? A.—Mr. Curtis said that he was going out to a boat several miles off the New Jersey coast and that he would return to the hotel and meet us as soon as possible.

Q.—Did he go at that time? A.—He said that he did. He left the hotel at that time.

Q.—How long was he gone, Colonel? A.—He returned shortly after daybreak.

Q.—When he returned what happened and what was said? A.—Mr. Curtis suggested that they start for New York and he left and drove with me in my car.

Curtis Story of Trip.

Q.—What report did Mr. Curtis make of his trip off the Jersey coast? "Mr. Curtis" Col. Lindbergh replied, "said that he had been taken out to a Gloucester fisherman a number of miles off the New Jersey coast and that here, for the first time, he had met the entire gang who had offered to bring about the return of the baby. He said that there were five men in this gang, and that they were all of Scandinavian descent with the one exception, and he said that John was there (referring to the man to whom Doctor Condon had paid the ransom money which I gave him), and, he said, that John sent his love to Doctor Condon.

"He said that these five men were divided into two groups, one of which was led by a man he called by the name of 'Din' or 'Dynamite,' and the other of which was led by John. He said that John was far the most desperate character, but that a man he called 'Din' was actually in control of the group. He said, also, that 'Din' was master of the boat.

"He said while he was out there he had seen over three thousand dollars of the ransom money which I had paid through Doctor Condon and that he had personally checked a number of those ransom bills which he had seen on the boat against the newspaper list and the numbers of the bills which he had checked were the same and identical with those on the list which he had checked them against. He said he had checked several hundred dollars of those bills.

"He said that John wanted to sell the baby to the gang or group which was the highest bidder, but that the master of the boat, or John, was afraid to carry on negotiations with another gang and that John had agreed to return the baby to me.

Said He Knew One Man.

"Mr. Curtis said that the two men in what he called the 'John group' were called Eric and Nils. He said also there was a regular fishing crew on the boat. And that the five men he had met, comprising this gang, constituted all the rum running crew. He said that he had known one of these men, a man called 'Murray' which he referred to sometimes as 'Sam,' for some time in the past before the kidnaping.

"He said that John had agreed to take the baby and the German nurse, whom he said was in charge. He, John, said was in charge of the child on his boat and would make contact with us in the vicinity of Block island, where he would return the child to us.

"He said that John would drop his regular fishing crew and proceed with what Mr. Curtis called his 'rum-running crew'; they told us to be met the following morning in the vicinity of Block island. Mr. Curtis said that he was requested to proceed to New York, obtain a chart of Block island and vicinity and make contact with a member of the gang, who would mark on this chart the position where the contact would be made in the vicinity of Block island."

Q.—Colonel, did he describe the boat?

The court—Just one moment. It is now half past five and no one will leave the courtroom until the court has formally adjourned.

The witness was excused.

CUBAN PRESS GROUPS PROTEST DEPORTATION OF AMERICAN EDITOR

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HAVANA, June 27.—The National Press Association of Cuba and the Association of Reporters of Havana today formulated protests against President Gerardo Machado's orders for the immediate deportation of John T. Wilford, publisher of the Havana American News.

Antonio A. Angulo, president of the press organization, and Gustavo Rey, president of the reporters' association, obtained a promise from Octavio Zubisarreta, secretary of the interior, to ask the president to reconsider his decision. Wilford was ordered to leave Cuba because of an editorial he published attacking the suspension of constitutional rights by the Cuban government. The government branded the editorial as "seditious and quasi-communistic."

"The press organizations voice vigorous protest against Wilford's ordered deportation," the joint statement said. "The government cannot and has not made the least effort to deny any of Wilford's editorials. The national press organizations unanimously support the American press in Cuba and especially endorse Wilford's courageous stand telling the people facts that the government does not dare deny."

Wilford stated he will continue to publish his views on any subject he sees fit under the protection of the constitutional provision of free speech and free press regardless of whether or not he is deported.

He conferred today with Harry F. Guggenheim, American ambassador to Cuba. The latter then called on President Machado, but declined to admit or deny it was in connection with the Wilford case.

LESTER COLBY, WRITER, GIVEN DIVORCE DECREE

Lester B. Colby, 137 Custer street, Evanston, a magazine writer, was granted a divorce yesterday by Circuit Judge Daniel P. Trude from Mrs. Mary Frances Colby of Houston, Tex. He charged adultery.

Colby testified that on June 16 he entered a room in the Royal Beach hotel, 5533 Kenmore avenue, and found his wife there with Charles Salter Martin, Illinois manager of a tea importing company. His wife urged him not to harm Martin, and said that she wanted a divorce, Colby said. His testimony was corroborated by Policeman Leo Miller of the Summerdale station, who was with him at the time.

Colby was granted custody of his son, Byron, 13 years old.

Respectable Strangers Welcome!

FRANCE LOOSENS RESTRICTIONS ON JOBLESS DOLE

Drops All Limits on Help for Unemployed.

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, June 27.—The rules governing the granting of aid to unemployed persons have been greatly broadened and liberalized. The new minister of labor in the Herriot cabinet, Albert Dalimier, announced the changes to a group of Socialist deputies in the lower house of parliament.

Frenchmen will no longer have to be out of work 180 days before they are entitled to the dole. It will be handed out immediately the workless period begins.

Persons not working more than three days per week will be entitled to the dole. Also, the unemployed will not be debarred from receiving aid from the government by the fact that others of the same family are employed. In other words, there will no longer be any limits to the granting of unemployed compensation.

Drop Rent Prosecution.

Minister Dalimier also announced that he had called the attention of the new minister of justice to the futility of prosecuting unemployed persons for failure to pay their rent. He pointed out that under the law unemployed cannot be turned out and that prosecution in such cases was a waste of time.

The labor minister also promised that he would communicate with the minister of finance, asking that unemployed be not prosecuted for failure to pay their taxes. In some cases taxes are in arrears so far back as 1929 on account of unemployment. Dalimier's argument is that since the taxpayer is obviously unable to pay, these taxes should be marked off.

Seek Aid for Artists.

Dalimier is studying means for aiding artists, writers, sculptors and other intellectual workers whose work is irregular and in whose cases it is difficult to determine when the person in question is unemployed and when not.

This class of workers, too, is shy and hesitant about accepting aid, Dalimier said, and must have special attention for that reason. He is conferring with the two largest organizations of intellectual workers as to the best way to come to the aid of their unemployed members.

The Socialist delegation called Dalimier's attention to the need of special legislation to govern the cases of irregular workers, such as ragpickers, members of chairs, street vendors, housekeepers, dressmakers who pass from house to house to work at their trade and similar professions which are unable to furnish clear proof of employment or lack of it. Dalimier declared himself in favor of special courts, if necessary, to handle such cases.

Plans Jobless "Seniority."

The minister of labor also expressed the opinion that the payment of aid should not be up to the locality where the unemployed citizen lives, but rather to the district where he normally labors. For instance, thousands of Paris factory workers who live in Paris suburbs and who are out of work should be cared for not by these suburbs but by whatever ward in Paris they normally work in.

He also said the unemployed should benefit by the services of placement bureaus in the order of seniority, so that the longest unemployed would get the first available jobs.

Dalimier also promised that he would apply with the greatest strictness the legislation regarding the eight hour limit for working days. He will also investigate the matter of hotel keepers in the Seine department who receive only 4 francs allocation per unemployed person lodged with them and who as a result are threatened with bankruptcy.

He will also urge the upper house of parliament to hurry and vote the pending bills providing for the repatriation of foreign labor still remaining in France.

Dalimier also said he favored an increase in the dole within the possibilities of the budget.

BRITAIN HINTS AT MAKING COUNTER ARMS PROPOSAL

[Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, June 27.—There is a new air of expectancy in British political circles, based on a belief that Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, is going to make a new disarmament proposal at Geneva in the near future.

This belief is rested on a remark made in the house of commons today by Acting Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin with reference to the Hoover proposal for a cut of one-third in the world's armaments. Baldwin said, "There may be other far-reaching proposals by other countries." He is believed to have had in mind Great Britain and possibly other countries of the British empire.

Sir John had told the house of commons earlier he could not discuss the Hoover proposal in parliament at this time because it had been submitted to the dominion governments for their consideration and is still under examination by the British cabinet.

COURTHOUSE IS MADE A LINCOLN MEMORIAL; DEDICATION IS TODAY

JOSEPH W. FIFER.
[Mayes Photo.]

This edifice becomes an official memorial to Lincoln after almost 100 years of history. The contract for its erection was let on June 5, 1844, and the building was completed and accepted by the county commissioners of Woodford county Aug. 11, 1846. It was remodeled in the '70s, an outside staircase being provided and two wings added. In 1921, by act of the general assembly of Illinois, the building passed to state ownership from the village of Metamora, to become a memorial. Then it was restored to its original size and condition, and now stands that way.

In the courthouse, Judge David Davis, afterward chief justice of the United States Supreme court; Adlai Stevenson, who became Vice President; Robert G. Ingersoll, noted orator and agnostic; Abraham Lincoln and many other noted men of the times lifted their voices in trial of cases of importance in American history.

FORMER KAISER RUMORED ON WAY BACK TO GERMANY

Said to Be Heading for Son's Castle in Auto.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, June 27.—It is rumored here that the former kaiser is trying to return to Germany by automobile tonight. His first goal is said to be Cologne, from where, the rumor goes, he will proceed to Bad Homburg, where he will stay at the castle of his son, Prince Adalbert. Monarchistic circles denied the rumor.

Dutch authorities said it would be impossible for the former kaiser to leave Holland or cross the border into Germany unnoticed.

Dutch and German officials brand the rumors as "emanations of brains diseased by political hysteria."

[At a caucus of the Nationalist party yesterday, Alfred Hugenberg, its leader, demanded the return of the Hohenzollerns to Germany's throne.]

Aim Confiscation Bill at Jews.

BERLIN, June 27.—(AP)—In the early hours of Sunday morning, when the house was almost empty, the Prussian diet passed a National Socialist (Fascist) taxation bill which provides, among other things, for the confiscation of the property of all Jews who immigrated from the east after 1914.

The measure is simply a recommendation to the federal government and has no binding effect. More than anything else it was a demonstration of the anti-Semitism of the Nazis.

The bill provides for the sale of the confiscated property, the money to be used for the unemployed. The confiscation is justified, in the language of the bill, on the grounds that the property involved was acquired "by a rapacious, nonproductive race" and hence constituted "immoral acquisition."

Fascists "Repudiate" Von Papen.

MUNICH, Germany, June 27.—(AP)—Joseph Goebbels, Adolf Hitler's chief lieutenant, told a conference of Nazi district commanders from all parts of Germany today that the party had not called the Von Papen government into being and would judge it solely according to its deeds.

The commanders were called together to discuss the Hitlerite platform for the reichstag elections to be held July 31.

Goebbels said the party would reject any compromise. The country, he declared, is faced with two alternatives —Bolshevism or Hitler.

FRANCO-GERMAN TALKS WIND UP IN A DEADLOCK

Berlin Refuses to Pay or Offer Concessions.

BY JAY ALLEN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LAUSANNE, Switzerland, June 27.—The reparations conference was stuck on a dead center tonight.

Chancellor Franz von Papen of Germany returned here from Berlin for a meeting with Premier Herriot, at which the French premier was expected to hear what Germany had to offer in the way of compensation in return for a surrender of reparations.

Von Papen and Count Luts-Schwerin von Krosigk, German finance minister, both talked, the latter for two hours, and although they repeated their reasons why Germany cannot pay any more and added a formal declaration that she could not be expected to, they offered practically nothing in the way of concessions.

Report to MacDonald.

Herriot, in a catastrophic mood, and Von Papen then went separately to Prime Minister MacDonald of Great Britain to report. The latter will attempt to effect a compromise tomorrow, and Wednesday the French will reply to what turned out today to be not a German offer at all.

The conference is thus in the bad lands a little earlier than had been expected. It is sure to come to a negative end unless the German stand is revised in the meantime.

Herriot today matched Von Papen's reference to the "tragic consequences of a rupture here" with an allusion to the "extreme gravity of the situation."

German Stand a Mystery.

When Von Papen left for Berlin late last week he certainly counted on offering something. Even as late as this morning Von Krosigk called in the German press and outlined the compensatory offers Germany intended to make France. But none was made. Which is the first mystery of this conference. To counteract the French despair there are intimations by the German delegation that concessions are being withheld as a tactical move.

Von Papen this afternoon spoke lyrically of the necessity of Franco-German cooperation, but Von Krosigk in his long exposé avoided concrete references to such cooperation to balance the French surrender of claims which have a present value of more than $8,000,000,000.

He did say that Germany would contribute somehow to a suggested reconstruction fund at Basel and $7,000,000 to a proposed $42,000,000 loan to Austria to stave off a threatened collapse. The French and British have both agreed now to contribute $14,000,000 apiece to this loan, the French without further political guarantees.

Proposes World Parley.

The German finance minister pleaded that a clean slate on reparations is the sole means of restoring world confidence. He suggested a world economic conference and made pointed reference to the necessity of establishing a better ratio for gold currency, which led the French to think he meant an invitation to them to use their gold reserves to salvage other European currencies.

The French construed Von Krosigk's observations to mean that they would be asked to carry close to 80 per cent of the reconstruction costs of Europe as well as to abandon reparations.

MacDonald had nothing to say tonight after he heard the news of the deadlock. He has looked to President Hoover to save the conference.

On the success of the conference, Von Papen said today to the French, "hangs the salvation or the catastrophe of Europe." Herriot was bitterly disappointed and made only a brief, cold reply in refutation of the German position, pending a full answer on Wednesday.

RAID ROADHOUSE.

New Buffalo, Mich., June 27.—[Special.]—Michigan state police raided the Michiana tavern, located near here, at midnight Saturday, and confiscated more than $3,000 worth of gambling equipment. The equipment consisted of roulette tables, card tables, slot machines, and dice tables. No arrests were made.

FISHERMEN FIND BROKEN PARTS OF KUEHNERT PLANE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ST. JOHNS, N. F., June 27.—Two pieces of aeroplane wreckage picked up by fishermen of Cape Norman have been identified as parts of the Gypsy Moth plane which took off from St. Anthony May 30. It has been missing since and object of a wide search. Pilot Arthur Sullivan of St. Johns took off to give Dr. Karl Kuehnert, dentist at Grenfell hospital, and son of the Rev. F. G. Kuehnert, Crystal Lake, Ill., a short ride seaward. The parts were an interplane strut and a piece of the propeller. They gave no indication as to how the accident occurred.

Do you inhale?

"Like a stepchild" ..a question generally avoided. Why?

Do you inhale? Why has this question been treated "like a stepchild" in cigarette advertising?

It's a subject vital to you—for you do inhale—we all do—every smoker inhales—every smoker breathes in some part of the smoke he or she draws out of a cigarette.

Do you inhale? A simple question. But silence on the subject—may be full of meaning.

Lucky Strike has dared to raise this question ...because certain impurities concealed in even the finest, mildest tobacco leaves are removed by Lucky Strike's famous purifying process. Luckies created that process. Only Luckies have it!

ARRAIGN TWO AS TURMOIL GROWS OVER CLUB RAID

Defense to Demand a Trial by Jury.

Miss Hedwig Elund, a waitress, and Nels Milton, assistant steward, who were arrested Saturday evening in a prohibition raid on the Swedish Club of Chicago, 1258 North La Salle street, were arraigned yesterday before United States Commissioner Edwin K. Walker. Bond was fixed at $1,000 each and hearing set for July 12.

Nels Nordstrom, a check room boy at the club, who was also arrested, did not appear in court. Agents dismissed his absence with the statement "if he was not arraigned he was not arrested." The hearing was completed without testimony or argument, except for the motion that the defendants be dismissed on their own recognizance, which was overruled by Commissioner Walker.

Will Ask Jury Trial.

That the defense will insist upon a jury trial in the event of an indictment and subsequent trial was promised by Attorney Gotthart A. Dahlberg, who is a member of the club.

"This is a case to be considered by the citizens of this district," he said. "The people have a right to decide whether they will stand for a raid of this nature. We will ask for a jury trial in order that our rights may be preserved."

The federal building was in a turmoil yesterday morning as a result of the raid and its repercussions. It was rumored that the invasion of the club had provoked the authorities at Washington to criticism of the "hasty action" taken by the prohibition authorities. The raid, especially at this time, has created political capital for the Democrats and may be expected to antagonize the Swedish vote which is normally heavily Republican, it was said.

Harney Orders Silence.

Prohibition Administrator M. L. Harney issued an order that prohibition agents should remain silent about details of the raid. The warrant upon which the raid was made was also withheld from the public files.

Raid warrants are usually approved by the U. S. district attorney or one of his assistants, it was pointed out. The report was that this approval was not asked in the case of the Swedish club from U. S. Attorney Johnson or his aids.

Prosecutor Johnson said he had been a member of the club for 25 years, but had visited the club on an average of only once a year to attend a political dinner or, perhaps, to view an exhibition of paintings.

"This will be treated the same as any other case," he said.

"It was just a routine raid," declared Harney. "What's all the fuss about?"

2,100 Bottles Seized.

Twenty-one hundred bottles of imported champagnes, liquors and cordials were seized in the raid, it was revealed. Fifty-five lockers of members were opened and in forty-eight of these some kind of liquor was found.

The lockers were entered with a master key obtained from a cigar clerk.

After the steward and his assistants had been placed under arrest, one of the agents called up Harney, it was revealed.

"This is a swell place," the agent told his superior, it was learned. "Do you want us to move out everything?"

"Clean it out," was the order.

"There's an awful lot of valuable paintings and furniture," demurred the agent. "You'd better come down here and look it over."

Harney then came to the club and after viewing the luxurious fittings, decided that only the restaurant equipment and the contents of the lockers should be removed.

It was stated unofficially that other private clubs and golf clubs would not be molested unless agents were successful in making buys of liquor at such places, an admittedly difficult feat, particularly in view of the publicity given the Swedish club raid.

GETS CONTINUANCE

HEDWIG ELUND.

TERM OF BOGAN EXPIRES; EXPECT HIS RE-ELECTION

School Trustees to Act Tomorrow.

The four year term of William J. Bogan as superintendent of schools ended yesterday and he is a candidate for reelection at the meeting of the board of education tomorrow afternoon. According to the opinions advanced yesterday by school trustees, Bogan will be returned to office.

These opinions were expressed despite the fact that a woman teacher, Mrs. Jennie B. Wilson, announced her candidacy in a letter of application to each member of the school board. Mrs. Wilson lives at 732 Waveland avenue and teaches English at the Lane Technical High school.

Woman Long a Teacher.

In her letter Mrs. Wilson spoke of "needed reforms" and the "message of the scientific educator." She said that she obtained her first teaching job when she was 17 years old and had taught in every phase of elementary school and high school curricula during the last 33 years. Her husband is J. W. Wilson,, a retired real estate man.

L. E. Myers, president of the school board, said that he believed Mr. Bogan would be reelected. "He has been a good superintendent," Mr. Myers added. "There's no use swapping horses in midstream. Mr. Bogan has already made a $700,000 cut in expenditures by following out the report of Dr. George D. Strayer of Columbia university."

Praised by Trustee Carr.

"Mr. Bogan has given a fine administration of the school system and is not politically minded," said Trustee Robert Carr. "He is coöperating fairly with the present administration in its demands for economy."

"It looks like no one else in the field but Bogan," asserted Trustee Joseph Savage. Other trustees were of the same mind.

Mr. Bogan left Saturday to speak at the convention of the National Education association. He will return tomorrow.

NIPPON FARMERS, STARVING, SELL GIRLS AT $1 TO $3

Fish and Bean Fertilizers Are Chief Foods.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO, June 27.—Four officials of the department of agriculture and forestry returned here today from the impoverished rural communities in Nagano, Iwate, and Niigata prefectures with pitiful tales of suffering among the farmers. Facing starvation, many farmers are selling their daughters into prostitution. They are eating roots where such "delicacies" are still available, but most of them are surviving on beancake, ordinarily used only as fertilizer.

The officials were touched by the miserable conditions in the rural communities—men and women who have lost the courage to fight for their livelihood, children who asked if life was the same everywhere, honest people forced to petty thievery in order to stave off starvation.

Money Disappears.

Money has practically vanished from the rural districts. Fifty-sen [about 15 United States cents] silver pieces are seldom seen in the villages, and even in Ueda City monetary exchange has been superceded by barter. Not only farmers but merchants are bartering.

In Nagano prefecture those who can afford to eat barley are well off. Every tree in the hills is bare, their fruit having been picked by hungry persons. Since January petty thievery of rice, sugar, and salt has become so frequent that police are at a loss to cope with the situation.

In one of the villages the investigators found that last year, the total income of one peasant was 130 yen, while his expenditures were 366 yen.

In order to buy food poor farmers are selling their children. The most unfortunate are girls who are approaching womanhood and who are sold for from three to ten yen [about $1 to $3] to unlicensed brothels.

Sell School Children.

The same condition prevails also in Niigata prefecture. Young women of marriageable age are scarce, as most of them have been sold, and there is a growing tendency to sell even primary school children. The price for children is about $30 for third year grade pupils, and about $150 for those who have finished schools.

In Kita Kanbara, Naka-Kanbara, and Uonuma-gun, the regular food is dried sardines which are generally used as fertilizer, and barnyard fodder.

In Kurokawa-mura, Kita-Kanbara-gun, the total taxes for 1930 were 39,313 yen, while in 1910 the amount was only 9,379. While the taxes have increased fourfold, the price of rice during the two periods has remained practically the same.

Children everywhere are suffering from undernourishment.

3 Pound Baby Thrives in Hospital Incubator

The Cook county hospital's smallest patient, Marie Mason, one week old, and two pounds and fifteen ounces in weight, has a fine chance to grow up and see more of the world, physicians said last night. The infant, a twin, was born last Wednesday to Mrs. Gertrude Mason, 1254 West 14th street, and has since been kept alive in an incubator. The other child, which weighed two pounds and nine ounces, died Saturday night.

GETS DIVORCE

MRS. CARL B. STIBOLT.
[Moffett Photo.]

Martha Morse Stibolt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Morse of Lake Forest, was granted a secret divorce from Carl B. Stibolt on June 8 by Judge Ralph J. Daly of the Lake County Circuit court, it was learned yesterday.

A petition was first filed on May 27, in which Mr. Stibolt was charged with desertion. When the hearing was held, however, it was asserted by Mrs. Stibolt and her mother that the husband punished the wife by striking and shaking her on several occasions.

The Stibolt-Morse wedding, which took place July 25, 1926, was one of the principal events in Chicago society that season. Mr. Stibolt's home is at Davenport, Ia. The couple had no children.

CHURCH LEADS SIMPSON BY ONLY 5 VOTES

James Simpson Jr., newcomer in politics, was only five votes behind Ralph E. Church yesterday in the recount of the ballots cast for the Republican nomination for congress in the 10th district, which includes part of Chicago's north side, the north shore territory, and all of Lake county. In the April primary Church, a state representative, was awarded the nomination by 73 votes over Simpson. A total of 253 precincts have now been recounted out of 345 of the Chicago precincts in the district.

TWO MEMBERS OF NEW CHILEAN JUNTA RESIGN

SANTIAGO, Chile, June 27.—(AP)—Nolasco Cardenas and Armando Cabero resigned today as members of the Socialistic government junta headed by Carlos G. Davila, former ambassador to Washington.

Both told friends they were retiring because of disagreement with the policies of Davila, who is president of the junta, which was formed ten days ago. The secretary of the junta denied, however, that the two members had resigned.

ENDS LIFE IN HOME.

Bernard F. Barney, 48 years old, committed suicide yesterday by slashing his throat with a knife in the attic of his home at 4722 North Melvina avenue. His widow, Anna, told police that he was despondent.

SOVETSKY GUILTY FACES A 22 YEAR PRISON SENTENCE

"Million Dollar Fence" Is Convicted by Jury.

John Sovetsky, known as the "million dollar fence," was pronounced guilty yesterday in the federal court of Judge John P. Barnes of receiving and possessing merchandise stolen from interstate shipments. He faces a possible maximum sentence of twenty-two years in a federal penitentiary.

The finding was revealed when Judge Barnes opened a sealed verdict reached at 1 o'clock Sunday morning by a jury which deliberated for seven hours. The jurors voted Sovetsky guilty on all five counts in the indictment. Two counts charged the defendant with receiving stolen goods. They carry a penalty of five years each. Two others charged possessing stolen goods and carry like penalties. A fifth count, charging conspiracy to receive stolen goods, is punishable with a two year sentence.

JOHN SOVETSKY.

Argue New Trial Thursday.

Sam Ginsberg, Sovetsky's partner in a store at 6234 South Western avenue, pleaded guilty during the trial. Judge Barnes set Thursday for hearing on arguments for a new trial for Sovetsky. Both men will be sentenced at that time if the motion is denied.

Sovetsky first gained the notice of authorities in 1925 when he was accused of being the fence to whom merchandise stolen in Green Bay, Wis., was sold. Gov. Small refused to honor extradition papers and Sovetsky did not have to stand trial. Later he was convicted twice in Cook county courts on charges of receiving stolen goods, but both convictions were set aside by the state Supreme court, the last one in April, 1931.

What the Evidence Showed.

Assistant United States Prosecutor Benjamin Landis presented testimony during the recent trial that Sovetsky had received clothing valued at $10,000 which had been stolen in raids on freight cars of the Pennsylvania and Great Western railroads. George Welte, confessed thief of part of the clothing, took the witness stand and testified that Sovetsky purchased the merchandise knowing it to have been stolen.

An expressman told of meeting Sovetsky near the Pennsylvania yards at 35th street and South Chicago avenue and transporting the clothing to the Sovetsky store. Employes of a clothing house identified the clothing and testified that it was part of an interstate shipment.

DENIES SUICIDE ATTEMPT.

Leroy Fox, 4853 Lincoln avenue, denied yesterday to Municipal Judge Francis B. Allegretti that he was attempting suicide several weeks ago when a gas explosion wrecked his home. The explosion was accidental, he asserted. A charge of malicious mischief against him was dismissed.

COURT DECIDES REAGAN HOUSE IS STILL A HOME

Riverside Loses Suit to Break Up Family.

The big house at 32 Nuttal road, Riverside, which shelters brothers and sisters as well as half brothers and sisters and step brothers and sisters and their families may continue to be their abode, Circuit Judge Philip J. Finnegan ruled yesterday in the case of "Riverside versus Reagan."

MRS. REAGAN.

The court dismissed for want of equity the village's petition for an injunction restraining the families from living together under the parental roof on the grounds that the family's growth had changed the home to an apartment house in violation of the village zoning ordinance.

Points to Extra Doorbells.

Judge Finnegan took the case under advisement a week ago after hearing testimony introduced by Guthrie S. Ashley, attorney for the village, to the effect that separate bathrooms had been installed for the various families, three doorbells had been added, and three mail boxes constructed. The dwelling therefore ceased to be a private home, he argued.

Mrs. Ellen W. Reagan, owner of the Reagan homestead, who has twelve living children, including stepchildren, nine of whom are living in the home, is now in Europe while the children who went back home to mother, with their husbands and children, fought the village suit in court. Mrs. Reagan, through depositions, testified that her children, stepchildren, and several grandchildren were "one happy family."

Attorney John R. Heath argued for the families that the exterior of the building remained unchanged, and that parents have a right to bring their children into their homes.

Members of the Household.

Those living in the Reagan homestead were: Sterling Goddard, student at the University of Pennsylvania; Lester Goddard, student of Yale university; and Miss Jacquelline Goddard, all children of Mrs. Reagan by her marriage to J. Sterling Goddard, attorney, now dead; Ruth and Barbara Reagan, daughter of Herbert E. Reagan, wealthy manufacturer, now dead, by his first marriage, and Benjamin and Herbert Reagan, sons of Mrs. Reagan by her marriage to Reagan.

Also living there were Robert Grimm and his wife, who was the former Caroline Goddard, and their child, and John Silverthorne and his wife, the former Elizabeth Goddard, and their child. George Herrier and his wife, another daughter of Mrs. Reagan by her first marriage, and their child occupied the house with the others at the time the suit was filed by the village last September, but are now on a tour through Japan.

Hot N. Y. Day; One Dead; Night Rain Brings Relief

New York, June 27.—[Special.]—A torrential burst of rain tonight brought relief to the city's sweltering millions after a day of heat and humidity that killed one man and caused several prostrations. The mercury, 81 at noontime, hose until it reached 86 degrees at 3 o'clock.

Nurse Declares She Did Not Call Hutton 'Just a Big Sissie'

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Los Angeles, Cal., June 27.—[Special.]—Miss Myrtle St. Pierre's spirited denial that she had confidentially described David Hutton, husband of the Rev. Aime McPherson-Hutton and defendant in Miss St. Pierre's $200,000 breach of promise suit, as "nothing but a big sissy," furnished one high light during the fourth day of the nurse's cross-examination by Hutton's attorneys today.

Another flareup between the plaintiff-witness and Attorney Mark Jones, Hutton's chief counsel, took place when Jones insisted on knowing how well the plaintiff was acquainted with Arthur Graves, and whether Graves had accompanied her to a Pasadena department store in which she bought "the outfit you are wearing for this trial."

Strike Answer from Record.

Miss St. Pierre indignantly informed the lawyer that "Mr. Graves went along with me to the store as my bodyguard." The answer was ordered stricken.

The insertion of Graves' name in the case became of interest in connection with the appearance of a "my story witness," a woman who was introduced as "Mrs. Arthur Graves," whom the defense has brought on from New York. At that time Mrs. Graves and three children were brought to the courtroom by Hutton's lawyers.

Attorney Jones insisted on knowing more of Graves and varied the questioning with a demand as to where Miss St. Pierre was now making her residence. This line of questioning elicited that the witness had moved to a new single apartment shortly prior to the start of her trial against Hutton, but Superior Judge Lester Roth stopped the questioning when the cross-questioner demanded the witness' exact address.

Part of Cross-Examination.

Following is part of the cross-examination:

Q.—You do know Arthur Graves, don't you? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did Graves spend a week ago last Sunday night in your apartment? A.—He certainly did not.

Q.—What time did he leave? A.—About 11:30.

Q.—Now, Miss St. Pierre, did you ever go to Long Beach with the lady who introduced you to Hutton in February or March of 1931? A.—Yes, I drove there with her.

Q.—Did this lady ever ask you how you liked David Hutton and did you answer, "Don't be absurd. I could never care for him, for he's nothing but a mamma's boy and a sissy." A.—Absolutely not.

Q.—Did you also tell this lady, "I told Hutton to go to hell; that I was done with him and that I didn't want to have anything to do with him any more? A.—Absolutely not.

Treated for Exhaustion.

Dr. John V. Barrow, a specialist on internal disorders, was associated with Dr. Edward H. Williams in treating Mrs. McPherson-Hutton today. The physicians announced that she was being treated for nervous exhaustion, partial physical breakdown, and an intestinal disorder.

Mrs. McPherson-Hutton must pay $10,000 for the scenario of a film play which she planned and which was never made, Superior Judge Crum decided today. A judgment was given in favor of Harvey H. Gates, scenario writer, who testified that he wrote the script for "Clay in the Potter's Hands" for Mrs. McPherson-Hutton and J. Roy Stewart, film director, at their request. The judgment was given against both defendants.

ELECTRIC ROOM COOLING

What it is
What it will do for you

Q. What is Air Conditioning, or Electric Room Cooling?

A. Air Conditioning is a process of cooling and cleaning indoor air to improve the alertness, comfort and health of people in stores, offices, factories, institutions, restaurants, theatres and homes in the hot months of the year.

Q. What are its benefits?

A. At this season, Air Conditioning provides cool indoor air, cleaned and purified. On sultry days, it reduces the excessive moisture from indoor air, establishing normal humidity. Also, in an electrically cooled room, disturbing street noises are excluded and a maximum of quiet is attained.

Electric Room Cooling keeps you comfortably cool indoors in Summer — just as room heating keeps you comfortably warm when it is zero outside.

FOR COMPLETE INFORMATION about Air Conditioning in any of its phases, telephone Randolph 1200, Local 162, or write to our Air Conditioning Department. Experienced engineers will give full information about efficient and economical methods suitable to your particular requirements.

ANOTHER FARM BOARD HOAX.

With a great show of righteousness, the senate has lopped a million dollars off the appropriation for operating the farm board, but only a few days before the same senate had voted 40 million dollars to finance the sale of American farm products abroad. Thus, the net loss to the country through these two measures is 39 million dollars.

"Financing the sale of American farm products abroad" is a mouth filling phrase intended to hoax the American taxpayers. The one kind of commodity which ought never to require long term credits is foodstuffs. If foreigners cannot pay for the food they must have to keep alive, it is fair to conclude they cannot buy anything. As a matter of fact, no such crisis exists. The price of American wheat may have to fall somewhat further before it can enter the foreign markets, but Europe and the orient are buying wheat right along and paying for it. To advance them the purchase price of our wheat, to be repaid years after the wheat has been eaten, is merely to invite the repudiation of more millions of dollars of debt to this country.

The proposal is intended to keep the price of American grain and cotton above world parity at the expense of the American taxpayers. It will not even do that. The wheat which the world is able to buy on long credits will not decrease the supply of wheat in the world or increase the demand for it materially. When the 40 million dollars has been loaned we will still have left in this country exportable surpluses of wheat and cotton and the prices of these commodities will reflect that fact. By this time it is obvious that the American farmers have no intention of restricting production to merely American needs, and we can therefore look forward with great assurance to annual surpluses of both of these commodities.

The unsoundness of the scheme is further suggested by the fact that the same congress which is getting ready to advance another 40 million dollars to foreign nations is also preparing to give away 50 million bushels of its wheat to the Red Cross for free distribution to our poor. That will leave in the hands of the farm board perhaps 20 million dollars' worth of wheat. To export that wheat the government does not need to advance 40 million dollars to foreign nations. Why, then, the demand for 40 million dollars to lend abroad?

A PROPHET AND AN AWAKENED PEOPLE.

John B. Chapple, the choice of the conservative Republicans of Wisconsin for the United States senate, sees clearly when he declares the nation is at a crisis, the greatest in its history, and it must decide which of two roads it is to travel.

Lincoln, in his day, saw clearly the nation could not exist half slave and half free. Chapple sees a crisis in which the nation is threatened with becoming all slave, a society burdened by an army of political job holders, secure in their own fortunes from the public treasury, meddling, controlling, stilling private initiative, and breeding sentiments of prejudice against private enterprise and hostility to the principles that have made the growth of the American progress and more than a century of unequaled prosperity.

Whether openly as socialists or communists or surreptitiously as pretended lovers of humanity, sneering and snarling at those who oppose them, their ends are the same. Chapple said in a recent speech to the citizens of Waushara county, "They would hamper business and industry, then discourage it, then socialize it and take it away from its present owners and place themselves in power as political managers."

Whether by taxation or by revolution or by attrition from the constant encroachment of government interference and usurpation of power, the end is the same.

Mr. Chapple neither exaggerates the conditions nor the dangers. He overstates neither. He is a prophet and we hope not before his time. The destructionists have grown daring under the opportunism of world-wide depression. Although we have suffered less than any nation in the world, they would abandon the principles of thrift, initiative, and fortitude that have pulled America, stronger than ever, through every previous economic crisis.

They would offer confiscation, a replacement of the old order, a sacrifice of individual freedom to political subjection. They demand the redistribution by them of what generations of labor and economy and growth have built up. They offer no workable plan for a renewal of supplies when present sources are exhausted.

There are signs everywhere that the prophet is not before his time. There are meetings being held in many communities of forceful men whose thoughts are identical with Chapple's thoughts. There are spontaneous expressions of resistance to conditions that have become intolerable. However varied the utterances, the aims are uniform for restoration of government to its essentials. The political docility which was a characteristic of busy Americans in times of general prosperity is exhausted.

Recent political actions are omens. Republicanism in Wisconsin for the first time in a generation has been wrested from the radicals. Iowa is in line. Minnesota has demanded that the tremendous cost of government be lessened. Characters softened by prosperity have been annealed by the lessons of the last three years.

The attendance and the attention given by Wisconsin audiences to Chapple, who a year ago was politically unknown, are proof of the earnest, sober thought people are giving to their government.

Chapple's speeches are prophetic and there are many signs that the people are ready for them.

KOOBA LEEBRAY.

A bill extending the régime of martial law in Cuba for a year with authority in the president to extend it two years thereafter has just been passed and signed by Sig. Machado. This suspends civil guarantees of the Cuban constitution, the right of habeas corpus, inviolability of private papers, the right of assembly and freedom of speech and press.

The justification for this action is the existance of "terrorist" organizations bent upon overawing the government and seizing government by violence. The opposition declares the present administration is a military dictatorship resorting to unconstitutional methods to keep in power. A leading lawyer of this persuasion challenged the martial régime is unconstitutional in the Cuban Supreme court and was promptly put in jail on charges of terrorist activities. Adherents of the Machado government defend its action as not only constitutional but necessary to the safety of the state. The alternative is, they say, revolutionary irresponsibility and chaos. Opponents assert that this is merely subterfuge to cover the administration's determination to hold its power and profits.

Whatever the measure of truth in either or both contentions, the situation has a certain irony for the generation of Americans who lived through the brief ardor of the war of Cuban liberation. For months the American people had read of the sufferings of the Cuban people, the heroisms of the little bands of patriots sallying from mountain and jungle fastnesses to strike a blow for freedom. Stories of the concentration camps, of the trocha or cordon strangling the patriot forces, of Gen. Weyler, "the Butcher," prepared the mine which the sinking of the Maine was to explode. No doubt it was that imagined assault upon the national ego that precipitated war. Probably we should have been able to restrain our humane emotions if the Maine had remained afloat. Nevertheless there was generous emotion in the war spirit of '98 and in the purpose of the nation an ideal objective. We shared the vision of the Cuban patriots of Cuba Libre, a nation freed from ancient oppression, a people enjoying the blessings of liberty under republican institutions.

The picture in the hearts of Gomes and his ragged soldiers and in that of Americans of that day does not resemble that which the recent news depicts for us. But the Cubans are not the only people who have found freedom a two edged instrument or independence and the setting up of free institutions only the beginning of new trials and disappointments. There is no political device which will free us from ourselves, though most systems purport to do so.

Editorial of the Day

CURRY COMBS AND ICE CREAM.

[State Journal, Lansing, Mich.]

Now take the curry comb for instance. It is a relic of the past, but that does not necessarily recommend it to the present. Once in a while one sees an automobile that looks as if it would be benefited by a strongly wielded curry comb, but, as a general thing, the curry comb belongs entirely to yesterday.

If there are any young readers of these columns who do not know what a curry comb was, let them inquire among their relatives. One need not be an octogenarian to have seen a curry comb, and perhaps to have wielded one.

But this brief expression was not conceived with the purpose of discussing curry combs. The main thought is to say that it is just as well that the home ice cream freezer is a relic of yesteryear along with the curry comb.

The home ice cream freezer was a great institution in its day. There is no intention to depreciate it in what little is said here about it. Any one, by turning back the pages of an old newspaper file, can find there the advertisement of the "White Mountain" ice cream freezer. What those old advertisements say in laudation of that old-time contraption is a-plenty. Our day has its laudatory advertising, but even so it is difficult to find any present day laudation that goes beyond that ascribed to the "White Mountain" ice cream freezer.

But the old-time freezer was not enough of itself. A good deal had to be added to produce ice cream. There was ice, for instance. There was the ice man and ice in those days, but, nevertheless, a good deal of conversation was necessary before the ice was actually laid down in the woodshed done up in a gunny sack.

Even after the ice was in the woodshed that was not all. It had to be attacked with the broadside of an ax. Some were good attackers of a large cake of ice; others were not. Even after the ice was sufficiently broken to be fed around the can containing the ambrosial custard there still remained a very great deal of a highly energetic order to be accomplished. Small boys usually had to be drafted for the job. One would sit on the freezer to keep it from traveling all over the back yard, while the other lunged and heaved and twisted to turn the crank.

After a time the domestic plot began to thicken. About this stage of the procedure the boys would be rewarded with a taste, and then strong adult arms would take the campaign for frozen dainties from there on.

There is no need of pursuing the subject further. Those who once froze ice cream know all about it—those who never have and never will cannot be told. Some things of the past were fine, but it is vastly better to buy ice cream as an offering of commerce.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

SPAIN has taken up with great seriousness a proposal to dig a tunnel under the Straits of Gibraltar. It's a fine idea, but Spain had best think it over. Chicago has talked for years of building a neat tunnel under the loop, but discouraging things happened to the city treasury and there's no sign of the tunnel yet. And Al Smith had some sort of idea about running a tunnel under Gov. Roosevelt's presidential boom, but there doesn't seem to be much to it right now. This tunnel thing is a mighty hard proposition to pull off.

HOWEVER, we wouldn't blame 'em a bit if the Franklin Roosevelt boys got out an injunction against Al Smith saying, "Well, let's take a look at the records," when he makes a speech at the convention. If Al cuts that one loose and the band in the gallery starts playing "The Sidewalks of New York"—well, it's going to be right interesting over there in the convention about that time.

A LITTLE ROAD AND I.

Proud tales of kings are tame
This fair, ambrosial day,
And glory is a gaud
As summer shows the way—

This way of pink and green,
Wild rose and buttercup,
The air is full of wine—
Who would not drink it up!

My books are far behind,
On dusty shelves secure:
Of lore my heart is sick—
And only dreams can cure.

Now by the brook we go,
This little road and I;
Again we climb the hill
To view the soft, still sky.

Through daisy fields we trudge,
And then our path leads home;
But Summer nights are brief—
Again, at dawn, we roam!

THOMAS CURTIS CLARK.

"A NEW HERCULES," declared Keynoter Barkley, "must clean out these Augean stables." And now we wouldn't be a bit surprised if Alfalfa Bill Murray or Hooey P. Long or some other Jeffersonian jumps right up today and shouts, "I nominate as the candidate of this here Democratic convention for next President of the United States a man who is the very one the country needs—Mister Herculeese of Ojjeen Stables."

AND FRANKLIN can give out as many interviews as he likes on the proper way to pronounce his name, but we asked our taxi driver yesterday whom he wanted to see nominated at the convention and he said, "Me and everybody out my way is strong for Rosenfeldt." And if Franklin says any more that the proper way to pronounce him is Rose-a-velt he's liable to lose a lot of votes.

EUREKA!

("On the second ballot the state convention named Matthew Porringe."—News item.)

Oh bliss, oh rapture unforeseen,
Oh joy unprecedented!
The Muses now are all bemused,
Grim fate hath sure relented.
There is—deny it now who dare!—
In priceless Mister Porringe
The rhymester's jewel beyond compare:
At last—a rhyme for orange!

MANUFACTURERS' NEWSBOY.

MANY RIOTS with numerous fatalities are accompanying the invitations to former Kaiser Bill Hohenzollern to return to Germany. But the riots and the killings ought to make William think more and more of his snug little home in dreamy Holland. And what nice cheese they have in Holland!

OUR OLD BUS is proudly flaunting the brave emblem "Repeal the 18th Amendment." Now, if the Democrats get by with their reported stand for 2.75% beer we've got to amend our sign and ask that 2.75% beer be repealed in favor of real, genuine, honest old 8%; 2.75% beer is just an aggravation to the spirit, a disappointment, a delusion and a snare. It makes a fine sheep dip and is good for spraying on cotton to kill boll weevils, but as a drink we much prefer buttermilk. And there isn't a chance of luring strong men away from the speakeasies with 2.75% beer. Synthetic beer, say what you will, has got a lot more kick.

BIOGRAPHY VI.

When her tortured captive soul had fled swiftly unto its target as an arrow, songs spun of words and sunlight, words and sorrow—
while her bright body ripened into bread under the fertile press of welcome earth—were her only monument. The field touched a grief that love had wrought, and healed the bitterness sweetly with green rebirth.

And not so far away, a casual fleet distraction crossed his idle mind. "She wrote so prettily of love and death," he thought,
"I wonder what's become of her? I ought to telephone one day." A gentle note of weeping rose from newly budded wheat.

DAVIDA.

AND IF the rest of the speeches are as long as the addresses made on the first day the Democratic convention ought to be in session here in Chicago until early snow next winter.

AFTER ALL THE LASHING and denouncing and shaming that he came in for yesterday we'll bet a nickel that there is a poor old elephant belonging to a certain political party that feels right now that somebody had given him one awful kick in the pants.

EYE ACCIDENTS ON THE FOURTH.

THE Fourth of July approaches. The probability is that the celebrations this year incident to that occasion will cause a considerable number of children to go through life deprived of sight, and others will travel the road handicapped by poor vision and in daily dread that injured eyes will give out entirely.

C. Edith Kerby undertook to find out how many children were blinded by play accidents in one year in the United States. She wrote to all institutions for the blind, to many safety councils and health departments, and she subscribed to a newspaper clipping service for three months.

Accidents are not reportable and there was no trace of dependable official information. The number of newspaper reports of accidents to the eyes Miss Kerby estimates on the basis of her three months' collection as between 750 and 1,000. She thinks one-half the more severe accidents do not receive newspaper notice.

She writes: "It is probable the number of eye accidents to children occurring in a single year may run into the thousands."

Of these, nearly two-thirds are due to accidents of kinds to which Fourth of July celebrations particularly expose children. Those classed as due to weapons make up nearly one-third of the whole. The subgroups are: Air rifles, B. B. guns, shotguns, and other small caliber rifles, 13 per cent; blank cartridges and cap pistols, 3 per cent; large caliber firearms, 1 per cent; home made guns and cannon, 2 per cent; slingshots and rubber band flippers, 7 per cent; arrows, 2 per cent; stones and other objects used as missiles, 3 per cent; tear gas guns, 1 per cent.

Fireworks, collectively, are responsible for 23 per cent of the accidents to eyes. These are divided into: Firecrackers, 12 per cent; torpedoes and bombs, 3 per cent; fireworks, 2 per cent. Explosives account for 10 per cent, divided as follows: Gunpowder and dynamite [including empty cartridges, caps, and canisters], 6 per cent; chemicals used in experiments, 2 per cent; other explosives [including explosives put in gasoline and pop bottles], 2 per cent.

Sharp, pointed objects account for about one-ninth of the eye accidents. These are divided into: Knives and scissors, 3 per cent; sticks, nails, wires, and hooks, 3 per cent. Flying particles are responsible for 8 per cent. Chips of steel, wood, or glass for 5 per cent; dust, sand, and other objects, 3 per cent.

One-twentieth of the eye accidents are charged against sports. Baseball and bats, 1 per cent; golf balls and golf clubs, 1½ per cent; horseshoes, fishing, and swimming, 1 per cent; spinning toys [tops and propellers], 1½ per cent.

Automobile accidents account for one-thirtieth of the whole number of serious eye accidents. The toll of falls is given as 3 per cent; burns, 2 per cent. Miscellaneous and nonclassified accidents account for the remaining 3½ per cent.

TESTS OF DEATH.

D. W. C. writes: For the benefit of a student group in advanced biology, will you please answer these questions:

1. Can medical science distinguish between a deep cataleptic trance and actual death?
2. How can the difference be detected?
3. Does the heart actually stop beating or is the beat too slight to be detected by instruments?
4. Does the circulation stop?
5. Is there any respiration?

REPLY.

1. Yes.
2. There are several tests for life. The most common one is the mirror test. In most cases of simulated death a little tremor of the eyelids can be noted. If the eyeball of a dead man is squeezed the shape of the pupils will be distorted. If a string is tied around the finger and, on removal, no white line appears, death is to be inferred. Then there are the rigor mortis and the decomposition tests. There are still others.
3. There is some heart action.
4 and 5. Same answer as No. 3.

HOW TO REDUCE.

J. S. writes: Is there any way of reducing a rather large abdomen, recently developed, in a man 46 years old, 5 feet 6 inches tall, and 175 pounds in weight? He is a barber by trade and gets practically no exercise. Should one of the three meals a day be eliminated?

REPLY.

This man is overweight. Much of the excess fat is in the abdomen, and the abdominal muscles are flabby. To reach these three causes of the deformity the man must proceed along three lines. The abdomen must be reduced, some fat must be shifted from the abdomen, and the tone of the abdominal muscles must be improved.

To reduce he must eat about one-half as many calories as he has been eating. It does not matter whether he eats them at one meal or six. Second, the abdomen must be made an active zone. Fat is laid down in quiet places.

Third, the tone of the abdominal muscles must be built up. To accomplish these purposes some time each day should be spent in bending work and exercise. Spading is fine. Using a shovel is fair. Bending exercises are in order. These are taken standing, sitting, and lying.

POISON IVY.

J. G. L. writes: My daughter had a severe attack of poison oak early this spring. Occasionally she will break out with it. Can you tell me if there is anything to eliminate the poison from her blood?

REPLY.

Poison ivy does not get into the blood. If your daughter has poison ivy which has repeatedly returned this spring that is because she has been repeatedly exposed. Is there any poison ivy growing in your yard? Probably there is some of the poison ivy in her gloves, shoes, or some other garment. If so, it can be washed out with benzine, some cleaning compound, or strong soapsuds and hot water.

Are you certain the trouble is poison ivy?

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

JUNE 28, 1916.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Carranza has met President Wilson's ultimatum with a counter demand, and the question of war or peace between the United States and Mexico may be determined within the next twenty-four hours. The President's demand for the surrender of the twenty-three American prisoners taken in the Carrizal battle has been matched by Carranza with a demand for the release of thirty Mexicans arrested by American authorities along the border within the last two weeks. Dispatches indicate all but three of these already have been set free. Carranza also demands that President Wilson lift the embargo on the exportation of American merchandise, principally foodstuffs, to Mexico, which has been imposed by American customs officials within the last week. These demands were presented to Secretary of State Lansing by Señor Arredondo, Mexican ambassador designate to the United States. They constitute the forerunner of Carranza's answer to President Wilson's ultimatum to surrender the American prisoners at Chihuahua and to define the attitude of the de facto government toward the United States.

NOGALES, Ariz.—Mexican soldiers in Nogales, Sonora, looted a house occupied until recently by Frederick Simpich, United States consul. The house is the property of Ignacio Bonillas, assistant minister of public works in the Carranza cabinet, from whom Consul Simpich leased it. Citizens here took steps to relieve fifteen American refugees who arrived from the interior, many of them in destitute circumstances. Several said they had remained in Mexico in an effort to save their property until convinced that to stay any longer would endanger their lives.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill.—"About 6 per cent of the 2,000 men of the First and Second infantry have been disqualified as medically unfit for federal service," Maj. J. M. Phelan of the United States army medical corps announced. The surprising development during the medical examination was the large number of officers disqualified. The rigid tests have aroused the ire of both officers and men.

PETROGRAD.—An official canvass of the different prison camps shows that 194,941 privates and 4,031 officers have been taken in the Russian drive against the Austrians. The Austrians have been swept from Bukowina and Gen. Pflanzer's army is in flight across the Carpathians. At the same time the Austro-German forces about Lemberg are being hard pressed.

BERLIN.—Marked activity continues along the Franco-Belgian front and numerous gas clouds are being employed by the allied forces, the war office announced. In addition to the gas and smoke clouds giant guns are being used, according to the statement.

NEW YORK.—The national subcommittee on organization ratified Charles E. Hughes' choice of William R. Willcox as chairman of the Republican national committee. Mr. Willcox is a lawyer and formerly was postmaster of New York.

TODAY'S QUESTION.

How is an airplane, itself heavier than air, supported in the air?

YESTERDAY'S QUESTION.

How do we find the shape of the earth?

ANSWER.

The shape and size of the earth are found from observations with the plumb line. A plumb line always hangs so that it is perpendicular to the surface of the earth where that surface is level. The ideal level surface is one of still water, like a small pond or lake.

The actual direction of the plumb line is found by sighting along it toward the stars, since these are so far away that wherever the earth may be the direction from it to any given star is always the same.

Two plumb lines a thousand miles apart will point in different directions with respect to the stars, although each at its own location seems and indeed is perpendicular to still water at that point. Thus, by measuring how the plumb line has changed in direction toward the stars we find how the surface of the water has changed in direction over the thousand intervening miles. By making a large number of observations all over the earth we can thus discover not only the shape but the size of the earth.

TO BECOME CITIZEN.

Chicago, June 23. — [Friend of the People.]—I was born in Canada and came here in 1925 at the age of 21. I paid $8 head tax and $10 settler's tax. What do I have to do to get my full citizenship papers? Do I have to return to Canada for any length of time? And what was the meaning of the settler's tax? J. A. W.

The writer, unless he has already done so, should make an application for a certificate of arrival with a view to filing a declaration of intention [first paper] and two years after the declaration of intention shall have been filed he will be in a position to file a petition for naturalization [final papers]. An application for a certificate of arrival and preliminary form for a declaration of intention may be obtained at this office, Room 776, Postoffice building, Chicago. It is not understood what the settler's tax was.

MEXICAN DIVORCES.

Chicago, June 19.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I would like to know if a divorce given by the state of Chihuahua, Mexico, is recognized as being legal and valid by the courts of the United States; that is, where both parties are citizens of the United States. R. C. A.

It is the general rule that if the court has jurisdiction of the marriage relation (by virtue of the parties having lived in the jurisdiction) or of the parties (by the defendant being served with process or his appearance being entered) a decree can be entered which will be recognized in other states, but many of the divorces secured in such states as Nevada have no extraterritorial effect because the court lacks jurisdiction. Hence, we advise persons who contemplate going to a foreign state for a divorce to first get the advice of a disinterested lawyer in their home state. Do not rely on advertising, on news articles, nor on the claims of the lawyer who makes his living out of exploiting such cases.

GUNBOAT SMITH FOR PRESIDENT.

Chicago, June 23.—There are several ways in which that fifteen round act in the Madison Square Garden's bowl on Long Island may be viewed. Europe lost the honor, but Schmeling takes back the money. Prime Carnera, the Italian, has already taken steps to get a slice of it. Do you think that the British, because of Phil Scott, will remain calm?

Wait until we get the European comment. We are going to hear a lot about honor and sportsmanship. The same peoples who are willing and eager to forget honor and sportsmanship in their relation to their ten billion debt to America are getting ready to blast, or already have blasted, the United States again. They will be exceptionally vicious about it, for the loss of the title means that the golden flood to Europe has stopped. An American will get the next big purse. Their hatred at this time, however, will have point to it. But it probably will be tinged for the first time with respect. They are getting the same medicine they have been giving us for nearly twenty years.

They will respect Mr. Gunboat Smith. This simple soul cannot think across the ocean. He has by his decision put into effect Decatur's maxim:

"My countrymen. In their contests with foreigners, may they always win, but, winning or not, whenever I am referee I shall give them the decisions."

Decatur knew his Europeans. So does Mr. Gunboat Smith. At least he refereed as if he did.

Whether or not Gunboat Smith's decision was laudable, nevertheless by it he won the American championship title. It is the first time a referee ever won a title. He is the real American champion. Mr. Wilson was the greatest American champion for Europe that we ever had. Mr. Harding was a great champion also—for Great Britain and Japan. Paradoxically Mr. Coolidge talked too much to be considered a champion outside of the United States. He said: "They hired the money, didn't they?" Mr. Hoover has also been a great champion, but not for America. His whole life since 1914 has been devoted to drawing money out of the United States for the rest of the world. It is a question whether he has not been greater in this respect than Mr. Wilson.

Prize fighting has been damned good and plenty. Probably we would not wish to draw a real American champion from that stratum. But we have to take what we can get. And we have got the whole thing in the Gunboat. Even so, he does not quite rate up with the European idea. They would respect him more if he had been able to take the purse as well as the title away from Schmeling.

I would like to get Mr. Gunboat Smith in the White House. If not as President, then as the physical instructor for the President. Maybe while the new President was getting some of the fat pounded off his body by Mr. Smith some of the latter's simple direct partisan Americanism might slip accidentally into the poundee's head. J. P. B.

THE TAX ON CHECKS.

Chicago, June 20.—May I avail myself of an opportunity to mention through your paper the ill effects of the tax on checks as it appears to me?

Consider the thousands of retail merchants who sell for cash or whose cash sales represent practically 90 per cent of the total. These merchants will not deposit their receipts but will pay their bills in currency, rather than with checks, in order to save the tax, making those payments promptly to avoid carrying large amounts in their strong boxes.

Concerns having large pay rolls, formerly paid to individual employés with checks, will pay in currency. The result of all this will be that although more currency will be put into circulation temporarily, hoarding will increase.

Bank deposits in certain localities will be reduced, causing more banks to close, with resultant loss to depositors and stockholders.

For these reasons the small increase in revenue will be exceeded many times by the harm resulting from this tax.

HERBERT W. CONDIT.

OBLIGING A TEXAN.

Cisco, Tex., June 21.—Will you grant a little space to an eighty-one year old Texan to express his views to the Democrats now assembled in your city to determine the momentous questions which now confront this nation?

His forbears first came to America in 1640 when George Kittrell landed at Edenton, an island off the North Carolina coast; removed to the mainland and built his house next a spring, "Kittrell spring," bearing his name, and now Kittrell, N. C.

In 1805 his father, P. W. Kittrell, was born there, and was at 25 years elected to the legislature as a Democrat; removed to Alabama, and at 40, as a Democrat, represented that state in the legislature; thence to this state [Texas] and at 49 elected to the legislature as a Jeffersonian Democrat. This state has sent to Chicago a [so-called at least] Democratic delegation of which my son, W. H. Kittrell Jr., is secretary.

What will this convention do? Will they uphold Jeffersonian principles or, as the Republicans did, "pussyfoot"? Will they, as Jefferson did, fight centralization of power in Washington, put an unequivocal plank for repeal of the eighteenth amendment in their platform, or make a cowardly surrender of the rights of the states, as their opponents did?

If they do then, as a great Texas senator, Joseph W. Bailey, said, "It is suicidal to our government to forsake these rights and to abandon our fundamental principles of government."

He voluntarily retired from the senate with this explanation: "This sentiment [of centralization] is now in the ascendency, even in my own party; and knowing I cannot overthrow it, I cannot bear to sit here and see our representatives commit national suicide." So in private life again he engaged, to the last lamenting conditions in the party and government.

Were Joe Bailey there to dictate the platform it would be unequivocally for the rights to be restored to the state of which it was robbed by the eighteenth amendment.

Texas Democrats, will you have the courage to do what that greatest of Texans would counsel? If you do, victory is yours. If not, this republic is in danger of being destroyed by the cowardice of her children. A few days will give the answer. W. H. KITTRELL SR.

AMERICAN SPORTSMANSHIP.

Park Ridge, Ill., June 22.—Have we Americans got to tolerate crooked sports? I refer to the Schmeling-Sharkey fight. Certainly the decision that crowned Sharkey the world champion was given indiscriminately, and was one of the most rotten deals ever given a title defender. Public opinion alone would have given Max Schmeling the decision; but no, we have got to abide by the decisions of corrupt sports czars. Of course we Americans are a people of go-getting spirit, and we did pride ourselves on having held the world heavyweight championship title here in America. We, however, do not care to redeem this title if it has been attained through unfair methods. Max Schmeling was actually robbed of his title, which procedure we Americans resent, for such unscrupulous action places our American "good sport" title in jeopardy.

HARRY F. WUNLUCK.

SCHOOLS AS DORMITORIES.

Brooklyn, N. Y., June 21.—From a former resident of Chicago, who has taken the sad plight of the unpaid school teachers to heart, an idea.

When an army is mobilized they are housed and fed. Why not the army of unpaid school teachers? Who has a better right to those modern school buildings that will be emptied within the next few days? Why not turn some of them into dormitories for those teachers who have neither homes nor money to take them home? Lavatories and showers are there. Domestic science rooms solve the problem of food and a place to serve it. Gyms make splendid recreation rooms, with pianos, victrolas, radios, and moving picture machines available. GRACE ALEXANDER.

DROPPING THE PILOT—IRISH VERSION

[Glasgow Record.]

TWO CITIZENS' BUREAUS JOIN TO FIGHT WASTE

Will Work for Efficiency and Economy.

Merger of the Civic federation and the Chicago bureau of public efficiency was announced yesterday in a joint statement by Alfred Cowles, president of the federation, and Bruce Johnstone, vice chairman. Since the death of Julius Rosenwald, Mr. Johnstone has been acting head of the bureau of public efficiency.

"In order to provide more adequate information concerning governmental finances and to afford to citizens and taxpayers more effective assistance in guarding against wasteful public expenditure, the Civic federation and the Chicago bureau of public efficiency have agreed to unite the interests, personnel, and resources of these two long established organizations in a new corporation, not for pecuniary profit, to be known as the Civic Federation and Bureau of Public Efficiency," the statement reads.

Will Give Public Facts.

"The purpose of the new Civic Federation and Bureau of Public Efficiency, as stated in the application for incorporation papers, is to be: 'to provide a citizen agency for promoting efficiency and economy in the organization and management of public business; for guarding against wasteful expenditure of public funds and excessive taxes; and for furnishing the public with accurate information concerning governmental revenues and expenditures.'

"The officers of the new association will be chosen at a meeting of the trustees to be held shortly after the granting of the charter at Springfield. The staff work is to be under the direction of Douglas Sutherland as executive secretary, and Harris S. Keeler as director. Mr. Sutherland has been secretary of the Civic federation since March, 1910, and Mr. Keeler has been director of the bureau of public efficiency since January, 1912. Mr. Keeler will have charge of investigational activities and Mr. Sutherland will have charge of public relations and will act as secretary.

Union to Aid Effectiveness.

"Mr. Keeler and Mr. Sutherland have rendered valuable service to the community in continuously and effectively opposing needless expenditures and taxes, and in preparing and promoting constructive legislation in connection with recent governmental financial crises. These two organizations, through Mr. Sutherland and Mr. Keeler, have cooperated closely for many years and this consolidation will materially increase their effectiveness."

The directors of the new organization, named in the application for charter to serve until October, 1933, are:

Graham Aldis	Bruce MacLeish
Sewell L. Avery	John C. Mechem
Arnold Baar	George B. McKibbin
Harve G. Badgerow	Walker G. McLaury
Joseph C. Belden	Philip F. W. Peck
Henry P. Chandler	George Pick
Alfred Cowles	Guy A. Richardson
Thomas E. Donnelley	Fred W. Sargent
Edward J. Doyle	Gordon Strong
Victor Elting	Bernard E. Sunny
Walter L. Fisher	Melvin A. Traylor
Robert J. Graf	George G. Tunnell
Bruce Johnstone	Leo F. Wormser
D. F. Kelly

The Civic federation, organized in 1894, has been active for decades in opposing in the legislature and elsewhere the imposition of new taxes and excessive appropriations of public money. The bureau of public efficiency was organized in 1910, an outgrowth of the Merriam investigation of municipal expenditures. Its efforts have been principally directed to the opposition of graft and tax wasting in Chicago local governments.

MANUFACTURERS ASK REDUCTION IN U. S. BUREAUS

Representatives of manufacturers' associations from fifteen states, meeting at the headquarters of the Illinois Manufacturers' association yesterday, decided to recommend to congress the curtailment of federal bureaus and also a stated percentage reduction in total appropriations.

A careful survey of all governmental spending activity will be made at once and detailed suggestions are to be made on this information. States represented at the meeting were Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Ohio, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Kentucky, Nebraska, South Dakota, Vermont, Virginia, West Virginia, Florida, and Tennessee.

Robert L. Lund, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, presided at the meeting. All national trade associations and state manufacturers' associations have been invited to attend a meeting in New York July 12 to consider further ways to reduce governmental spending.

ARTILLERY WILL PARADE TODAY TO AID WAR SHOW

The Third United States field artillery will parade in the loop between 12 and 1:30 o'clock today in conjunction with the military show now being held in Soldiers' field. The line of march will be over State, Adams, La Salle, Randolph, and Monroe streets.

More than 15,000 spectators watched the horse jumping event last night, which will culminate in finals on July 4 for the George Washington bicentennial horse jumping championship trophy. The winners of the trials last night were Golden Prince, owned and ridden by Maj. R. B. Nordheimer; second, Arabella, owned by headquarters and ridden by Corporal M. Martikus; third, Juror, owned by headquarters and ridden by Sergt. G. Gaffney, and fourth, Sunny Boy, owned by Maj. Gen. Frank Parker and ridden by Private F. A. Wells.

In the fireworks display a Republican elephant and a Democratic donkey battled, with the former winning.

DIES, AGED 95.

Morris, Ill., June 27.—[Special.]—Miss Juria Hackerson, who came to America from Norway fifty years ago, died this morning, aged 95 years.

BRIDE SUICIDE

MRS. EUGENE SIAPERAS.

Stung by the reproaches of her husband on their bridal night, Mrs. Eugenia Siaperas, 23 years old, yesterday leaped to her death from the thirty-sixth floor of the Morrison hotel. Her husband, Peter, owner of a confectionery at 4230 Archer avenue, attempted to follow her, but was restrained by employés and a guest who burst into the room when they heard his bride scream just before she leaped.

The couple were married Sunday evening in a Greek Orthodox church at 5500 West Harrison street. They attended a wedding party in their honor and registered at the hotel early yesterday morning.

Siaperas told police that the marriage was arranged by relatives, according to Greek custom. His wife was born in Greece and came to America when she was 10 years old.

Siaperas reproached his wife, he told police later, for having been friendly with another man before their marriage. They renewed their quarrel over the breakfast table in their room.

"My wife tore her wedding and engagement rings from her finger and threw them at me, saying, 'There, that's all I can give you.'" Siaperas told the police. "Then she screamed and jumped out of the window." Siaperas was held by police for the inquest today.

EXPECT INDIANA TAX VALUATIONS DROP OF BILLION

Indianapolis, Ind., June 27.—[Special.]—A drop of at least one billion dollars in total assessed valuation of the state of Indiana for 1932 was predicted here tonight as reports were being received from local taxing authorities by the state board of tax commissioners and tax relief associations.

Unofficial reports from taxing officials of more than a dozen typical counties showed prospective falling off in tax valuations ranging from ten per cent to forty per cent.

Some experts estimate the valuation loss for the entire state will run as high as 25 per cent. Taxes are being collected by the state and its subordinate units of government on the basis of a total assessed valuation of $5,072,241,148, and an average for the state at large of $2.75 on each $100 taxable property.

Should there be a 20 per cent valuation loss it will mean total assessed valuation for the state will be diminished $1,014,648,229, bringing the total assessed valuation down close to the four billion dollar mark. This will be the lowest total assessed valuation for Indiana since 1918, when a new tax law boosted the total from $2,233,761,065 to $5,749,258,500.

According to Clyde Timmons of Marion, assessor of Grant county, the valuation drop for that county will approximate 40 per cent. County officials have found the heaviest reductions in valuation are developing in rural sections.

BRITAIN TO GRANT INDIA FREEDOM IN ONE SINGLE ACT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, June 27.—India's constitution, disposing of the complexities of provincial autonomy and federation, will be written and introduced in its principal outlines as one parliamentary bill. Sir Samuel Hoare, secretary of state for India, made this announcement in the house of commons today.

There was a long debate in the house whether the provinces would be given autonomy and later incorporated with the states ruled by the princes into a dominion federation, or whether the whole project would be embraced in the same measure. Sir Samuel revealed that the British government is willing to go the whole way in a single bill.

Meantime the ordinances under which India has been ruled since midwinter will remain in force. The Bengal ordinances suppressing terrorist activities have already been renewed.

TWO RELATIVES OF BAIN TAKE STAND FOR STATE

Tell of Obtaining Loans on Worthless Security.

Two relatives of South Park Commissioner John Bain testified yesterday for the state in the trial of Bain, his two sons, and his son-in-law on charges growing out of the failure of the twelve Bain banks a year ago. The subject of all the testimony was loans made by the Bain banks on securities which have since proved to be worthless, most of which were Bain bank stocks and shares of Bain's subsidiary companies, the Lews company, and John Bain, Inc.

Hugh Leslie, a nephew of John Bain's first wife, told of buying stock in the Brainerd bank, through notes given the West Lawn bank, of which he was then an employé, and later of being made cashier of the Brainerd bank.

Ordered to Sell Stock.

Special Prosecutor Edwin J. Raber questioned Leslie about an order given Bain employés. The substance of it was that "anybody can sell good stock, but you fellows have to get out and sell what we have here or we'll get others who can sell it. Attorney Francis X. Busch, for the defendants, asked Leslie if that order wasn't just a "pep talk" to stimulate sales of all stock. Leslie said he so understood. Raber then asked if it were not true that all the good stocks and bonds were out of the banks at that time. An objection was sustained.

Leslie told of obeying another Bain order to substitute stocks and bonds for mortgages held by customers because Bain had an outlet for mortgages downtown. In pursuance to that order he induced a man named Dietzig, who was not further identified, to accept stocks, bonds, and a share in a trust for a mortgage. Raber drew admissions that all the securities given in the trade have since become in default, but Leslie said at the time he didn't think he "was putting anything over on Deitzig." Deitzig had his mortgage returned by a court order since the closing of the banks, according to the testimony.

Son-in-Law Owes $13,000.

The other Bain relative to tell of his loans was Andrew Morden, 3336 West 54th place, cashier of the Ridge State bank and a son-in-law of Commissioner Bain. He said he owed $13,000 to three Bain banks at the time of their closing; that he used the money to purchase Bain bank stocks, and that he has paid nothing on his indebtedness.

Then followed a series of statements from witnesses who owe money to the Bain banks and who have paid little or nothing on their accounts. All had Bain bank, Lews company, or John Bain, Inc., stock as collateral.

The first of these witnesses was Dr. Hillier L. Baker, 9125 South Dam n avenue, who has offices at 6235 South Ashland avenue. He owes $7,300 to the West Englewood bank, secured by Bain stocks. Attorney Busch, as he did with the others, endeavored to show that Baker was a good risk at the time of the loan.

Plan to Call Every Borrower.

Others who followed Baker to the witness stand were Dr. H. B. Black, 6255 South Ashland avenue, who owes $13,900; John Callahan, 8218 South Ada street, an employé of the forest preserve district for the past 14 years at the present salary of $190 a month, who owes $1,700; Mrs. Hanna Klingelschmitt, 8142 Rhodes avenue, who owes $1,100; Charles Albert Volland, 6012 Justine street, an ice dealer whose indebtedness is $118,000, and Daniel J. O'Conner, 7710 Bennett avenue, who owes more than $15,000.

The state intends calling every borrower of the Bain banks who can be reached, intending to prove that the Bain banks were insolvent long before they were closed and still are insolvent. Raber said this will be a long and tedious process, but is necessary because the defendants contend there was no criminal intent to any of their transactions.

FOUR FIREMEN OVERCOME AT NORTH SIDE FIRE

A fire captain and three pipemen were overcome by smoke in fighting a 3-11 alarm fire early this morning in the three story building at 350 West Erie street. Damage from the blaze was estimated at $7,500.

The fire started supposedly from crossed wires in the basement and spread to the upper three floors, which are occupied, from first to third respectively, by the Western Printing and Lithographing company, the Mordt company, and the Book Shop bindery.

The four men rendered unconscious were Capt. Michael Heffernan, John Stramen, Arthur Reits, and John McGinty, all members of engine company 42. They were taken to the Henrotin hospital. First aid was given to them by Dr. Frank Corrigan and Farrell J. English, both of Cleveland. Dr. Corrigan, a cousin of Marshal Michael J. Corrigan, is connected with the Cleveland fire department; English is a retired fire lieutenant of that city. They are in Chicago for the convention and went to the fire with the marshal.

DELEGATES FROM AUSTRALASIA OFF TO EMPIRE MEET

Ask Preference for Own Products.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

AUCKLAND, New Zealand, June 28 [Tuesday.]—The flower of Australasian statesmanship, politics, and trade sailed for Canada today, determined that the British empire's trade conference, which opens in Ottawa on July 26, shall result in an improved position for its own dominions and an increase in the stability of the empire.

J. G. COATES.

A delegation of fifty, led by Stanley M. Bruce, former prime minister of Australia and now minister without portfolio, will proceed to London after the Ottawa meeting to take up the conversion of debts. H. S. Gullett, federal minister of trade and customs, was with him.

Coates Represents New Zealand.

New Zealand's delegation was led by Premier J. G. Coates, who is struggling with a vast unemployment problem here, and W. Downie Stewart, minister of finance and customs. Economists, advisers, secretaries and special representatives of the dairy, wool and meat industries, accompanied the delegations.

One of the big struggles at the empire conference will be between Argentina and Australia for the British market in frozen meat. Britain is in a delicate situation, since its investments in Argentina almost equal those in Australasia, but the kinship argument is relied on to bring back the essential trade.

The conference will have important political as well as business results and will affect the United States through preference arrangements to be made for importation of primary products into England and manufactured goods into the dominions. The object, according to Bruce, is to lay the foundation for better economic cooperation inside the empire and for building a unit similar to the United States.

He said Ottawa is the stage for laying down an empire policy and hopes it will lead to a greater conference in which other nations will act on a similar basis.

Without the British market, thousands of Australian farms will go out of business, Gullett said, and as yet they have only touched the British capacity to buy. An export trade in farm produce is essential to Australia's survival, he said, and the tariff has closed many other markets.

Politics to Dominate.

Each country wants to encourage its own farms and factories first and then help the other empire units, Gullett continued. Delicate bargaining is ahead in which empire politics will predominate, as the British fleet is a great protection to these dominions and the whole transplanted British civilization here rests on the stability of the mother country.

All are loyalists in this delegation. The so-called disloyalists among the militant Labor groups have no political mouthpiece and were left behind. With J. T. Lang out of the picture as premier of New South Wales, Australia is united now on a policy to keep its contracts and reduce expenses, which means bringing wages to a level where producers can make a profit.

Salesman Shot by Bandit Dies of Bullet Wound

Arthur Bergman, 48 years old, 3224 North avenue, died yesterday in the Franklin Boulevard hospital of a bullet wound inflicted by a robber two weeks ago. Bergman, a salesman, was accosted in his car by the robber at Sacramento boulevard and Lake street. He started forward and the gunman fired, the bullet striking him in the abdomen.

"MY CAR'S SO GOOD-TEMPERED!" said Miss Gunther

An Interview by

MARGARET LANE

Reporter, London Daily Express and International News Service

Miss Ida Gunther, Saginaw, Mich., tells Margaret Lane that she couldn't get along without her car. Miss Gunther has always used Iso-Vis in her Essex.

"THE boss calls me his right-hand man, and my right hand's my car . . ."

The girl with red hair silently slipped the gears and turned into the service station. We swung 'round the drive and over the pit. A boy in overalls grinned and hopped down the steps under the car. "'Nother thousand?" he said. He knew the punctual habits of that particular driver.

We chatted meanwhile. "That's where I work." Miss Ida Gunther pointed across the block to a long building on the edge of the town—which was Saginaw, Michigan, by the way. "Miles Machine Company," she said, "900 South Niagara. I've been there a good many years, secretary, bookkeeper, one thing and another, and some of them all at once."

We peered down into the pit where the Iso-Vis was pouring out in a thick stream. "Marvelous oil," said the red-headed girl; "I've never had the carbon removed from the engine, and she's had tough treatment, tearing about the country all summer and standing in the open all winter. I've had her two and a half years and done 22,000 miles—work and holidays and long trips."

She was one of those cool, efficient young women who always seem to do themselves well. "How on earth I lived before I had a car . . ." she said incredulously, "dances in winter, tennis parties in summer, to say nothing of getting to the office six days a week. Thank goodness my car's so good-tempered! Iso-Vis seems good for its nerves. It's had as much use as one hard-working woman can comfortably give a car, and always kept a cool head on long jobs and started up without a murmur on zero mornings.

"How I wish," said the red-headed girl, sighing, "that I could say the same!"

SEABURY, HERE, BARES NEW YORK GRAFT TACTICS

Would Abolish Privileges of Lawyer-Client.

SAMUEL SEABURY.

Samuel Seabury, counsel to the legislative committee investigating the administration of New York City, yesterday told members of the Chicago Bar association how some lawyers "get along" in New York. With sustained irony he pleaded for amendment of laws to require officials to waive immunity, and amendment of the rule holding communications between attorney and client confidential where the attorney represents a public official in a matter concerning public interest.

Former Judge Seabury told of lawyers who had done a land office business and yet were never suspected by other attorneys of possessing any great legal knowledge. He described how these men worked in the interests of a client desiring a franchise or special power from an administrative board.

Conceal Identities.

"A man seeking the necessary scrawl to a document important to him is told to go to a certain lawyer," Mr. Seabury said. "He tells the certain lawyer he has great admiration for his legal ability and asks that he take the case. The certain lawyer makes the condition that he is not to appear in the case. Instead he singles out an inconspicuous junior member of the bar.

"What the certain attorney does in the meantime by way of visits or over the phone does not appear on records. The results is the young attorney achieves brilliant results—the ablest attorney could not do more; in fact, I suspect he could not do as much.

"Does the client go to the young attorney to pay? No, he goes to the political attorney, who sets the fee at a mere $25,000 or more and directs the client to give the check to the young attorney.

How Big Fortunes Are Made.

"The young attorney takes it to the bank and cashes it. Then he takes the cash to the political attorney, who receives it as his due and offers to share with the young attorney, so he gives him $1,500. And he tells the young attorney to be a good boy and he will get more business later.

"That, gentlemen, is how some relatively unknown attorneys in a few years of political favor have amassed as much as $5,000,000. When we call these men in the investigation and ask to see their books what do we hear?

"The political lawyer tells us he would be glad to have us look at his books and that he'd like an investigation, but he can't because of the ethics of the noble profession of law—the relations of the client and attorney are sacred. The ethics of the profession should not be used to cloak a bribe and preclude investigation by permitting the attorney to refuse to testify."

Mr. Seabury said his only means of attack in the investigation was to put the entire bank accounts of such attorneys in the record and show the similarity in their operations with all business on a cash basis and a young attorney as a shield.

Assails Immunity System.

In an assault on the immunity waiver the former judge said: "When we ask officials to sign an immunity waiver they agree to sign only as to their official acts and when we attempt to delve into wealth acquired by felonious means they shout that that was a private transaction and it is impudent and audacious of us to inquire into their private life. I do not think as much of that provision as I did in a more innocent age."

Mr. Seabury urged creation of state judicial councils of judges, lawyers and some laymen to administer the judicial forces of states so as to assign judges where they are needed and amend rules of proceedure. He urged such councils be empowered to end abuse of immunity and the holding of relations of lawyer and client confidential in all instances.

MRS. J. F. JELKE WILLS 7 MILLION; LEAVES $303,000

Gifts to Sons Explain Discrepancy.

The will of Mrs. Louanna Frazier Jelke, widow of John F. Jelke, oleomargarine manufacturer, made specific bequests totaling $7,000,000, but her estate will not exceed $303,000, it was disclosed yesterday when the document was admitted to probate by Oscar S. Caplan, assistant to Probate Judge Horner.

The discrepancy between the amount of the bequests, made almost entirely to relatives, and the amount of the estate was due to the fact that Mrs. Jelke neglected to sign a new will which she had drawn shortly before her death on May 24. The will which was filed was executed in 1928.

Gives Away Property.

Since that time, it was explained by Raymond M. Ashcraft, attorney for the estate, Mrs. Jelke has given away most of her property, principally to her sons, John F. Jelke Jr. and Frazier Jelke. Two years ago Mr. and Mrs. Jelke arranged a family settlement in which they settled most of her property and a large part of his upon the sons, with the proviso that Mrs. Jelke was to receive an annuity.

Mr. Jelke died Dec. 4, 1931, and his will left the bulk of his estate, valued at more than $2,000,000, to his wife. She renounced her legacy, however, and took only the one-third of the estate provided by law as the widow's share. Since her husband's death Mrs. Jelke had given away more than half of that inheritance, Attorney Ashcraft said.

Mrs. Jelke's will made bequests totaling $171,000 which will be executed as she directed. The remainder of the estate will be prorated according to the directions which she made in the old will for establishment of trust funds for her sons and grandchildren.

Leaves Servants $11,000.

Mrs. Elizabeth Clarke Jelke, wife of John F. Jelke Jr., will receive $50,000 and a rope of 182 pearls. John F. Jelke Jr. will receive twelve valuable old paintings, including a Corot, a Diaz, and a portrait of his mother by Salisbury.

Mrs. Jelke bequeathed $11,000 to three servants and $10,000 each to five nephews and nieces, James William and Virginia Frazier of Bushton, Ill.; Louanna S. McMurray of Los Angeles, Isabelle W. Schmeisser of Baltimore, and Caroline Plant of Hollywood. Trust funds of $30,000 each were established for Mrs. Belle Sain, a sister, and Mrs. Caroline Dean, a niece, both living in Los Angeles.

J. FITZSIMMONS, OLDEST CHICAGO DEMOCRAT, DIES

John Fitzsimmons, 87 years old, died yesterday in his home at 2701 Ballou street. He was said to be the oldest Democrat in Chicago in point of service to the party. YACHT IN RACE FROM NEW YORK TO BERMUDA BURNS; 1 IS DROWNED

New York, June 27.—[Special.]—Five yachtmen, who had set out for Montauk Point, N. Y., in a 660-mile race to Bermuda, returned to New York today, tragedy having checked their dash across the Gulf stream when their schooner, the Adriana, burned at sea and one of their number was lost overboard.

The Adriana, owned by James H. Ottley of Locust Valley, L. I., and carrying, besides Koslay, Gilbert Ottley, and Thomas Potter of Glen Cove, L. I.; Borden Helmer of New York, Henry H. Stehli of Locust Valley, and the Adriana's owner, all well-known yachtsmen, and five professional sailors took fire eighty-two miles south by east of Montauk early yesterday.

Spontaneous combustion in the galley of the schooner started the fire, which spread so rapidly that the men did not have time to don life preservers. Flares sent up were seen by the Jolie Brise, which raced back to the burning boat.

Holding the Jolie Brise down to five knots, her crew skillfully ran her close enough to the burning yacht for the men aboard the Adriana to leap to the deck of the rescue boat.

Koslay and another man jumped short of the deck of the Jolie Brise. Illuminated life rings were tossed to them and the other man was rescued, but Koslay sank from sight. Ten minutes later the Adriana sank.

CZECHO-SLOVAKIA ENVOY RESIGNS; HOOVER ACCEPTS

Washington, D. C., June 27.—[Special.]—The resignation of Abraham C. Ratshesky of Boston as United States minister to Czecho-Slovakia was accepted today by President Hoover. No reason for his action was given by the diplomat in his letter of resignation made public by the state department.

"I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of June 24 resigning as American minister to Czecho-Slovakia," wrote President Hoover. "I must, of course, accept it. I do so with deepest regret because of the distinguished service you have rendered and the fine place you have been able to make for yourself in the diplomatic service."

Ratshesky's letter, dated June 24, read, in part, as follows:

"It is with deepest regret that I tender you my resignation as minister to Czecho-Slovakia. The opportunity you have given me to serve my country in this office under you has brought to me great happiness and satisfaction. I deeply appreciate the confidence you have placed in me."

JOHN HUNTER, OF 4 FLYING MINERS, KILLED BY PLANE

Set Endurance Record at Chicago.

Rosedale, Miss., June 27.—[Special.]—John Hunter, one of four brothers who came out of the coal mines of Sparta, Ill., to break the world's endurance refueling flight record, was killed here today when he was struck on the head by the propeller of his airplane. Hunter was on his way to New Orleans with one of his brothers to open a new air mail route from New Orleans to Gulfport. A heavy rainstorm had forced their plane down yesterday.

Hunter, with his brothers, Kenneth, Albert and Walter, gained recognition in aeronautic circles in 1930 when they shattered the endurance flight record in Chicago. Former coal miners, they learned to fly in a second hand plane which they bought from their earnings.

Make Record at Chicago.

In June, 1930, they took off in their ship City of Chicago from the Sky Harbor airport in Chicago. With John and Kenneth at the controls of the ship, and the other two brothers flying the refueling plane, they set out after the endurance record set by Dale Jackson and Forest O'Brien of St. Louis.

With their exploit gaining the attention of the country, the brothers shattered the former record by 133 hours before landing after spending more than 23 days in the air.

Third Attempt Successful.

The plane was in the air for 553 hours 41 minutes and 30 seconds before it was forced down by a broken oil gauge on July 5, 1930. The plane had flown the equivalent of 40,800 miles during the flight, which netted $25,000 to the Hunters and their backers.

The successful flight followed two previous attempts to break the record, which were unsuccessful. In October, 1929, the brothers were forced down by unfavorable weather after staying aloft for 264 hours over Sky Harbor airport. A flight before this ended after 291 hours in the air when the engine of the Hunter plane refused to function.

"Pigeon Irish" Queer Tale by Francis Stuart

Set in Future Time During Horrible War.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

"Pigeon Irish," by Francis Stuart. [Macmillan.] Published today.

GARLANDED with the most extravagant praise from W. B. Yeats, Liam O'Flaherty, L. A. G. Strong, and Compton Mackenzie, "Pigeon Irish" comes to us today. If our own enthusiasm is slightly less lyric it is probably because we lack something of the Irish temperament, the mysticism which can see in it something beyond the actual tale told in its pages.

FRANCIS STUART.

That tale is a queer one. It takes place in the future in some indeterminate time when there is a great and horrible war being fought in Europe, while on a remote farm in Ireland four people await news of the battle, receive it, and their lives are entirely remade [or unmade] by that news and the events which it causes.

Carrier pigeons bring that news, and the motif of the pigeons runs through the book—three of them, a pidjohn and two pidjanes, who are caught in the mystery of life and their destiny.

Sees Ireland as New Ark.

They are the leit motif to the actual record of three days, whose prologue is the arrival on the farm of the commander of the home force—only one of two men to return unhurt from the front—and his daughter, a strange martyr complexed young St. Catherine. Into the idyl of the person who tells the story and his wife, Brigid, these two are thrust, the one, the man, to play only a minor part and the girl to wreck in her own peculiarly saintly way the lives of all of them.

Catherine has a passionate belief that the only hope for the future of the world is that Ireland should be an ark in the flood of the new scientific civilization which is winning the war, that only by preserving somehow small remnants of the old Irish civilization can the world ever be saved. In a few years the new civilization will have killed itself, she believes, and the old, human one will then have a chance to replenish the earth. Her beliefs are intuitions, however, rather than convictions which are the result of reasoning. She states them in terms of St. Catherine of Siena, and preaches martyrdom as the other Catherine preached it to the young noble of Siena.

The man who records the book understands her psychology, and while his reason fights against her lack of reason his emotion pleads for her intuition. He loves with passion and tenderness his wife, who is a human, pulsating being, but something outside his body and his mind responds to the strange message of the young evangel.

When her father leaves for the front in an airplane [sure to be shot down] the Chronicler is handed the command of the home forces, and as he assumes his responsibilities he finds himself discharging them, not as he normally would have prepared for the inevitable surrender of the country to the conquerors but insisting that his war council make only those terms that will insure the perpetuation of colonies of native culture.

Leads Mutiny at Airdrome.

When he finds that the council is against him he rushes to the airdrome, where he knows the command is opposed to the politicians and the staff, and with the aid of the air force mutinies against the existing staff (or interprets the actions of the staff as open mutiny against the high command embodied in himself). With the return of Catherine's father, dying of his wounds, and the necessity of getting oxygen for him, the Chronicler goes with his wife into the city and falls into the hands of his former colleagues.

Dealing as it does with the most intense human emotions, "Pigeon Irish" has a terrific tenseness about it. It is written wit han outer calm that is extremely deceiving.

The author has chosen a modern staccato style whose effect is gained by simplicity rather than by any peculiar manner of its writing. Mr. Mackenzie says that "it has a quality like beaten gold leaf," a phrase of great beauty and distinction in itself, but not, it seems to be, entirely applicable to "Pigeon Irish."

Lace Trimmed Tailored Suit Is Paris Fancy

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Out of the numerous ways that the French dressmakers have contrived to make the severe tailored suit look ladylike this season, Molyneux's trick of trimming it with lace has been one of the most successful. This is because Molyneux uses lace dyed exactly to match the suit, and because he puts it on with taste and restraint.

Most of the places you can think of to which lace might be attached to a simple suit are all wrong, but the Molyneux way of adding a lace hem to the straight skirts of his suits is quite right in every way. The effect is not striking. The lace hem serves to soften the line where the suit ends and the legs come into visibility, and, being of the identical color of the suit, is extremely modest. No cleverer way of eliminating the hard straight line of the hem has been invented since Chanel created the sawtooth hem some years ago.

The only other place where Molyneux puts lace on his suits is at the neckline, at ends of a scarf, or bordering a small collar. The suit pictured today is one of his most successful lace trimmed models. It is made of a beautiful light green transparent wool, and the moderately flared skirt has a three inch green lace hem. The jacket of this suit has a scarf collar with lace ends. It has bishop sleeves and is the chic wrist length jacket that Paris loves this summer. It buttons at the center front with green buttons.

Good Morning!

[May I remind hot and bothered convention visitors that there are no better places on earth to cool off than Chicago's motion picture theaters?]

The film feature at the Palace bears rather a misleading title. Its reference is not to what you might think, but to a street of skyscrapers. "Behind every great building—a woman's inspiration . . .!" proclaims Larry Baldwin, erector of the multiple storied Baldwin building, in his radio speech upon the festive occasion celebrating the completion of his edifice. Mrs. Baldwin, icy and orchid-ed, receives congratulations calmly, but she knows as well as do her husband and the other woman that Natalie is the one whom he has publicly honored.

"Ah," you say, "one of those triangle things . . .!"

Yes, that's what it is. A "triangle thing" which would draw a distinction between infatuation and love and take the stand that the latter is its own justification for being. The story, adapted from Polen Banks' novel, will remind you of "The Lady Lies."

Kay Francis—gorgeous creature!—is sincere and appealing as the woman who brings happiness and inspiration to Baldwin. How she can wear clothes! Allan Dinehart plays Baldwin in yes and no fashion. Part of the time he's very good and part of it very unsatisfactory—at least, I found him so. Marjorie Gateson does a nice job as the chill Mrs. Baldwin and Gloria Stuart, an unknown, gives promise of becoming the other way through her performance as the Baldwin debutante daughter. Roland Young, as usual, is everything the heart of mortal could desire. He plays a lorn bachelor who also loves Natalie. With what grace, what philosophy this man Young can take a conge! I hope to live to see the day when some woman loves him madly. On the screen, I mean. For all I know—well—for all I know . . .

"Street of Women" is beautifully staged, fairly suspenseful and quite ably directed. The dialogue is just dialogue.

Good stage bill! Phil Baker and a stooge in a box [theater box] keep the house roaring during their act, and there's a Russian tumbling act with a grand, cool background of snow, pine trees, wolf hound, jingle bells, et cetera. If you like fat "Mammy" Ada Brown—she's there to sing for you—and so on. . . .

Remember—
IF sizzling like a hot pertater
You CAN get cool in a theayter.

See you tomorrow.

Charles Breasted to Tell of Biblical Lands Flight

Charles Breasted, executive secretary of the Oriental institute of the University of Chicago, will give an account of his recent 3,000 mile flight over biblical lands tonight in Mandel hall at the university. The lecture will be illustrated by some of the pictures which Mr. Breasted took of the twelve expeditions which the university has working in that area. He is the son of Prof. James H. Breasted, head of the Oriental institute.

Soap Assumes Rightful Place in Style World

Takes to Cycles of Size and Scent.

BY RHEA SEEGER.

DON'T let any one try to tell you that there isn't any fashion to soap . . . fashions in soap are just as illusive and tricky to defy as any new idea about clothes lines or silhouettes and fabrics.

There are soap cycles, too, with a nice skiddy time had by all fashionable bathers, trying out the various new shapes, sizes, and scents. You probably started out on your soaping career with some well recommended scientific stuff that was either so pure that there was nothing left in it but cleaning properties, or so respectable that it couldn't leave even a whiff of scent.

Getting out of your rompers into more sophisticated apparel was marked by a new sort of soap . . . the firm application of terrifyingly large businesslike bars that could and did remove unbelievably large areas of dirt and oil. After that soap was just soap until you reached the years of appreciation, when you deserted the ranks of the soap detestors and swung into line with the great American washing public and shopped for soap as enthusiastically as you do for clothes.

Of course all good soap users have been frightfully razzed, but the fact remains that a lot of good clean remarks about the stuff won't hurt any one. So if you are looking for bigger and better cakes of bath soap in or outside the bathtub, ask to see the new big bars. They are big enough to be seen and found without the aid of anything, spectacles, or maps or blue prints of the body of water which engulfs you.

If you are an esthetic bather, you'll find all kinds of color to match any bathing temperament or temperature and if its fragrance that you want even the "drys" will change bath politics and take a soapy down-ward slide with the submerged but satisfied "wets," after they have seen these grand smelling blobs of cleanliness that are scented with lilac, carnation and pine needles.

There simply can't be anything synthetic about these perfumes . . . you can close your eyes and luxuriously sniff all the old fashioned freshness of yards full of blooming lilac bushes. On the hottest dawn you can soak in fathoms of water and soap bubbles and really believe you are splashing in some icy mountain stream with cool clean sentinel pine trees all around you. If you yearn for spice, try the great big cakes of fragrant carnation that will, or ought to start you out in the mornings with a grand lot of zip.

You can buy boxes of rose colored and shaped soap, scented with rose perfume, packed just like a florist would send them out . . . you can even buy boxes of blue roses three full blown beauties that would cause a furore in any florist shop, but you will still buy only soap, even though it is made to look and smell like your favorite flower.

Nice big, round, fat bars scented with rose geranium have been revived for those shoppers that could not forget that old time fragrance.

Travelers can now gad all over the globe and live up to their reputation for demanding a bath before they eat [that is if you can make the natives understand your sign language for water] as some soapy genius has invented a best seller, a book of soap leaves, each page will bubble and foam enough to clean a pair of dingy hands, a chapter will tackle your face and ears and leave your features with a good washed up appearance, and while nothing was said about soaking - cleaning the body, two or three volumes could easily efface the average amount of foreign culture.

Bible Group Prints 4 Million Copies of Christian Books

The 38th annual meeting of the Bible Institute Colportage association of Chicago, founded by D. L. Moody in 1894, was held yesterday. The association reported the publication and world-wide distribution of 4,143,911 copies of Christian books, scripture portions, and gospel tracts during the year. Eight languages are employed in its publications. Much of this literature was sent free to the patients in 1,000 hospitals, inmates of 1,200 prisons, and to those in the out-of-the-way places of this and other countries. About 12,800 boys and girls in the southern mountain schools received a New Testament for memorizing Bible passages. The association has several hundred part time volunteer colporters. Officers elected were Frank F. Taylor, president; Henry P. Crowell, vice president; Aymer F. Gaylord, treasurer, and William Norton, secretary.

A STRAIN ON THE FAMILY TIE

Society Late for First Day at Arlington

Smart Visitors Delayed by Convention.

BY JUDITH CASS.

DURING luncheon and the running of the first two races at beautiful Arlington Park, which opened its season yesterday, it appeared as if the opening session of the Democratic convention had attracted all but the most ardent horse racing fans of Chicago society. But about the third race the crowd began to assemble, and by the middle of the afternoon there was as large and almost as fashionable a crowd in the Post and Paddock club and the Jockey club inclosure as there usually is at the opening of Arlington.

The lion of the occasion was Mayor Walker of New York, who arrived about 3 o'clock and who hardly had time to watch the horses race, so busy was he being taken from box to box and from table to table, being introduced to every one. It was impossible to tell with whom he was, for he was with so many persons, but I saw Vincent Bendix, whose house guest Mayor Walker is, in the Post and Paddock club, so probably he was the host at the party of which Mayor Walker was a member yesterday.

There were smart costumes galore, and opinion seemed to be divided about which of the women looked the most chic, although the consensus seemed to be that Mrs. Morton Schwartz of New York headed the list of fashionably gowned women. She wore a grass green silk suit with white pique revers and flower and a large white hat, tilted at exactly the right angle and with an extremely low crown, simply trimmed with a green ribbon.

Mrs. Ernest Byfield also was very smart in a gown of red and white printed silk, and she wore the perkiest little red sailor hat imaginable, with a nosegay of gay posies shooting up the back in a most bewitching manner.

Mrs. Schwartz had been to the convention first, and later attended the races with Mr. Schwartz, Admiral and Mrs. Grayson of Washington, and Mrs. Claire Booth Brokaw of New York.

Laurance Armours Hosts to Party

Mr. and Mrs. Laurance H. Armour were hosts to a party including Mrs. Nelson Slater of New York and George Garrett of Washington.

Mrs. Byfield was with a party of women including Mrs. Frederic McLaughlin [Irene Castle], who always is a picture and who yesterday wore a brown and white printed silk dress with white organdy trimmings and a large shiny brown straw hat. Among others with these two attractive women were Mrs. Albert Barrell, Mrs. Montefiore Stein, and Mrs. Edgar Born.

Mrs. Armour's gown was of beige silk with long full sleeves of brown and she wore a brown hat, brown gloves, and brown slippers—a very stunning outfit.

Mr. and Mrs. Silas H. Strawn had with them their two daughters, Mrs. James A. Cathcart and Mrs. Wesley M. Dixon. Mrs. Cathcart wore a pink silk dress with a raspberry velveteen coat and a beige hat and Mrs. Strawn wore a pinkish beige frock and a brown hat.

Pretty young Betty Marshall, subdeb daughter of the Benjamin H. Marshalls, was lovely in a large black hat and a diagonally striped printed gown in yellows, reds, and black, and her sister, Mrs. Richard H. Fleming, wore a white flannel suit with large brass buttons, a blue scarf, and a white turban. Nine year old Lois Thompson, daughter of the John R. Thompsons, was not only the youngest person in the Post and Paddock but the most excited and happy, for she won on every race except the third. Her mother wore a lovely gown of beige chiffon with a short jacket to match trimmed with beige fox and a brown hat.

Watch Races From Club

Miss Libby Chase, Mr. and Mrs. Austin Niblack, Mrs. Britton I. Budd, Mrs. Farwell Winston, Mrs. Leonard Florsheim, Mr. and Mrs. John Hertz, Miss Helen Hertz, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Ettlinger, Dudley Field Malone, Mrs. Truman W. Brophy Jr., Miss Eleanor Kirkland and a party of her school friends, including Miss Betty Babson, Miss Frances Jeffery, Miss Mary Harrington, Miss Frances Lasker, and Miss Barbara Fortune were among those present.

Others who watched the races from the veranda of the Paddock club or the boxes included Mr. and Mrs. Teller Archibald, Mrs. Weymouth Kirkland and young Weymouth, Miss Marjorie Horton, Miss Edith Behr, Miss Eleanor Wheeler, Mrs. Ralph Hubbart, and her daughters, Miss Charlotte Hubbart and Mrs. Jack Schweizer of New York; Miss Betty Jane Norcott, Mrs. Charles W. McNear and her daughter, Mrs. Warren Towle; Mrs. John B. Barnes, Mrs. Henry Hooper, Mr. and Mrs. John D. Black, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Cady, Mr. and Mrs. Clarke Dean, Mr. and Mrs. Horatio Hackett, and Mr. and Mrs. Warren Wright.

As soon as the last race was run the waiters got busy laying the table for the stag dinner Laurance Armour and John Hertz gave at the club for about 44 distinguished visitors, and Chicagoans, Mrs. Armour and Mrs. Hertz and Mrs. Roy Carruthers superintended the placing of the low bowls of garden flowers and the candles on the long table.

Society at Convention

Society either went without lunch yesterday or lunched before the opening session of the Democratic convention and arrived at the Stadium shortly after the session was tardily called to order. The young women who reached the convention hall long before the doors were open in order to sell Democratic bulletins or hand out repeat signs satisfied their hunger around

Sitting Position Can Be a Truly Decorative One

Antoinette Gives Hints on Its Achievement.

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Yesterday, we were talking about sitting up instead of sitting down. We think the topic due a little longer run than just a one day one, because we do see so many girls who are charming as can be when they're on the move, but who sit down with distressing pictorial results.

A good looking girl reclining easily and gracefully in a comfortable chair is an alluring picture. But this seems to be one of those pictorial advantages that women gloss over for some reason or other. We heard more about it in the extremely short skirt reign. While the lengthened skirts have contributed no mean share to the picture of seated women—you have only to take a ride in any public conveyance or attend a gathering, formal or informal, to realize that much more effectiveness could be introduced into the decorative scheme.

The woman inclined to fat or well advanced in it has this burden added to her others. She has to sit without spreading all over the place. She can be a really vulgar picture with no intention whatever to be so. Her best placing of the feet is directly in front of her, soles of the feet on the floor—and knees close together. Leg crossing ware better abandoned until the diet has worked its silhouette magic.

It does not seem necessary to tell women not to sit this way or that. Women know when other women make attractive pictures of themselves. They know even better when the picture is not attractive. So, the study becomes merely an observation test and comparison of oneself with the faults or graces of others.

We gain our first impressions of people from the way they stand, walk, and sit. And first impressions have a disconcerting habit of sticking. Friends, of course, will not acquaint us with what we ought to know. They might stop being friends if they dared get that rought with us. So, a long mirror and an open mind and a chair placed in the line of reflection is our hopes of improvement. We study our standing posture with mirror help. Why not be as exacting about a graceful pleasing picture of oneself sitting?

Watch out for that ugly doubling up movement so many find necessary before being able to sit down. Watch for any graceless gestures of foot and leg after you're seated.

Eleanor Lamont Becomes Bride of C. C. Cunningham

Englewood, N. J., June 27.—(AP)—Miss Eleanor Allen Lamont, daughter of Thomas W. Lamont and Mrs. Lamont, was married at a brilliant society wedding today to Charles Crehore Cunningham, Harvard graduate, of Milton, Mass. Mr. Lamont, a partner in the House of Morgan, gave the bride in marriage. Bishop Lawrence of Boston performed the ceremony in the First Presbyterian church of Englewood.

I Like You So Much

BY MAY EDGINTON

SYNOPSIS.

Gold Franklyn calls Dr. Elverton, who has a surgery in a poor district of London, to attend her indolent young half-brother. The doctor offers to give Barney Pierce, a well to do accident victim, a lift to his destination, and Pierce waits while the doctor makes his call.

INSTALLMENT II.

A PRETTY CREATURE IN DISTRESS.

The girl opened a cupboard and found an old tweed coat. Elverton looked at her again, at her bare head above the upturned collar. "Glorious hair," he thought, "glorious." It was gold, but not pale gold; deep and warm, waving strongly.

"A word, Miss Franklyn." He came out of the room with her, pulled the door to after him, and they stood on the dim-lit landing together, she all poised and quivering for flight. She would run through the streets, run back; she would hurry—hurry—hurry! He knew.

"Take things as easily as you can," he advised shortly. And then: "About your half-brother—what's his name? Not Franklyn?"

"Alen."

"About him—you're doing what all you women do—propping him up, taking care of him——"

"Our parents are dead. I promised faithfully——"

"I daresay. Never mind promises to the dead. Break 'em. Shove that boy onto his own feet; you were promising him you would as I came upstairs; let him sink or swim. That's what he wants. He'll swim. Get yourself a job away from him. Well, I can only advise, can't I? You run along and I'll have a final word with him."

"Thank you, doctor."

He turned into the room again. "Now then," he said roughly. "Why can't you behave yourself and look after yourself? Why do you put it all on a girl? What you need is to be kicked around for a bit—and damn hard, too. Pity you didn't break your neck when you fell just now, and this sister of yours would be well rid of you."

He stared at the young man, and met a smile of derision in the eyes that were extraordinarily like the girl's eyes. Gip looked back at him impudently, smiling his graceless smile.

"O, doctor! You frighten me! You great rough man!"

"Looks of a gigolo; hide like a mule's," the doctor thought; and with a hard stare of contempt turned away. "I'll be in early tomorrow morning to see you're able to get off to this job I hear about. You'll be there, all right!" He walked out.

Barney Pierce sat in the old car in the dim-lit street considering the unselfishness of a doctor with such a practice as such a neighborhood afforded him. The man looked tired, too, frayed, worn out. He should have asked a bigger fee when he saw a patient coming in who looked worth robbing! There wouldn't be much money in the house he had just entered. Pierce looked from the car with a contemplative curiosity into the house, the landlady having left the street door open. Then quite suddenly he saw the girl running down the stairs, running through the hall, running down the chipped steps to the street, clutched in her old tweed coat. One of the infrequent street lamps was directly in front of the house. She came into its radius, not looking, not seeing the man in the car, intent only on her goal, whatever that was. He saw the slight wind lift her corn colored hair which turned into a tossing aureole for her little white face. How slim she was! Too slim! . . . What a fragile thing, slipping away so intently into the half-darkness toward the lighted shouting turmoil at the end of the street! He leaned from the car looking after her. "The first woman I've wanted to speak to for . . ." his mind left the months or years unnumbered. He sat back again, and half cynical reflections visited him, of the kind of women who usually crossed his path, of the pampered, the avaricious, the successful; the spoiled darlings. He was in the habit of thinking very acutely and not too kindly about women. But a girl such as he had just seen did not come into the other categories.

"Sorry to keep you," remarked the doctor, opening the door on the other side of the car, and sliding in behind the wheel.

Pierce awoke. "O, but you've been quick."

The doctor sat for a moment brushing his hands over his face as if brushing weariness and vexation away before he started the car. He was angry, still hearing that youth's derisive drawl.

"I could have been quicker," he said grimly, "and more useful."

They moved off, winding through quiet back streets toward the West End.

"Nothing to see around here," said Elverton. "Pretty dull."

"Well, on the contrary. Out of that dismal place you went into came a rather wonderful girl."

"O, yes. That was the girl who telephoned me."

"Where was she running to?"

"Chemist's. I gave her a prescription."

"What was the matter?"

"Rotten young brother—half-brother, she said—got drunk and bashed himself about a bit, and she's crazy for him to be fit to go to a new job in the morning."

"Will he?"

"I'll see to that," said the doctor grimly. "I'll be round there early." Adding: "Though they're nothing to me, and I'm a fool to do it."

"Why do you do it?"

"O well, you know, women . . . A doctor in my class of practice comes across some pretty plucky women; nearly all with more trouble than they can carry."

"I don't meet that sort."

"Probably not. I see female—call it sacrifice; call it surrender; what you like—all day. That girl, now, was hungry."

The doctor was aware that the large bored man beside him sat suddenly at tension.

"Hunger's nothing new in my experience," said he, "the boy isn't worth her trouble though. Now if she were practically starving herself for a child I shouldn't have felt so mad just now. That would be reasonably comprehensible."

"What's their name?"

"Her's is Franklyn. Curiously enough, 'Gold' Franklyn. Did you see her hair?"

"Yes."

"She's quite a lovely girl."

Barney Pierce was silent for a moment. Then he said: "I suppose you're not able to do anything?"

"What could I do? I've seen a dozen such hard cases today. The only reason you and I are talking about it at all is because she's a pretty creature."

"I see plenty of pretty creatures."

"Because she's a pretty creature and we all hate to see the world knock a pretty creature about," said the doctor, now smiling wryly. "I told her which chemist to go to and I put a sign under my initials that he knows to mean: 'If she can't pay, I will; dispense all the same'."

They emerged into a main street. "I put a darned good kick into it," said the doctor with satisfaction.

"Into what?"

"Prescription. It's an emetic. The damned young blighter!"

"Good for you. Does she work at anything?"

"Out at the moment, like a lot of other people. That meant she couldn't pay, of course."

Pierce reflected: "Can I ask him to quote a fee, and look after them?" But while he was thinking the doctor went on: "I'll be glad to get out of it all for three months. I'm off next week as ship's doctor—for a holiday and some sunshine; putting a locum in here. To New York; and then Havana. Heavens! I'll be glad to go!"

"New York—Havana; and next week? What boat?"

"There's only one boat from this side on the trip then, the Mercuria."

"I thought it must be. I've a friend—a woman—going in her. One of the very pretty creatures! You must look after her a bit; she'll amuse you." The doctor glanced shrewdly, sideways at his face, and saw a flicker of indulgent contempt on it. "Her name's Mrs. Hathaway; a widow."

"Thanks. I may mention your name?"

"Do."

That carried them on no further with Gold Franklyn, though the doctor knew that each of them, in his different way, had taken her problem seriously into his mind. Only, for himself, conditions obliged him to throw off such problems as quickly and completely as he could. There would be nothing he could do. Pierce thought along different lines: there was so much he could do. He could stretch out a hand here; press a button there; give an order; write a check . . . and he could remap somebody's world. But his own world had taught him to be infinitely cautious; to be hard; to grudge mercies.

GASOLINE ALLEY—THE WETS WIN

WHILE IN WINCHESTER, VA., WE MUST SEE THE BUILDING WASHINGTON USED AS HIS SURVEYOR'S OFFICE AND IN WHICH HE LIVED LATER WHEN HE ERECTED FORT LOUDOUN TO PROTECT THE SETTLERS FROM THE INDIANS.
I WISH THE ALLEY RANGERS HAD IT.
A BASTION OF FORT LOUDOUN—IT NOW HAS A GIRLS' SCHOOL BUILT ON IT. THIS FORT WAS BESIEGED BY INDIANS WHO THOUGHT THE COLONISTS SHORT OF WATER. WASHINGTON HOWEVER HAD BEEN HAVING A WELL DUG. WHEN IT WAS COMPLETED THEY TOSSED THREE BUCKETS OF WATER A DAY OVER THE PARAPET IN SIGHT OF THE INDIANS, AND IN TWO DAYS THERE WERE NO INDIANS LEFT.
THEY'LL KNOW IT'S NO USE IF THEY SEE WE HAVE WATER TO WASTE.

Sally's Guests to Hear Noted Explorer Talk

BY SALLY JOY BROWN.

Did I tell you, boys and girls, that Frank Buck, the famous explorer, will appear in person at the R-K-O State-Lake theater on Thursday, July 7, the day of our party? He'll tell us a lot of interesting things about his various trips to the jungle when he was trapping wild animals for some zoo, or circus, or museum, and he'll tell us about the exciting things that happened when they were filming his picture, "Bring 'Em Back Alive."

I know you'll enjoy seeing and hearing this man for whom the treacherous thickness of the jungle and the wild beasts that inhabit it are not held in fear. For him life beyond the reaches of civilization holds a strange fascination and he is happiest when he is living in a rudely constructed hut, thatched with palm leaves, in a place where the strange noises of a jungle night lull him to sleep. Or when he is paddling down some unknown river or scouring the haunts of the rare animals he is out to get and "bring back alive."

His life has been a series of the most amazing adventures, any one of which you'd thrill to hear. Frank Buck will tell us a lot of them at the State-Lake theater on July 7. All this will make his exciting picture even more interesting.

If you want to share in the fun we'll have on that day you must write me a letter which will reach my office no later than next Thursday morning. On that day I'll select the hundred boys and girls who will be my guests on the following Thursday.

In writing please remember to write your name and address plainly, tell me your age, and address the letter to Sally Joy Brown, CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Chicago.

Leisure Time Used Wisely Great Comfort

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

This unpopular depression is a popular subject of conversation. But, surprisingly enough, it does not always take a depressing turn.

One angle of it that is full of interest is the observing of what people, mostly men, are doing with their enforced leisure. Many of them are devoting themselves to talents or crafts for which they formerly had only evenings and Sundays—or they are learning new professions and trades so they may have more than one occupation to fall back on.

In prosperous times we talk about the importance of a wise and happy use of leisure. In times of stress and anxiety and unemployment the man who has a special interest or a hobby finds that it helps him over hard places by occupying his mind or hands or both.

Recognizing the demoralizing effect of empty hours in which to brood and fret, those who know human nature and mental hygiene have formed all sorts of classes to develop cultural interests and mental and manual skills among the men and women of all ages who are out of work.

All this emphasizes how great a resource is the power to use leisure wisely. And that fact emphasizes to us, who are parents or educators, this thing: That schooling must be more than a drilling in the three R's, more than just a practical, wage earning, utilitarian bookish thing.

Our children's schooling must be true education. And true education makes life a rich thing of many interests, which can never mean an empty aimless leisure.

Wrap Over Type of Dress Promises Desirable Appearance of Slimness

WOMAN'S AND MISS' DRESS.

The wrap-over type dress is accepted by smart women for its slimming qualities, and this sort of dress is equally becoming to youthful and matronly figures. Printed tub silks, cotton mesh, piqué, and sports weight linen are cool and lovely for summer wear.

Studio Seeks Female Tarzan for New Film

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., June 27.—[Special.]—The success of M. G. M.'s "Tarzan of the Apes" has started a run.

Not only is M. G. M. going to film a second, third, and fourth Tarzan adventure film, with possibility of expeditions to Africa to make the settings authentic, but the studio, having happy ideas of combining sex appeal and adventure thrill, is varying the recipe to film a feminine Tarzan story, with a beautiful, athletic, magnetic, all conquering white woman overcoming lions, serpents, apes, storms, wild natives and hostile renegades. It will be titled "Fury of the Jungles," but picking out the actress who can do all this successfully is harder than picking a name, and the heroine isn't named yet.

M. G. M. tried to buy film rights in one of Edgar R. Burroughs' "Tarzan" stories which was held by Sol Lesser, an independent producer. M. G. M. wanted these rights in order to complete their control of all the apeman adventure subjects, but when Lesser suggested $75,000 the proposal was dropped. Now Lesser, it is reported, will do a Tarzan himself.

James Pierce, former University of Indiana football star, who played "Tarzan" in the original silent production of the apeman's adventures five years ago, may be cast again in some of the lord of the jungle rôles he used to film, but not until after he has finished minor rôles as a member of the Marx Brothers' cast in their current comedy, "Horsefeathers."

There's a note of irony in the fact that Columbia studios, in using forty Chinese to draw rickshas in scenes for "War Correspondent," didn't pay the ricksha pullers any more per day than the other Chinese extras were paid to ride in them.

Sylvia Sydney brought back a novel wristwatch from New York. It's made of wood.

Bruce Cabot, radio's new "find," won his film debut by kissing 73 young actresses. He had hung around the studio lot for some time, hoping for a break, when Charles Richards, casting director, needing a foil to play opposite girls taking their screen tests, picked Cabot. His kissing technique got so good that David Selznick, head of the studio, began watching the boy in the tests and not the girls, and suggested Cabot for a job. That's how he got into "Roadhouse Murder," and "Kong," which he is making right now. The studio has placed him under contract.

"In the ice, and the sun did not shine tonight," was the cable received from W. S. Van Dyk and the M. G. M. expedition in Alaska for the purpose of filming "Eskimo." Arrival in the midnight sun region means the start of filmwork is not far ahead. Van Dyke's troupe is scheduled to be frozen in and to spend an entire year at a location some hundred miles up the coast from Point Barrow.

RADICALLY NEW! Phantom Kotex
SANITARY NAPKINS (U. S. Pat. No. 1,857,854)

AT LAST! A radically new design in Kotex sanitary protection.

IT is called PHANTOM KOTEX. Why? Because the ends are so flattened and tapered that it leaves no outlines even under the closest fitting gowns.

Kotex features retained

It is soft and comfortable, even after hours of use; wonderfully absorbent; treated to deodorize; can be worn, with equal protection, on either side; disposable, easily.

Insist upon getting genuine Kotex, when you buy it already wrapped. Each tapered end of the new pad is stamped "Kotex" now—so you can't get inferior substitutes. And this new improvement comes to you at no increase in price!

NOTE: Kotex—now at your dealer's—marked "Form-Fitting" is the new Phantom Kotex noontime with snatches of refreshments in the lobby.

Mrs. George F. McLaughlin and Mrs. Harry B. Clow Jr. munched hot buttered popcorn while waiting for bulletin buyers at the entrance to the exclusive stretch of boxes opposite the speaker's platform. Mrs. Henry Field nibbled on a sandwich and Miss Marian Clow stopped to purchase a candy bar. Mrs. McLaughlin, Mrs. Clow, and Miss Clow all wore white short sleeved dresses, white hats, and sports shoes. Mrs. Field wore a brown and white diagonally striped dress of thin silk jersey.

An unofficial Ritchie delegation, composed of friends of the Maryland governor, occupied a small section of boxes at one end of the Stadium and did a little cheering of its own when Robert F. Carr brought Mr. Ritchie over to be introduced all around. Robert F. Carr Jr., Mrs. Kersey Coates Reed and her son and daughter, John and Mary Reed, and Miss Florence Carr were in Mr. Carr's box.

Mrs. Field Attends

Just below them sat the governor's loyal friends, Mrs. Stanley Field, Mrs. Lockwood Honore, Mrs. Frank Hibbard and Mrs. Ralph R. Richardson. Not far away were Mrs. Howard Linn in a navy crêpe dress polka dotted in red, green and yellow and a navy hat banded in the same golden yellow as the badge she wore, and her house guest, Mrs. William Wallace Lanahan of Baltimore, wearing a sports costume of white and strawberry crêpe.

Old friends of Louise Tyler, who has resided in Cleveland since she became Mrs. William Steinwedell a few years ago, called greetings to her as she made her way to a box with her mother, Mrs. Ralph M. Shaw. The former Miss Tyler wore a brown and chartreuse printed frock and a brown straw hat and her mother wore a chiffon dress and jacket with tiny white checks.

Repeal Workers Near Chief

A group of the repeal workers, including Mrs. Russell Kelley, wearing navy blue and white; Mrs. Valentine Bartlett, in a brown and chartreuse print frock, and Mrs. Vincent Healy, in a yellow and blue flowered crêpe, sat in a box not far from their chief, Mrs. Charles H. Sabin. Mrs. Leslie Wheeler, Mrs. William H. Mitchell, and Miss Eleanor Holden were in a box adjoining Mrs. Sabin's.

There was much visiting at Mrs. Woodrow Wilson's box on the part of friends of the former first lady of the land as well as Chicago friends of her companions, who included Mr. and Mrs. Morton L. Schwartz of New York, Mrs. Cary T. Grayson, Mrs. Claire Booth Brokaw, and Mr. and Mrs. Conde Nast (the former Leslie Foster of Chicago). Mrs. William Gibbs McAdoo and her tall slim young daughter, Ellen, went to Mrs. Wilson's box as soon as they arrived and sat with her until the session started. Mrs. Wilson, by the way, did not wear her customary orchid corsage.

Mrs. Alfred E. Smith, in a brown printed frock and wide brimmed straw hat, received numerous friends in the box where she sat with her daughter, Mrs. Emily Smith Warner. Pretty Mrs. Melvin A. Traylor held court, too, in a box occupied also by dark eyed Melvin Jr., young Billy Valentine, and Mrs. John F. Hagey. Mr. Traylor sat with them part of the time.

Mrs. Edward N. Hurley, in hydrangea blue chiffon, had as box guests her daughter, Mrs. William A. Ryan, her daughter-in-law, the junior Mrs. Hurley, and Mr. Hurley's sister, Mrs. James C. O'Neil of Los Angeles.

Mrs. Cecil Barnes and Mrs. Samuel T. Chase, in one of the upper boxes, waved to their sister, Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, over on the speakers' platform.

Visitors Guests at Dinner Parties

Hostesses at dinner and supper parties for convention guests last night had the satisfaction of seeing their entertainments go off pretty nearly as they had planned them. Mrs. Wolcott Blair, despite the fact that she decided last week not to try to give any affairs for convention visitors because she and Mr. Blair are leaving on Friday for Europe, was able to make hurried arrangements for a dinner party at her Lake Forest house for fourteen guests, including Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Slater, Mrs. Charles Cushing, Mrs. Harold R. Talbot, and several other eastern friends of the Blairs.

Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, stanch Democrat and grand hostess that she is, gave one of the informal buffet suppers for which she is famous at her State street house. The guest list, numbering between sixty and seventy, was composed of both Republican and Democratic celebrities and local as well as visiting personages of opposite political views.

The Stanley Fields' dinner at their town apartment for Mrs. Charles H. Sabin and the supper party at the Tavern with Charles F. Glore and the J. Russell Forgans as joint hosts also took place as per schedule.

Parties planned for tonight include Mrs. Linn's dinner for the William Wallace Lanahans, which probably will be held at the Lake Shore drive residence of Mrs. Linn's father, Edward T. Blair, although Mrs. Linn herself wasn't sure last night whether she might make a last minute move to the Casino, and Mrs. Waller Borden's dinner at her residence for Mr. and Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry and Mrs. John Nicholas Brown of New York.

Chicago Club at Charlevoix

The Chicago club at Charlevoix, Mich., has opened its 52d season and Chicagoans who have cottages at the club are having them opened and put in readiness for the summer. Mr. and Mrs. Albert Keep and their infant daughter, Alice, are settled in Charlevoix in a new cottage, nestling in and half hidden in the luxuriant foliage of the club grounds.

Mrs. D. Mark Cummings and her sister, Mrs. James C. Sharp, are at the club for a fortnight's stay and the Frederick H. Scotts of Hubbard Woods with their son, Edward, arrived on Saturday for an indefinite sojourn.

Among those who are expected to open their cottages before the fourth of July week-end, which is always a very festive one at the resort, are Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. King, Mr. and Mrs. William B. McIlvaine, Mrs. Charles L. Pierce, the Solomon A. Smiths, the John Stuarts, Dr. and Mrs. Eugene S. Talbot, and Mrs. A. H. Whiting. Miss Louise Burke of New York, is visiting her sister, Mrs. John P. Wilson, and is to extend her stay over the week-end.

The name of the popular Charlevoix club was well chosen, as the majority of its members during the last half century have been well known Chicagoans. One of the founders was the late Melville E. Stone.

There are many instances where the third and fourth generations of Chicago families that were associated with the early history of the club are today members of the same colony. The Edward G. Shumway family is represented in the fourth generation by the grandchildren of the Solomon A. Smiths and also by the John Stuarts' grandchild, as the Robert Stuarts were among the charter members of the club.

Miss Jean Dorothy McVoy, daughter of Mrs. Fortunato Jerace of Chicago and Rome, has been appointed a member of the social program committee of the American Floating university, on which 500 students will sail from New York next October for a seven months' tour of the world.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY

Washington, D. C., June 27.—[Special.]—President and Mrs. Hoover are back at the White House from their camp on the Rapidan, where they spent the week-end. Herbert Hoover Jr., who arrived from California Friday night and spent the week-end with his parents, went on to New York last night, having returned with his mother ahead of the President.

Mrs. Gann, sister of the Vice President, returned this morning fom Providence, where she spent Saturday and Sunday with the Vice President's daughter, Mrs. Webster Knight II., having spoken in Newport Friday and been entertained there with Mrs. Knight. Mr. and Mrs. Gann opened their Cleveland Park home today after spending the winter at the Mayflower. The Vice President has gone there with them and closed his apartment at the Mayflower.

The Polish ambassador, Mr. Filipowicz, entertained at luncheon today the Polish flyer who failed to make his trip across the Atlantic recently and Mrs. Stanislaus Hausner, who came up from Florida yesterday where Mr. Hauser was deposited by the steamer which picked him up at sea. They will go on to New York tomorrow.

Shaw, president of Michigan State college; Ernest Buehler, Swiss consul, and George Kolombatovich, Jugo-Slav consul general. The Parkers gave a dinner at the Stevens preceding the show, which was dedicated last night to the Swiss and Jugo-Slavs.

This evening [Scandinavian night], the Parkers' dinner and box guests will be Mr. and Mrs. Scott Durand, Albert Blake Dick, Reimund Baumann, Danish consul; Olaf Bernts, consul of Norway, and Oscar C. Lundquist, consul of Sweden.

The gardens on the Lake Forest estate of Mrs. Harry M. McIntosh will be opened to the public on Saturday, July 9, from 2:30 to 5 o'clock for the benefit of the Lake Bluff orphanage. If rain interferes, the affair will be postponed to the same hours on Sunday afternoon.

The gardens, at 1130 North Sheridan road, are famous for their rose arches and formal stretches with a series of pools and fountains. This will be the first time they have been opened for public inspection. A group of North Shore women interested in the orphanage will serve refreshments with all charges included in the small admission fee.

Exchange Sale at Lake Geneva.

The Woman's Exchange of Chicago announces a sale to be held on Thursday from 9 until 5 o'clock at the Lake Geneva residence of Mrs. Henry C. Bartholomay and her daughter, Mrs. Bartholomay Osborne. The Bartholomay residence, Black Point, has many gardens which are now at the height o ftheir early summer glory.

In the absence of Mrs. D. Mark Cummings, Mrs. Charles W. Dempster and Mrs. Samuel T. Chase will be in charge of the month-end home dressmakers' sale at the White Elephant rummage shop, 27 East Ohio street, Thursday.

The Lester Armour's four children are ensconsed at the Deerpath inn in Lake Forest until the new house their parents are building on the lake is completed. Mr. and Mrs. Luke Bradley of the Pearson hotel and Mrs. William D. McIlvaine of 1100 Lake Shore drive are among the Chicagoans who will move out to the Deerpath next Friday to remain until fall. The Charles W. Dempsters were at the inn over last week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Andrews of 1209 Astor street have opened their summer residence near Duluth. Later in the season Mrs. John Madden [Ann Andrews] of Kansas City will spend a month with them.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Kilroe of Lake Forest have returned from a winter spent in Winter Park, Fla. On their way north they stopped off at Washington for the graduation from the Holton Arms school of Mrs. Kilroe's eldest daughter, Alma Louise Acher, who is sailing shortly for a summer abroad. The middle daughter, Frances Acher, is going to camp near Asheville this week and the youngest, Mary, will be in Lake Forest with her parents for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mather-Smith II., of Oakland, Fla., are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son, Charles Frederic Mather-Smith III., on June 19. Mrs. Mather-Smith was Miss Winifred Cagney of Chicago before her marriage last August.

Mary Coggeshall Becomes Bride.

Announcements were received yesterday of the marriage of Miss Mary Coggeshall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Trovalo Chester Coggeshall of Henry, Ill., to Wendel Speer Kuhn of Chicago, on Saturday, at Henry. Mr. Kuhn, who has been one of Chicago society's popular bachelors, and his bride will be at home after Sept. 1 at 179 East Chestnut street.

Stuffed Baked Sweet Potato Tempting Dish

Vegetable Unusually Good and Cheap Now.

BY MARY MEADE.

Today I want to have words about a potato that's not a potato—or perhaps I should say about a potato that really has more right to that name than do the big Irish "mealies," but which is actually not even a distant relation of said Irishers.

The sweet potato [the answer to the above puzzle] is not a tuber at all, but simply a delightfully flavored, fleshy root which started out ages ago with the name of "batatas." But housewives even then were apparently seeking least common denominators, and so, since their white, mealy tubers looked something like these sugary brown fellows, they neatly borrowed the name and called them all "potatoes."

But while sweet potatoes are, of course, vegetables, they are not "just another vegetable" to be served in the same meal with the white variety. For they are quite starchy and sugary enough in themselves to supply the main energy giving dish of the meal, without any help from Irish potatoes, rice or macaroni. And as another feather in their caps, they're practically a staple vegetable—answering market roll call at least eleven months of the year.

Right now sweet potatoes are unusually good and cheap and offer 'steen delightful dishes, all the way from canapes and soups to puddings and pies—with plenty of leftovers for waffles, muffins, salads, omelets and casserole dishes—but that's getting ahead of myself.

Perhaps you've noticed that sometimes when you order sweet potatoes you draw fat, orange meated ones which are soft, moist and sirupy on cooking. Then at other times the groceryman will amaze you with quite a different variety—long, greenish yellow, mealy fellows as dry as the others were wet. The first, most favored and most frequently found in the south, are better known as "yams," and make a delightfully rich, colorful dish which needs little additional sugar, liquid, or fat to make it pleasantly palatable. The dryer variety are more common citizens of the northern states.

The simplest and to many the most satisfactory methods of preparation are those of steaming, boiling, and baking. For the first method merely peel, slice thick, sprinkle with salt and steam over hot water till tender, about forty-five minutes. The boiled sweets, left whole and cooked in their jackets, take about thirty-five minutes' time. For baking, rub the clean skins of evenly shaped, medium sized potatoes with fat, and bake in a moderate oven about forty-five minutes.

Stuffed Irish potatoes you've all tried—so why not stuffed baked sweet ones? Merely bake as usual and, when done, cut off one side, scoop out the potato, and mash till fluffy with cream, a little butter, salt and paprika, and pile back lightly into the shells. Sprinkle with snappy cheese and brown in the oven.

And creamed sweet potatoes—have you tried them? They're great mixed with a chopped hard cooked egg and a little parboiled chopped green pepper. And broiled sweet potato slices are something else to wax warm over. Simply skin the raw numbers, cut lengthwise in half inch slices, dot generously with butter and seasoning, and broil under an oven flame. Serve with a sprinkling of sugar—or better yet, a fluffy horseradish cream.

There are small sweet potato puffs, too, to be served as a garnish for a meat or potato dish. Beat two eggs into three cups of mashed potatoes, add a little rich cream and seasoning to taste. Now with the aid of a pastry tube form the mashed potato into plump golden rosettes on a greased baking dish, spangle with paprika, and slip into the oven to brown.

CARAMELIZED SWEET POTATOES.

If you've tried all the varieties of candied sweet potatoes your cook book or neighbors advise, start caramelizing them for a change. Melt one-half cup of sugar in a heavy frying pan, stirring constantly. Add a tablespoon of boiling water and two teaspoons of butter, mix well and reheat. Into this mixture turn cooked whole potatoes or cooked sliced ones to simmer and become well coated with the sirup. Serve very hot with a dusting of minced parsley. The use of maple sirup or brown corn sirup gives another interesting quirk to the standard candied sweet potato recipe.

Now for one final deliciousness:

SWEET POTATO MARSHMALLOW PUFFS.

2 cups cold mashed sweet potatoes.
1 teaspoon salt.
¼ teaspoon pepper.
1-3 cup rich milk.
1 egg, well beaten.
¼ cup milk.
Finely rolled graham cracker crumbs.
12 marshmallows.

Whip the potato, seasonings, and rich milk until fluffy but still extremely thick. Using two generous tablespoons of the mixture for each puff, form it into balls around each marshmallow. Roll in the cracker crumbs, then dip in the mixture of egg and milk, and then again in the crumbs. Drop into deep fat, 385 degrees F., and fry until golden brown.

There's no room for further ideas; but for those who would like to write for them, we have waitings recipes for sweet potato cutlets, sweet potato pudding, and a delicious crusty sweet potato pie.

Sensible Girls Let Admirer Be Serious First

Better Empty Hope Chest Than Broken Heart.

BY DORIS BLAKE.

Brunette asks, along with many other young women, about the propriety of accepting dates when supposedly going steadily with one young man.

In order to arrive at any sensible conclusion, one would have to know just what is meant by going steadily with one man? On this important item I have reason to believe many of you young women are—well just a bit misguided. You jump at the steady company conclusion too readily. A young man, we'll say, meets you, likes you, takes you out once or maybe twice a week, for a couple of months. Meantime you haven't been overlooking any of the usual encouragements.

You've been arranging to include said young man in whatever social doing happen your way. You're glad of the assured escort. You've probably told each other how much you enjoy the occasions together. The boy may have been a bit extravagant in his praise and endearments. But nothing has been said of marriage. Just a grand good time is being had by all.

At this point, I find that the girl is crushed to earth if in the course of things a second girl appears and exerts a magnetism the boy cannot resist. The first girl clamps down hard with her "steady" claims. The boy is surprised that the girl takes it this way. He is not in a position to marry. Perhaps never thought of it in connection with either girl. Is just drifting along on love's young tide. And that's all there is to it. Putting in a good time until age and circumstances make marriage more convenient.

The wise young woman does not believe all is marriage grist that comes to her mill. She sizes up the young man, his circumstances, his words or lack of them about real love and marriage—and works out her program from that. She, better than any one else, is in the position to decide whether dates with other young men might not be desirable. If she isn't in love with the steady, other dates are well to have. Being desirable in other men's eyes never did a girl any harm—providing, of course, she doesn't become a light hearted butterfly.

Unless there is marriage talk—serious, that is—or unless one likes her steady so much that no other boy would seem a good substitute, better take all the fun that is coming your way while you're young and able to enjoy your good times.

Cosmopolitan Choir Gives Excellent Recital at Church

The Cosmopolitan Community church choir which will take part in the Chicagoland Music Festival Negro chorus of 2,000 voices on Saturday night, Aug. 20, at Soldiers' field, gave a splendid recital last night in the church auditorium at 5249 Wabash avenue. George A. Gullatt directed. A 16-piece orchestra, conducted by Clarence Cook, accompanied the singers with Thelma Webb at the piano. George R. Garner, Negro tenor, sang "Fluceran Le Stelle" from "Tosca" by Puccini. He was recalled several times. Other performers were Muriel Farmer, pianist; L. Sterling Todd, organist; Samuel MacAlphine, reader; Johnnie H. Lyle, violinist, and Ernestine Lyle, his mother, contralto. Dr. Mary G. Evans, pastor, paid tribute to the work of the choir. P. M.

Dahlias Need Care Now for Fall Blooms

Priest Offers Hints on Fighting Disease.

BY PAUL POTTER.

Careful selection of dahlias and their proper treatment during the next few weeks will reward gardeners with gorgeous fall blooms if the plants are healthy and kept that way.

This advice from Father P. P. Oswald, in charge of the immense gardens maintained at Techny, comes from a veteran dahlia grower and enthusiastic member of the Central States Dahlia society whose first annual show will be held in Chicago, Sept. 17 and 18.

Several diseases and insects may stand in the way of keeping this healthy condition in the dahlia bed, he points out. Red spider, which attacks elms and some of the evergreens, may be one. The small common form is controlled with sulphur, while the larger, European spider sometimes calls for an oil spray that will not harm the foliage.

"Heavy streams of water applied frequently will do much in preventing the spread of this trouble," says Father Oswald. "Neglected dahlias also may have thrips and aphids, which are controlled by a spray of 1 part nicotine to 400 parts water."

The worst trouble dahlias have is caused by leaf hoppers, he points out. Tiny greenish jumping insects suck the pep out of every plant they attack, and may be seen on the under side of the leaf. These hoppers also give the pernicious disease of yellows to many plants resulting in the large dahlia leaves showing a yellow rim.

Some dahlias are more resistant to hoppers than others. Others are stunted and send out side branches which do not develop a flowerbed. The hoppers are fought with such sprays as Bordeau mixture, pyrethrum sprays, and various forms of pyrethrum sprays sold under trade names. Some of the oil sprays also are effective.

For other minor injuries to dahlias, the stem borer and stunt may be held responsible. A couple of drops of carbon disulfide may be injected into the stalk, or the borer cut out of a small triangular opening. Stunt may be caused by rootgall, lack of root development, or some constitutional disease of indefinite nature.

Unless the dahlias are expensive, most gardeners prefer to get rid of those plants suffering from diseases or seriously injured by insects. In spite of such handicaps, however, dahlia culture is gaining in popularity in the Chicago region, especially for those who follow Father Oswald's suggestion of growing the easiest varieties first.

CONOCO

The Dramatic Story of a Motor Oil

—the Only Oil of Its Kind in America and the First Fundamental Improvement in Lubrication in 25 Years!

WHEN Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil was brought out in 1929, bold claims were made. Advertisements said this new oil, refined from paraffin-base crudes and made by the exclusive patented Germ Process, was superior to any other oil made from any crude by any method. They said it gave the safest, surest lubrication you could buy.

Now, two and a half years later, every claim stands proved!

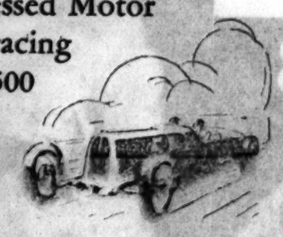
Proved on Pike's Peak

After exhaustive tests on Pike's Peak in 1929, American Automobile Association observers reported that use of Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil resulted in: 1, marked reduction in rate of motor wear: 2, higher compression; 3, lower operating temperatures; 4, greater stability; 5, greater gasoline mileage; 6, less oil consumption; 7, less carbon deposits; and 8, reduced crankcase dilution. (AAA Certificate No. 2268).

Sensational Achievements at Indianapolis and Altoona

At the 1930 Indianapolis Races, Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil won a notable victory, being the first regular stock motor oil to place "in the money" in this speed classic. Later, at Altoona, the cars that finished third, fourth and fifth were also lubricated by Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil, the same oil sold at any Conoco Station.

Again in 1931, at Indianapolis, Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil lubricated a racing car that ran the 500 miles without a stop, breaking eight world's records. In December, 1931, Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil was used to lubricate a Diesel-motored truck that broke seven world's records for non-stop, non-engine-stop and non-refuel truck runs. AAA certificates testify to these victories.



Unusual and Dramatic Experiences of Motorists Add to Conoco's Proof

Ever since Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil was introduced, voluntary testimonials have come to Conoco from appreciative users. Motorists have reported runs of 10 to 67 miles, without damage to engines, after complete loss of oil from crankcases through broken oil lines or lost plugs. Others report driving great distances in extremely high temperatures without abnormal motor heat. Others testify to longer service without repairs after changing to Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil.

Conoco's Exclusive, Patented Germ Process Gives It Many Advantages over Other Oils

The secret of Conoco's superiority on every count is the patented Germ Process, which no other oil can use. The Germ Process gives Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil more "oiliness" than any other motor oil, regardless of crude source or manufacture! This extra oiliness not only insures a smoother motor by cutting down friction but reduces the effects of crankcase dilution.

In addition, the Germ Process makes Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil the only oil that actually penetrates and combines with metal surfaces! Oils not Germ Processed drain away during idle periods, leaving parts unprotected during the starting period, when almost HALF of all motor wear occurs. A "Hidden Quart" of Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil stays up in your motor and never drains away! It gives your motor longer life with fewer repair bills.

You want the safest, surest, most economical lubrication for your car. Change to Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil, which offers you proof, not just claims, of superior performance in every phase of motor lubrication. Look for stations that display the Conoco Red Triangle. There you'll find Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil and other Conoco quality products.

ARLINGTON OPENS; GOLD STEP WINS AT 17 TO 1

GERMAN BOXER IS JUST NO. 165 TO JOE ROMAN

Chicago Champion Socks 'Em All.

When eight fighting champions of Germany march on Soldiers' field July 26 for their international amateur boxing bouts with Chicago's Golden Gloves team, quite naturally they expect to meet American boys. It is true they will fight eight Americans, but none can date his citizenship farther back than one generation.

JOE ROMAN.

Joe Roman, Golden Gloves featherweight champion, is no exception. While Joe was born in Everman, Tex., and has lived in Joliet, Ill. since he was a year and a half old, Spanish blood courses his veins. Black haired, dark of complexion, quiet spoken, almost retiring, Joe is one of Chicagoland's veteran scrappers. Joseph Schleinkofer of Munich, champion of Germany's featherweights, is only a name as far as Roman is concerned.

Loses Only 29 in 164.

One hundred and sixty-four fights—that's Roman's record. Of these he's lost 29. For three years he marched through the amateur ranks with an occasional setback, but almost always with success when titles and honors were at stake.

Joe is a Golden Gloves veteran of 1930. No other on the squad this year, except Adam Smith, the perennial champion of Rockford, can match his record. In 1930 Joe battled through the Golden Gloves trials to the finals, losing the championship, but he earned a place on the squad which fought New York at the Chicago Stadium. Joe won his bout that night and contributed to the 10 to 6 victory, the first Chicago had scored against New York.

In 1931 Roman again returned, intent on winning a championship. He entered the sectional tournament at White City, a favorite. But a stranger, Don Gonzales, also of the Spanish race, born in the Iberian peninsula, had come to town. Gonzales of Cleveland defeated Roman at White City and continued on to win the Chicago title, intercity title and international honors against France. Gonzales was a sensation, but many remembered that he needed four hard fought rounds to nose out fightin' Joe Roman in the sectional trials.

Fights Through Classy Field.

Roman wasn't named on the 1931 squad. Gonzales, Tony Muscarello and Joie Kleko were the 126 pounders who trained for the intercity fights. And when Chicago won 13 bouts to 3, a record tots, two of those victories were turned in by Gonzales and Muscarello. Roman would have done as well had he had the opportunity.

Last spring Joliet held its own sectional tournament. And Roman, once more, won the featherweight title. Fighting at the Stadium in the Tournament of Champions Roman came through a field which boasted of such boxers as Jimmy Walsh, Janesville, Wis.; Joe Romano of Rockford, Geno Salvatore, Streetor; Jimmy Dunnington of Chicago, and George Van Der Heyden of South Bend. In New York Roman faced Dick Carter, a sparkling

BY EDWARD BURNS.

The erring White Sox yesterday were easy victims of the Detroit Tigers—the score being 9 to 3—but they made great strides in their Herculean drive to establish themselves as baseball's erringest aggregation. Five juicy errors were added to their imposing total, which has reached 17 for their last four games and 45 for 19 homes games since they opened here with the Washington Senators on June 7.

The personal race between the two so-called keystone boys, Jack Hayes and Carey Selph, tightened up to the point where there's liable to be a dead heat. Jack, after five errors in three games, went into a slump yesterday and didn't make an error, whereas Carey booted two. Jack has made nine errors since the opening of the Washington series and Carey now is only one behind him.

May Miss Detroit's Record.

Red Kress, with six errors over the same span, virtually dropped out of the competition, especially since he now is playing right field, where chances for misplays are rarer. Sullivan, though he mussed up two yesterday, has a total of only five errors, since the Washington series, but has been handicapped by not playing regu-

Cubs Smash Out Five Singles; You're Right, Cards Win, 4-1

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

St. Louis, Mo., June 27.—The poor old Cubs were all choked up with antibase hit toxin again today and they concluded their long tour through the provinces by losing to the world champion Cardinals, 4 to 1. It marked the third trimming in four appearances here, the thirteenth in 21 starts during the journey and about the twentieth time that the Chicagoans have demonstrated conclusively that their lack of attack eventually will be fatal to pennant hopes.

The Cubs' batting today was almost mild enough to be termed gentlemanly. Five hits, all singles and two of them scratches, was the total of nine innings of swinging against Paul Derringer, the 1931 star who for the last month has been fattening other fellows batting averages instead of his own pitching record.

Three Get to Third.

Three of these safe taps were scattered through the first three innings and the others didn't come until near the close. The Cub who scored was one of the three able to progress as far as third base. In the last seven innings one Chicagoan saw the scenery from that point and that happened only because of a pass. Truly it was a sad afternoon.

The Cardinals, to get this decision and put themselves only three games away from the leading Pirates, had to step on their old companion, Burleigh Grimes. They paired hits on him for a run in the first inning and the Cubs tied the score in the second. The champs broke that deadlock with another pair of hits for a run in the fifth and then took advantage of his loss of control in the seventh to fetch home another tally on one hit. The run after this was charged to Jakie May. Grimes, to judge by the total of hits against him, wasn't bad, but he appeared that way because of the Cubs' inability to bolster his cause with a few runs.

Single Greets Grimes.

Grimes didn't have to wait long to learn that the Cardinals weren't going to show him any sympathy just because he once happened to be one of them. Burleigh's first pitch of the day was slapped into center by Flowers for a single. He went to second on Martin's infield out. Then Frisch took a lazy swing and arched a single into the open space behind short. Flowers scoring. A double play started by Herman on Collins' grounder cut the inning short.

The Cubs had a little fun for themselves in the opening inning, but it didn't do them any good. Herman beat out a bounding hit after one was out. He got around to third on an infield out and a wild pitch and died there when Stephenson bounced to Flowers. Better luck was encountered in the second and the Chicagoans tied the score with one hit. Moore led off with a pass and Grimm's out advanced him to second. Hartnett popped up a foul, but Jurges crashed a grounder toward short and Moore stood in front of the ball just long enough to confuse Gelbert. The drive caromed off the shortstop's shin for a hit and Moore scored.

More Trouble For Grimes.

Grimes was in trouble again in the Cards' second. After Watkins had been tossed out, Orsatti lined to right and Cuyler showed none too much skill in fielding the wallop. The ball bounced off the wall for a double. Jurges raced behind second to knock down a bounding single by Mancuso and thus hold Orsatti at third. The

CRUISING SCOUTS PITCH CAMP AND UNDRESS SPUDS

BY BOB BECKER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Yorkville, Ill., June 27.—A new village sprang up on the historic old Fox river this evening when the Chicagoland Boy Scouts on the fifth annual cruise sponsored by THE TRIBUNE pitched their tents and settled down for the night about a mile and a half above Yorkville.

Before 6 o'clock nine little pup tents had been staked out in a beautiful grove of maples, elms, red cedars and willows on the bank of the river, and long before the call to dinner was sounded the first camp of the cruise was shipshape for the night. The eighteen scouts who are making the combination canoeing and camping trip had just enough canoeing to whet their appetites.

Leaving Chicago at 11:30 daylight saving time, via the Burlington route, they piled off the train at Aurora with their duffel bags, ready to tackle the Fox.

Following a greeting from Arthur Ekstrand of the Shabbona council of Boy Scouts, they put away a quick lunch and then launched their canoes a short distance below the city.

Eleven Craft Take to Water.

By 2 o'clock every orange painted 16 foot canoe in the fleet of eleven was afloat with the eager scouts waiting for the go signal. When the signal was given there wasn't a shirt visible in the party, as the boys had stripped down to paddling outfits for the trip downstream in the hot June sun. At Montgomery the canoes slipped through the old dam and soon were swinging around the old Bull Head bend above Oswego, where the scouts began to dip into the fascinating history of this stream, which many decades ago played such a prominent part in the early settlement of the prairie country.

At Oswego the boys saw the ruins of the old grist mill on the west bank of the river and the site of the ford which crossed the Fox. A short distance below the mill on the opposite bank of the stream a marker on the spot where Chief Waubansie lived in his cabin was another reminder of the early Indian and white settler days along the Fox.

Stories about Chief Waubansie, who abandoned his log mission house in the Indian village above Oswego in the year 1832, were to be told to the scouts tonight, when the first camp fire and story telling hour of the trip were to be held after the evening meal.

Another Day, Another Camp.

The schedule calls for a one night camp here above Yorkville and then tomorrow the expedition will pack up and paddle down stream to another camp site. Although these husky lads are thinking in terms of swimming, eating, indoor baseball, bird study and other amusements that go to make up full days in the outdoors, they also find that the cruise means kitchen police, dish washing, potato peeling jobs and gathering firewood, because everybody has to work.

The boys who drew the first kitchen police assignment this evening learned for the first time how many dishes a party of 24 could use and how many cooking pots have to be cleaned every meal. The canoe cruisers have a busy day ahead of them tomorrow. Following breakfast and the completion of camp duties they will paddle down stream to the bridge at Yorkville, but before checking out in the bridge they have to wrestle their canoes over the Yorkville dam just above it.

In the Wake of the News

ARLINGTON OPENING.

FRIEND ARCH: Well, Arch, I nosed around out at Arlington Park's opening just like you said I should do, so, of course, I looked for the Tammany notables who came out from the Democratic convention a little late.

WARREN WRIGHT.

When I found them they were munching sandwiches in a box in the Post and Paddock section and I sort of wondered about that for the dining room is not far away, and besides that luncheons are served on the club veranda.

Now, of course, they didn't bring their sandwiches from downtown and, even if times are pretty hard, their hosts surely would buy a luncheon for them if they were hungry. I've read in some editorial somewhere that politicians always are hungry. Then again, Arch, I thought perhaps this was some new social fad from the east, perhaps in vogue at Belmont Park or Saratoga, and that way out here we just hadn't learned it yet.

I thought I had better find out in case you asked me about it or in case our photographer happened to snap any views of the box party. Here's how it was: You see, they arrived late and they could see better from their box than from the Post and Paddock club. They didn't want to miss any racing, so the sandwiches were sent over from the dining room. The Tammany chaps really didn't bring them with them from downtown.

Among those I noticed were John F. Curry, head of Tammany, and Judge Olvaney, who used to be; John McCooey, Mayor Jimmy Walker, Dudley Field Malone, and Samuel Untermeyer. John J. Raskob and others were expected out for a big dinner given at the club in the evening.

About then, Arch, it seemed that I had better try to get you some news about the horses that perhaps French Lane wouldn't have time for. Anyway, I'm not a political reporter. In the very first race there was a highly regarded colt called Warren Jr., named in honor of Warren Wright's son. Mr. Wright, you remember, is an Arlington director as well as head of the Lincoln park board. Now this colt was backed down to 3 to 4 and he didn't win like any 3 to 4 shot either, from the usual point of vantage. However, I went way down in the $2.40 section, where you can see more clearly, and Warren Jr. looked better to me than he will look in the chart.

Every time Jockey Earl Steffen struck him with the gad in the stretch to overcome a determined challenge, the colt bounded forward, but at other times he acted a little green and as if he didn't know he was expected to stay in front. I'm telling you this because he looks like what the horse men call a "right smart colt."

Now I don't need to tell you about the big stake race which saw Jamestown out of the money and incidentally caused considerable Tammany coin to remain in Chicago, because French was just about speechless when Gold Step won. So was nearly every one else in the press stand. Over in the grand stand section there were a lot of sharpshooters who had invested $2 on the field, and you know how a $2 better like I am yells when he gets back $35.96 for his two spot. They made a lot of noise, all right, when the odds were posted.

That was about the best noise of the afternoon, Arch, although considering times and conditions I think you would regard the opening as very successful. It came up to expectations of the management. Attendance was about the same as opening day last year and volume of mutuel play off around 25 per cent. I'll go out again some day soon if you want me to. Regards.

HARVEY T. WOODRUFF.

JAMESTOWN HAS MOST BACKING; WINDS UP FIFTH

Old My Dandy Races Him Into Ground.

BY FRENCH LANE.

They beat the mighty Jamestown at the gala opening of the Arlington Park Jockey club racing season yesterday.

They also beat the western champion, Polydorus, and they beat a lot of other fleet sprinters.

Gold Step, a $3,000 selling plater two months ago, but the Inaugural handicap champion of the world, came from behind with an electric burst of speed and won by a head in a finish that would thrill any race crowd.

My Dandy Whips Jamestown.

Polydorus was second, Epithet was third, My Dandy was fourth. And Jamestown? Well, he finished fifth, faltering badly in the final strides, stopping as if he was not up to this kind of a race, although his workouts had indicated he was in the best condition of his career.

The thousands who flocked to Jamestown with their best wishes and with so much support from their pocketbooks that he was made the odds-on favorite at 4 to 5 can blame fleet old My Dandy for Jamestown's beating.

He was the villain in this turf plot. For he also was coming back to the races after a long rest and showed so much of his old time speed that fleet as Jamestown was in the early stages he could never get more than a couple of inches in front of My Dandy.

Polydorus Moves Up Third.

Two bulldogs never hung on more stubbornly and they rounded into the stretch noses apart, while Johnny Maiben had moved up into third place with Polydorus on the extreme outside. Gold Step, a field horse, had been running third but faltered when Polydorus came with his sensational rush.

Maiben tried to save ground by taking Polydorus from the outside to a path in next to the rail, which had been left open when Jamestown and My Dandy turned for home a trifle wide. Although he faltered just for an instant, Gold Step a second later was coming again like the wind and Jockey Henry Schutte was applying the leather with all the strength he had in his arms.

In midstretch, while Polydorus was weaving in and out and then in again, Jamestown had given up the struggle and Gold Step raced past him. My Dandy was now leading the pack and Maiben had found room next to the rail with Polydorus, which was running like a wild horse. He was flying. Gold Step stepped past My Dandy. So did Polydorus, and so did Epithet, which had moved up from sixth place. They finished in that order, although Polydorus was gaining at every stride and gave the impression that he was the best horse in the race.

Backers Collect $35.96.

Gold Step ran the seven furlongs in 1:24 1-5. It wasn't particularly fast time, although the early pace had been very speedy, for Jamestown was at the half in :45 4-5. The six furlongs was run in 1:11. In the mutuels Gold Step, grouped in the field with My Dandy and Silverdale, paid $35.96 to win, $7.12 to place, and $3.94 to show. Polydorus, a red hot second choice, paid $3.48 to place and $3.06 to show. Epithet was at $4.32 to show.

Gold Step is owned by Mrs. H. Fairbanks of Boston. She claimed him at Aurora for $3,000. A few days later Gold Step raced to victory in the $5,000

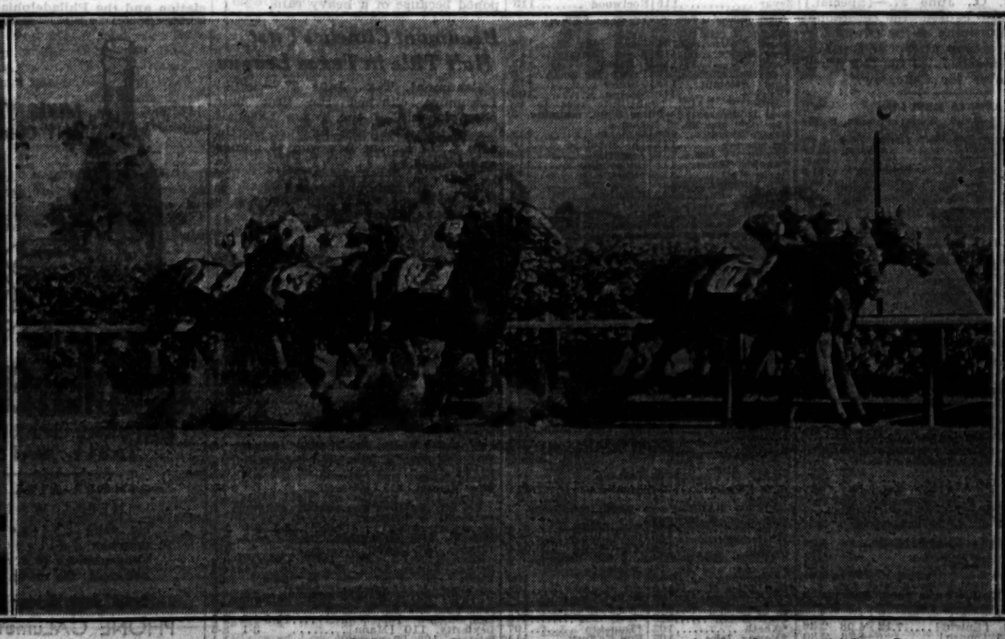
FIELD HORSE HAS THE RIGHT STEP TO CATCH ARLINGTON GOLD

Mrs. Laurance Armour invites Mayor Jimmy Walker of New York to be seated and view the races. The dapper mayor was one of the many prominent Democrats who attended the opening of the Arlington park season yesterday.



Now who would think that Gold Step, a field horse and once regarded as a lowly plater, could beat Jamestown, Polydorus and other fleet sprinters? But that's just what is happening in the Arlington Inaugural handicap. Gold Step is getting the decision by a head from Polydorus, with Epithet third, My Dandy fourth, and Jamestown fifth.

Edith Behr, left, and Marjorie Horton dine between races in the clubhouse at Arlington. They worked up their appetites cheering for horses that did not do so well and are storing up new energy for the feature race. [TRIBUNE Photos.]

New York, June 27.—[Special.]—Mr. Sponge, Joseph E. Widener's sprinter, demonstrated his ability to carry weight when the son of Luke McLuke picked up 126 pounds and scored a length and a half victory in the Primer handicap, six furlong feature event on the Aqueduct program today. Commuter finished second three lengths in front of Stagecraft, stablemate of the winner. Footmark completed the small field.

Footmark, with Mills up, gained a slight lead at the start with Commuter and Mr. Sponge closely lapped. Commuter passed Footmark on the far turn and Mr. Sponge moved up with him. When straightened out for the long stretch battle, the Luke McLuke gelding, under urging from Mack Garner, breezed past the early pace maker to score well in hand.

Mr. Sponge Backed at 7 to 5.

The winning entry was well backed at 7 to 5 and the winner turned the six furlongs in 1:12 2-5.

Action, favorite in the field of five platers which contested the mile and a sixteenth of the fourth number, proved a driving winner over Gloria Maris, with Sun Mission third. Action set the pace throughout and Jockey Mills rated the colt along in front. When Gloria Maris challenged in the stretch drive Action had enough in reserve to hold the filly safe. Sun Mission held on well to save the show money.

Night Patrol Walks Away.

Night Patrol lost all chance when he walked away from the barrier, but once in stride closed courageously to finish fourth, a neck behind Sun Mission. The winner closed at 9 to 5 and the time was 1:46 flat.

Gold Step Is Winner; Pays Backers 17-1

Washington Park inaugural handicap. The Arlington Inaugural had a gross value of $7,050.

Fast Track Surprises Crowd.

The opening crowd was close to 18,000. The spectators were amazed when they arrived to find the track lightning fast. Overnight rains had visited nearly every section of Chicago except in the immediate vicinity of the Arlington race course.

There were notables from all parts of America in the crowd and even on Arlington's biggest days there has seldom been so much gaiety in the clubhouse enclosure and post and paddock sections. Betting was down, which was to be expected. The big players were there but not betting the hundreds and the thousands they threw into the mutuel machines a few years ago.

The plungers of yesterday were enjoying the racing as much as in other years, but they were doing their speculating down at the $2, $5, and $10 windows.

Warren Jr. Justifies Plunge.

The nearest thing to an old time plunge came in the first race on Warren Jr., owned by Warren Wright of Chicago, one of Arlington's directors. This youngster, a son of Bud Lerner which Mr. Wright bought from Harry F. Sinclair last fall, had been working sensationally over the Arlington course.

The big crowd had heard about it and although many of the famous stables of the country were represented in the maiden race Chicagoans backed the Wright colt with great confidence and from an opening price of 3 to 1 he was battered down to 7 to 10.

Warren Jr. won all right after coming from behind with a game rally in the stretch, but he gave all his backers heart failure, for he was able to get up only in the last stride to beat Admiral Cary Grayson's Hope to Do by the shortest kind of a nose. Mrs. John Hay Whitney's Poppyman finished third.

Chicago Victory Streak.

Two other Chicago victories came in rapid fire order in the next two races. It appeared as if the Chicagoans were trying to show the invading forces from the east that we have some fast horses in these parts.

Miss Marr, racing for Mrs. Emil Denemark, beat Supreme Sweet by a nose in the second race. It was the most thrilling finish of the opening program, for in third place, a neck back of the two leaders, came Portcodine, going fastest of all.

Then in the third race along came Mrs. John Hertz's fleet Pair by Pair, a candidate for the Arlington classic, to win handily from War Glow, Sazerac and four other three year olds. He led from start to finish and he was also an odds on choice at 9 to 10. He has grown considerably since last year and showed good courage as he shook off one challenger after another.

Late Date and Suntica Renew Rivalry Today

Seven candidates for the $15,000 Arlington Oaks to be run Saturday will clash in the Bouquet purse at a mile over the Hertz course this afternoon. Suntica, the Illinois and Kentucky Oaks winner, will go to the post as will the Audley Farm stable's Late Date. Suntica beat Late Date just by a nose in the Illinois Oaks. Canron, Kakapo, and the Polonaise are others which will have a following in today's Oak's warmup. But the two big shots in the Oaks—Top Flight and Evening—will remain on the sidelines this afternoon.

The Arlington Oaks shapes up as the best 3 year old filly race to be held in America in the last 20 years.

Post time for the first race at Arlington will continue to be at 2:30 o'clock, until the completion of the Democratic convention, it was announced by Joseph McLennan, racing secretary.

A telegram was received from Belmont Park that A. C. Bostwick's stable, headed by Mate and Proteus, will leave there this morning and arrive at Arlington tomorrow. Mate is an intended starter in the Stars and Stripes handicap, to be run Monday which is expected to have a gross value of more than $30,000.

Edward R. Bradley came from New York and will remain throughout the meeting. He has a dozen horses here in charge of Trainer H. J. Thompson. He was at the Arlington course at 6 o'clock yesterday morning to see his horses go through their training paces.

Among the many visitors from New York were Herbert Bayard Swope, Mayor Jimmy Walker, John F. Curry, chieftain of Tammany hall; Phil Donohue, Tammany treasurer; former Mayor Frank Hague of New Jersey, Col. Abe Hallow, well known commissioner; Willie Gerdes, former metropolitan commissioner, and R. Phecian Howard, all purple clad publisher of the New York Press.

Arthur B. Hancock, prominent Kertucky throughbred breeder, served as honorary steward with the regular officials, C. J. Fitz Gerald, and George Brown Jr. Mr. Hancock will serve this week and will be followed in the stand by Admiral Cary T. Grayson.

MARRINER BETS RING FUTURE ON RETZLAFF BOUT

Is He Smart? Get Answer at White City Tonight.

Tonight's Card

Les Marriner vs. Charley Retzlaff [10].
Harvey Mortenson vs. Charley Young [5].
Larry Udell vs. Pat McLaughlin [5].
Marion Matusek vs. Jack Robinson [5].
Jack King vs. Holly Dukelsky [5].
Virgil Beml vs. Johnny Lullo [4].

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Les Marriner, who played football just in front of where Red Grange wanted to tote the ball for dear old Illinois, is a gambler. Les will shoot the works tonight at White City.

LES MARRINER.

Marriner fights Charley Retzlaff. Ten rounds are proposed, although there are many who doubt there will be that many, what with a couple of big right handers taking swipes at each other.

Les is an intelligent young man. Still, his gamble seems out of order to the old men of boxing. But it may be the smartest kind of a play. Les hasn't fought for nearly three years, except for an unimportant bit of punching with Biff Bennett, a dough-boy. So it does seem rather foolish to step out against Charley Retzlaff, whose right hand has piled up knock-outs from the lakes to the Atlantic. Retzlaff is highly regarded as future title material.

Pop Says His Boy Is Smart.

Well, is Marriner foolish? Pop Marriner, who dashes water on his son, pulls out the smelling salts and performs such chores as the occasion requires in the corner, thinks not. He didn't raise any foolish boys, says Pop. He reasons that Les is a great puncher. He proved it against Chuck Wiggins back in 1928 when Chuck was still carrying steam. Les has won 20 of his 26 battles by knockouts.

What's the use of hammering at setups, Pop says. There's no money, hardly training expenses, and a bum's head is as hard as Sharkey's or Schmeling's. Les' hand, which was fractured, the cause of his ring vacation, might be injured again when he was fighting for a bag of pop corn. So, Les is taking a smart gamble.

Maybe a Knockout!

If he whips Retzlaff, if he knocks him out (there's a thought!) there is bound to be a couple of thousand dollars in it for a scrap with a ranking heavyweight. Marriner's gambling instinct doesn't stop with willingness to fight Retzlaff. He's taking a chance on tonight's purse. The two heavyweights will receive 50 per cent of the net. They have agreed to split this 60-40, the winner getting the larger share.

Charley Retzlaff and his astute manager, Jack Hurley, who brought Billy Petrolle to a lightweight championship fight with Tony Canzoneri in two years of campaigning, aren't worried about the outcome of tonight's brawl. They believe they are covering a sure thing; that Charley can whip any heavyweight and that Marriner's an easy proposition.

You can have your choice. Mique Malloy hopes for the best, which will be tremendous public interest, last minutes rushes for tickets, riot calls and a stampede of Democrats to White City.

Finish Training Activity.

The heavies finished training yesterday with customary light exercises. Marriner appears in condition. His left hand is considered more effective than Retziaff's, which should suggest Sharkey's recent tactics, a careful retreat with jabs to the face for points. But if Marriner wants to gain popularity, he'll take a page from Jack Dempsey's copybook.

The supporting card, composed in the main of Chicagoans, is average. Malloy hastens to announce his scale of popular prices, emphasizing that he will have several thousand of dollar seats. The winner, Mique concludes, will be matched for a July show. In the meantime Malloy has resumed his dickering for more heavyweights.

The West Side Boxing club, Al Miller matchmaker, has sought out Mickey Walker and Johnny Risko, in hope of securing a rematch. Risko unexpectedly nicked Mickey's title hopes last week. Malloy also would consent to put on this argument.

Stanley Poreda, who whipped Ernie Schaaf last week, is another possibility. If King Levinsky should beat Max Baer at Reno on the Fourth, he will continue to find active support in Chicago. Then there's Tuffy Griffith, provided an opponent of suitable size can be found. As for Sharkey, Chicago doesn't believe he'll risk his title until another year.

LINCOLN PARK TO SEND CREW TO TITLE MEET

The Lincoln Park Boat club, Chicago's only rowing club, will take part in the Olympic tryouts and the national regatta in Philadelphia Friday, Saturday, and Monday. This is Chicago's first participation in the national races since 1923.

Lincoln Park's eight oared shell will take part in two races, the intermediate eight oared shell on July 1 and the senior eight oared shell on July 2. This is a seasoned crew, every oarsman of whom was in the boat last year at the central states regatta in the Detroit river, whence Lincoln Park's crew returned with more honors than any junior eight in the regatta.

The national regatta is held under the auspices of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen. It will require three full days of racing to determine the national championship crews and the crews to row in the Olympics in Los Angeles. The lineup in Lincoln Park's shell follows:

No. 1, William Casper; No. 2, William Schenk; No. 3, Nick Arendt; No. 4, Herbert Hales; No. 5, Wilbur Casey; No. 6, Oliver Doe; No. 7, Otto Klinkenburg; stroke, Bill Shaw; cox, Ray Vecsenmeyer; sub, Melvin Ford.

Athletics Win DoubleHeader from Red Sox

Philadelphia, Pa., June 27.—[Special.]—Five Boston pitchers were victims of a prolonged Philadelphia barrage this afternoon as the Athletics won a double header from the Red Sox, 15 to 8 and 9 to 4. Three Sox pitchers were battered for 19 hits in the opener, while George Earnshaw coasted along for his fourth straight triumph and his twelfth of the season.

Tony Freitas held the Bostonians in complete subjection in the second half of the bill, while the A's took picks on two rivals. The attack was featured by Mule Haas' home run in the seventh inning with the bases filled.

Roy Johnson, the outfielder who went to the Red Sox from Detroit in the recent trade for Earl Webb, enjoyed a field day with two home runs and a double off Earnshaw in the first game, and a homer off Freitas in the second. Roy drove in seven of Boston's eight runs in the opener.

Cubs Off for Home and Rest After 13 Beatings on Road

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

St. Louis, Mo., June 27.—The Cubs went home tonight for two days of rest so far as actual games are concerned. They can have tomorrow to themselves, but on Wednesday will work out for about an hour in preparation for the Reds, who'll reach Wrigley field the following afternoon.

It was ladies' day, but about one-third of the usual free gate enthusiasts were absent. That ten cent tax Uncle Sam has just started to collect on all admission passes explains everything.

The local management, always eager for a double header, did the best it could to prevent today's game. Rain threatened after Sunday's double header, but the cover wasn't placed on the infield. It poured during the night, but quit so early that the officials couldn't stall off on the plea of wet grounds.

Jim Bottomley, who jammed his thumb into the ground and caused a dislocation in the second game yesterday, will be out of action for a week or more. The veteran had been pounding the ball and the Cards will miss him unless Rip Collins starts a hitting boom.

Orsatti hit a line drive back at Grimes in the fourth and Burleigh put up his glove in self-defense. The ball shot into the air, but Burleigh simply turned around and caught it as it descended.

The complete record for the disastrous trip reads like this: One win out of three at Pittsburgh, one out of four at Brooklyn, two wins in two appearances at Boston, an even break in four at New York, one victory and three defeats at Philadelphia, and the same in this town. That totals eight victories and 13 trimmings.

MARA TO MATCH M'LARNIN WITH BAT BATTALINO

New York, June 27.—[Special.]—Promoter Tim Mara, who recently entered the boxing field, will hold his first show on July 28 with Jimmy McLarnin and Bat Battalino planned for in the windup. It was learned today that McLarnin has agreed to fight, but Battalino has not yet determined whether he will meet the Vancouver welterweight.

Mara will hold boxing shows in the Yankee stadium and Polo grounds this season. He took over both fields when Madison Square Garden decided to build its own bowl on Long Island.

OHIO COMMISSION SUSPENDS THREE BOXERS 60 DAYS

Cleveland, O., June 27.—[Special.]—Three fighters who appeared on the Johnny Risko-Mickey Walker boxing card here last Friday, were suspended for 60 days each by the boxing commission today. They are Tommy Freeman and Johnny Farr of Cleveland and Chico Cisneros of Chicago, who violated a commission rule prohibiting a fighter from participating in a bout within five days of a match in Cleveland. The three suspended boxers were charged with performing in Pittsburgh last week.

Cubs Get 5 Hits; Lose to Cardinals, 4-1

infield stayed back for a possible double play and Gelbert cracked one to English who passed up the double play for a sure play on Orsatti at the plate. Then Derringer tapped gently to Grimes. Mancuso's was the last hit off the veteran spitball pitcher until the champs broke out with a run in the fifth.

One of those phoney drives into the ground in front of the plate after one was out started the champions toward the tally. Gelbert hit the ball and Grimes couldn't get over in time to field it. Derringer sacrificed, mainly as a defense against banging into a double play. Then Flowers singled between short and third to score Gelbert. Meanwhile the Cubs were having so much trouble with Derringer that if a man reached base he thought he was a privileged character.

Herman Errs, Then Stars.

The shakes which the youthful Cub infield suffers with frequently almost submerged Grimes in the sixth. Frisch was disposed of for a starter, but Collins was safe when his grounder rolled through Herman's hands. Watkins walked and then Herman blundered again. He fumbled Orsatti's bounder. This loaded the bases but a moment later everything was adjusted satisfactorily. Mancuso spanked a wicked liner toward right, but Herman speared it and doubled Orsatti off first.

Weariness on the part of Grimes became evident when he walked Gelbert to open the seventh. The assessment on this was one run. Derringer tried to bunt but missed on a couple of attempts and then swung blindly with pleasing results. He lined a two bagger to left center, Gelbert scoring. When Flowers walked it appeared as if the panic was actually on, but Martin bounced to Herman for a force play and Frisch tapped one to Jurges for a double play.

Frisch Excused Early.

After five innings of futile swinging at Derringer's stuff the Cubs finally steamed up some excitement in the eighth, but all they accomplished by it was the elimination of Frisch from the struggle. Richbourg batted for Jurges and popped to Gelbert. Gudat batted for Grimes and walked. English crashed a single into right. Herman then rolled to Gelbert, forcing English at second. Frisch whipped the ball to first and was greatly surprised when Ump Quigley refused to call Herman out. Frisch expressed his sentiments about it and Quigley chased him from the game. The decision didn't make any difference because Cuyler ended the episode with a poke to Gelbert.

May made a brief appearance against the titleholders in the eighth, but it was long enough to let them pick up another run. Collins, the first to face Jakie, beat out a bunt and ran to third on Watkins' single to right. May remained to get Orsatti on a pop to Herman and then retired to let Bush straighten out the tangle. Mancuso's bunt squeezed Collins over the plate. Hack fielded the bunt and made a needless throw to Hartnett, who got the ball after it had bounced off the grandstand. Hack's crazy throw sent Watkins to third, but Bush was able to handle the next two men.

Blake Named Referee of Levinsky-Baer Match

Reno, Nev., June 27.—[Special.]—The 20 round bout between King Levinsky, Chicago heavyweight boxer, and Max Baer, scheduled here on July 4, will be refereed by George Blake of Los Angeles, Cal., it was announced today. Govs. Rolph of California and Balzar of Nevada probably will be the judges.

Sox Rest Today; They'll Call on BrownsTomorrow

The Sox yesterday concluded their long home stay and tomorrow will open a five game series in St. Louis. During their home stand the Sox won 8 and lost 14. They split the series with the Boston Red Sox and Philadelphia Athletics and lost the others.

Here's the won and lost showing for the 22 consecutive home contests:
St. Louis, 2; Sox, 1.
Washington, 3; Sox, 1.
Boston, 2; Sox, 2.
New York, 3; Sox, 1.
Philadelphia, 2; Sox, 2.
Detroit, 2; Sox, 1.

The season series now stands 11 victories for the Detroit Tigers and 5 for the Sox.

There's always a ray of sunshine. Yesterday it was the pitching of Lefty Evans. Evans didn't allow a hit in the two innings he pitched and in the ninth fanned Gehringer and Webb.

There are several men who are not doing their share in the Sox drive for an error record. Here's the showing since the opening of the Washington series on June 7: Hayes, 9; Selph, 8; Kress, 6; Sullivan, 5; Appling, 3; Berry, Grube, Blue, Hodapp, Jones and Funk, 2 each; Caraway and Gaston, 1 each.

CUBS' LADIES DAY TICKETS GO OUT TODAY FOR JULY 8

The Cubs will accept requests for ladies' day tickets today for the game of Friday, July 8, at Wrigley field. One ticket will be alloted to each applicant until the limit of 20,000 has been exhausted.

Requests should be addressed to Ladies' Ticket Office, Wrigley Field, and must contain an addressed stamped envelope. Each applicant is required to pay a 10 cent tax. These tax tickets may be purchased at the ball park only, prior to admission to Wrigley field.

Sox Misplays Help Tigers Triumph, 9-3

larly. Appling, with only three errors, has been similarly handicapped.

While the showing of 4¼ errors per game in the last four games would establish them as the majors' clumsiest team of all time, it sustained for the remainder of the season, there is some fear they will not surpass the mark of 425 set by Detroit in 1901.

The drive of the Sox in the error department helped the Tigers to make one more run than they made hits. But there were other elements, not the least of which were homers by Davis and Stone, the former's being his first in major league competition. Davis got his off Frasier, the starting pitcher, and Stone's was accomplished at the expense of Caraway.

Gerald Walker did some more whacking with three doubles. Then there was Webb's single, his only hit, but something to mention because it was propelled when the bases were full as a result of two errors and a base on balls. The Sox made three errors in the inning but one was wasted.

Tigers Take Early Lead.

The Sox made only five hits off Isadore Goldstein, who pitched all the way for the Tigers. Two of these were made by Lu Blue in the seventh and eighth innings, his first safeties since his return to the lineup three days ago. The last two Sox runs were unearned, the Tigers getting Chicago's fielding habits to the point of executing two errors.

The Tigers finished the first two innings in possession of a 4 to 1 lead, mostly because of Walker's first double and that homer of Davis', both vital blows being accomplished after two were out.

Gehringer singled with one out in the first inning. Stone forced Gehringer for the second out and then Webb walked. Walker doubled over third, scoring Stone, and, when Sullivan failed to see the ball coming, Webb also scored and Walker reached third. Kress backed against the right field wall to pull down Rogell's fly.

In the Tigers' end of the second inning Goldstein singled with two out. Then Davis knocked his homer into the right field stand.

Kress Doubles and Scores.

Kress led off the Sox second with a double off the scoreboard in left center, took third while Gehringer was throwing out Blue and scored on Appling's fly to Webb.

Sullivan's second error was a two base muff of Davis' fly to start the fifth inning. Gehringer walked and the bases were full when Selph punted Stone's double play ball. Webb singled to center, scoring Davis and Gehringer and putting Stone on third.

At this point Frasier was hauled off and Caraway appeared. Pat fanned Walker and Hayes threw out Rogell, Stone scoring and Webb stopping at second. Grube sought to catch Webb off second and threw the ball into center field, Webb taking third. Schuble filed to Funk.

The Tigers made two runs in the seventh off Caraway. Gehringer walked and came home on Stone's homer, a nice smack into the right field stand. Webb filed to Kress and then Walker knocked his third double of the game. Walker was doubled at the plate when he sought to get home from second while Appling was throwing out Rogell.

There was a flurry in the Sox seventh that might have meant something earlier in the contest. Blue opened with the third Chicago hit off Goldstein. Then followed errors by Rogell and Schuble, the hitting of Fothergill by Goldstein and an outfield fly, all of which was good for two runs.

Glen Oak Host Tomorrow in C.D.G.A. Play

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

Whether the three year reign of Edgewood Valley in the Chicago District Golf association's annual team matches is to continue will be decided tomorrow, when the 1932 series is to be held at Glen Oak. A quartet from the southwest side club has won the Chick Evans trophy, emblematic of the title, the last three seasons, but is still only the third club in the district to hold it in 12 years of play.

The C. D. G. A. inaugurated the team match series in 1920, and except for 1923, when Glen View was the victor, Onwentsia dominated the championship scene until 1928, when Edgewood Valley came along. Reports from other entries in this year's tournament, many of which have competed in the series since its inception, are that Edgewood Valley will have no easy road in scoring its fourth consecutive victory.

The home club itself has decided to do something about the matter, and last week chose a quartet of stars to represent Glen Oak. This foursome includes George and Warren Dawson, Doug Tweedie, and John Morrell. Other entries to date, among them Rolling Green, Medinah, Calumet, Euclid Hills, La Grange, and Ridgemoor, will send forth foursomes as talented as Glen Oak's. Casa del Mar, Chicago Golf, and Acacia also are expected to have teams at the tee when play starts at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning.

The championship is decided on the basis of the best 36 hole gross score turned in by a club team of four men. All players will shoot from scratch.

The Aytons from Evanston, Laurie Sr. and Jr., won the weekly pro-amateur event of the Chicago District Independent Professionals' association yesterday at the Northbrook Golf club. Their best ball for the 18 holes was 32—34—66 against par, 72, and when it was all over, Laurie Sr. attributed the victory to his son's play. The next pro-amateur event of the association will be held next week, probably at Olympic.

Among the other prize winners yesterday were Terry McGovern of Rogers Park and C. H. Hurtt Jr. of Mission Hills, 35—32—67; Bob Stupple and G. Guettler of Skokie, 35—33—68; Joe Carney and Byron Harcke of Northmoor, 36—33—69; Sam Bernardi of Briergate and Billy Chambers of Sunset Valley, 35—35—70; Buck Kelly of Countryside and Cap Alicoate of Mid-City, 35—35—70; George Jenkins and Jim Ford of Northbrook, 35—35—70; Floyd Johnson and C. H. Hurtt Sr., of Mission Hills, 37—34—71; Joe Paretti and John Henderson of Olympic, 36—35—71; Tom Carney and Bud Haskins of Northmoor, 38—36—72; Wally Chamberlain and H. O. Gruver of Westward Ho, 37—36—73, and John Connell and M. Devine of Columbian, 37—37—74.

Ten years appears to be a long time between holes in one, but it didn't seem that long to B. L. Fisher Sunday when he sank his tee shot with a spoon on the 220 yard ninth at Evergreen. Fisher made his first ace in 1922 when he holed out with his driver on the 17th at Jackson park.

Mrs. Rose Long, holder of the Jackson park women's championship, won medal honors in the Chicago Public Parks championship tournament at the Marquette Golf club, shooting 38—44—82 yesterday. Mrs. Florence Jacobs, also of Jackson park, was second with 40—43—83.

Other low scorers were Mrs. D. J. Fitzgerald, Marquette, who turned in an 84 and Mrs. Isobel Meany, Cog Hill, who scored an 86. Match play will start today. Mrs. Rose Marshall, who won the title last year, did not enter the meet this year.

BOTH HELENS WIN WIMBLEDON NET MATCHES EASILY

Mrs. Moody, Miss Jacobs Enter Semi-Finals.

BY EUGENE SPECK.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, June 27.—Challengers for Cilly Aussem's undefended singles tennis championship took over Wimbledon's courts today. Mrs. Helen Wills Moody and Miss Helen Jacobs, the two remaining Americans, went through to the semi-finals in walkaway victories.

Mrs. Moody allowed only one game, trouncing Dorothy Round of Great Britain, 6-0, 6-1. Helen Jacobs beat last year's other German finalist, Fraulein Krahwinkel, 6-2, 6-4.

British Stars Defeated.

The surprises of the day were in the defeat of England's No. 1 player and the crushing elimination of her No. 2. Miss Whittingstall was unable to stay against the drives of her countrywoman, Mary Heeley, after the first set. Although the latter trailed one game to four in the second set she beat Britain's greatest hope, 3-6, 6-4, 6-0.

Mlle. Rene Mathieu of France sent Betty Nuthall off the court after 32 minutes, outplaying the former American titleholder, 6-0, 6-3.

Mrs. Moody will meet Miss Heeley in the semi-finals and Miss Jacobs will be confronted by Mlle. Mathieu.

Allison, Van Ryn Advance.

The men loafed today or played doubles. Wilmer Allison and John Van Ryn advanced to the quarter finals in their course toward the title they have held twice before by defeating the former British Davis cup pair, J. C. Gregory and Ian Collins, 6-4, 6-1, 6-4, but the Australian team, seeded at the opposite end, was beaten.

The Japanese, Miki and Satoh, stayed through a vicious match with Crawford and Hopman at the better end of 6-4, 10-12, 6-2, 3-6, 9-7 result. Sidney Wood and Gregory Mangin, who were not seeded, easily disposed of C. A. Magrane and J. R. Reddall, 6-2, 7-5, 6-4.

Two French Teams Win.

The French carried two doubles teams into the quarter finals when Jean Borotra and Jacques Brugnon beat Gandar Dower and F. D. H. Wilde, 6-3, 6-1, 8-6, and Christian Boussus and Andre Merlin defeated E. R. Avory and R. J. Ritchie, 6-4, 7-5, 6-1.

In the women's doubles, Miss Jacobs and Elizabeth Ryan beat Mrs. J. Lycett and Mrs. G. E. Peacock, British women, 6-2, 7-5, but the other American doubles team, Palfrey and Harper, was beaten by Mrs. J. B. Pittman and Joan Ridley, 6-4, 6-2.

COMPLETE PLANS FOR $200,000 STATES GROUP

World's Fair to Ask for Bids This Week.

BY AL CHASE.

Plans have been completed and bids will be asked for the latter part of this week on the States group of buildings, it was announced yesterday. It will cost approximately $200,000 and was designed by Edward H. Bennett of Chicago and Arthur Brown Jr. of San Francisco. It will be of steel frame construction, on pile foundations, with exterior of steel and plywood siding. The design will be modern. It's to be erected on Northerly Island, between the agricultural group and the electrical group, at the foot of East 16th street extended.

Martin Ringdahl, Highland Park assessor, has leased for ten years, with option to purchase, the 73x125 one story brick garage, known as the Victory Service station, at the southeast corner of St. Johns avenue and Elm place, in Highland Park. The property is being remodeled from plans by John S. Van Bergen into one of the largest filling stations in the Chicago area, with a capacity of twelve cars at once. H. and R. Anspach of Highland Park were the only brokers.

Architects Dine Tonight.

There'll be no set speeches and no ladies present at the annual banquet of the Illinois Society of Architects to be held this evening at the Architects' Club of Chicago, 1801 Prairie avenue, according to H. L. Palmer, financial secretary of the organization. "It'll be strictly a get together affair, with no formal addresses whatever," he said. "We expect to have an open forum and architects can discuss their own troubles and prospects. There'll be entertainment during the dinner."

As told in this department on Sunday, John Reed Fugard of Thielbar & Fugard will be the next president of the Illinois Society of Architects, as he heads each of the two tickets to be voted on today.

MORTGAGE BOND NEWS

Title to the Drexel Plaza apartment hotel at 4915 Drexel boulevard, lot 59x200, has been conveyed by quit claim deed by Frank Loeffler to Harry G. Zimmerman, nominee of the bondholders' protective committee for Lackner, Butz & Co. bond issues. The original underwriting was for $145,000, since paid down to $131,500. Bonds have been called for deposit by the committee and the reorganization plan for the issue contemplates the creation of a liquidation trust. The building is four stories and contains forty-three furnished suites.

The Fletcher building at the southwest corner of Cicero and Fletcher avenues, lot 53x125, has been conveyed by James Phelan to Harry G. Zimmerman, who took title for the bondholders' protective committee. This was an Irving National Mortgage company bond issue of $37,500, since reduced to $30,000. The building is three stories and contains three stores, three apartments, and three offices. The property will be reorganized through the Chicago Title and Trust company liquidation trust method.

George W. Weber has taken title for the bondholders' protective committee to the three story building at the southeast corner of Franklin boulevard and Kedzie avenue, lot 97x140. It was conveyed to him by Herman H. Goodfriend through quit claim deed. This project was financed by a Reliance State bank $75,000 first mortgage bond issue, since reduced to $52,000. The plan of reorganization is to be announced later.

DAWES MAKES STATEMENT ON CENT. REPUBLIC

"Cash Position Is Impregnable."

BY HOWARD WOOD.

Charles G. Dawes, who on Sunday night was elected chairman and member of the board of the Central Republic Bank and Trust company, late yesterday afternoon gave out the following statement:

"The demands on the Central Republic Bank and Trust company during the last week made necessary recourse to borrowing to meet them. These loans have been completed and place the bank in an impregnable cash position. The loans negotiated are for current requirements and to pay depositors and are not for the purpose of liquidation.

[Signed] "CHARLES G. DAWES."

Mr. Dawes distributed copies of this statement himself after a long conference in his private office with Joseph E. Otis, vice chairman; Philip R. Clarke, president of the bank, and other members of the board.

Otis Explains Action Taken.

After giving out the statements Mr. Dawes departed. Asked to comment on the announcement, Mr. Otis said that it meant that there would be sufficient funds to cover any contingency.

"It means," he added, "that we are going to continue to do business as usual and that withdrawals can cause absolutely no embarrassment. We have plenty of money to cover all demands, even if every depositor should ask for his money."

Mr. Otis said the loans were supplied by the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

Asked to comment on the precipitous decline yesterday in the over the counter quotations on the stock of Central Republic Bank and Trust company, Mr. Otis said:

"We simply withdrew our support."

Stock Drops 40 Points.

On Saturday the stock was being quoted at 47 bid, 50 asked. Yesterday quotations fell to 4 bid, 6 asked, and at one time a quotation as low as 1 was reported. The highest quotation during 1932 to date was 112.

Central Republic Bank and Trust company is the outgrowth of a merger effected July 27, 1931, between Central Trust company and the National Bank of the Republic. The Central Trust company was organized in 1902 shortly after Charles G. Dawes retired as controller of the currency.

Mr. Dawes' election to the chairmanship of the Central Republic Bank and Trust company followed his return to Chicago June 11 after he had resigned from the chairmanship of the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

Follows Day of Parleys.

Mr. Dawes' statement was distributed after a day of conferences in some of which officers and directors of other loop banks participated. It is understood that the Central Republic Bank and Trust company asked for and obtained the cooperation of New York correspondent banks and the four principal loop banks in Chicago as well as that of the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

Officials of the Central Republic Bank and Trust company and other loop banks regarded Mr. Dawes' announcement as a clarifying influence in banking circles after several days of uneasiness.

At the other loop banks business was reported to be back to normal after three days of withdrawals. Also, yesterday no failures were reported among outlying banks.

Business conditions were considered stabilized and the banking atmosphere, which had been fogged with rumors originating in radical propaganda calculated to cause unrest, was regarded as completely clarified.

DEPOSITS COVERED

New York, June 27.—[Special.]—The arrangements for placing the Central Republic Bank and Trust company of Chicago in an impregnable cash position to meet the demands of depositors were made over the week-end, according to the understanding of Wall street bankers, after a conference in which Chicago bankers, officials of the Reconstruction Finance corporation and Mortimer N. Buckner, president of the New York Clearing House association, joined.

Mr. Dawes' bank, at the close of last week, had deposits of $95,000,000 and the loans were arranged to cover completely that sum. The accounts provided, according to Wall street's information, were: $80,000,000 from the Reconstruction Finance corporation, $10,000,000 supplied by a group of Chicago banks, and $5,000,000 pledged by a group of New York banks through Mr. Buckner. Mr. Dawes, who was president of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, resigned from that office on June 6.

The funds pledged by New York banks, it is understood, will be advanced by a small group which had previously extended a credit to the Central Republic Bank and Trust company. There was no general canvass of the New York Clearing house in connection with the plan.

Gold Transactions Move in Favor of U. S.

New York, June 27.—(AP)—Gold transactions reported by the federal reserve bank today, while of small proportions, favored the United States. There was an import of $14,500 from Mexico, and the bank was informed of arrival of $75,000 at San Francisco from San Salvador. There were no exports or changes in earmarked gold.

Public Control Adds to Rail, Utility Burdens

(This is the second of two articles dealing with the assets of thirty-three large American corporations and the asset values of their common shares. The first article, which appeared on Sunday, dealt with industrial companies. This article deals chiefly with public utility and railroad companies.)

BY SCRUTATOR.

Analysis of the assets of the big American public utility and railroad companies shows them to be in a different category than the industrial corporations. The total assets of the public utilities and railroads are large and the asset values of their shares generally are far higher than current market prices, but their working capital is generally relatively lower than that of the industrial companies.

This situation results to large degree from the fact that earnings of both the public utilities and railroads have been restricted. The public utilities have been circumscribed by local rate regulations and state legislation. Even the great corporations, many of which are in the nature of holding concerns, have been affected by regulations imposed on their subsidiaries.

Railroads Suffer Most.

The railroads have been even more adversely affected. In the early part of this century they were subjected to the "soak the railroads" theories of political demagogery. To be sure, this was partly retribution for abuses committed by railroad managements in earlier years, when the attitude of management was rather epitomized by the reply of a famous railroad leader to a question of public policy. He said: "The public be damned!"

Local and state regulations were largely superseded by government regulation when the interstate commerce commission came into being. However, this was merely a change in methods of restriction. While it relieved the railroads of a multiplicity of state rate regulations, it did not remove other restrictions that could be imposed by local governments.

Wartime control of the railroads was adjudged necessary for the country's war effort. While in effect it guaranteed earnings, it did not help either the financial or operating status of the railroads, as developed when the carriers were returned to private control.

Earnings Limited By Law.

Then came the Transportation act, which put into effect theories of what the railroads should be permitted to earn. But it is notable that in the succeeding decade the railroads have not been able to earn the 5¾ per cent which was fixed as a "fair return" on their property valuations.

Therefore, neither the public utilities nor the railroads have been able to accumulate as large surplus earnings, relative to size, as have the industrial companies. And this is reflected in their relatively smaller working capital.

A list of some utilities and railroads follows:

AMERICAN TELEPHONE AND TELEGRAPH—Total assets, $3,204,646,347; capital stock, 18,653,361 shares; book value, $135.30 a share; current market price, 76¾; net working capital, which is the excess of current assets over current liabilities, $195,655,748.

SIMPSON RESIGNATION ACCEPTED BY BOARD OF MARSHALL FIELD CO.

Directors of Marshall Field & Co yesterday accepted the resignation of James Simpson as chairman of the board. Mr. Simpson relinquished his post in order to serve as chairman of the three Chicago utility companies formerly under the management of Samuel Insull.

Mr. Simpson continues as a director of the merchandise firm and will retain his stock holdings, it was stated. No successor was named for Mr. Simpson. The post will be left vacant indefinitely and John McKinlay will continue as president and chief executive officer.

At the same time directors deferred action on the preferred stock dividend which is due June 30. Cash and quick assets of the firm are in excess of $18,000,000 at the present time, the company reported. Dividend action was delayed in order to maintain the present strong liquid position, the company's announcement said.

MIDDLE WEST TRADE RENEWED IN CHICAGO MART

Trading in Middle West Utilities stock was suspended for forty-five minutes on the Chicago exchange yesterday. The action was taken by exchange officials on the belief that the company would discontinue its stock registrar. Trading was resumed, however, when official word was received from the receivers that the registrar would be continued.

Some 2,600 shares of Middle West appeared on the tape when trading was resumed and the price was unchanged at 25 cents a share. The receivers gave notice that the company will charge 60 cents a certificate for transfer and registration. The fee will be paid by the person requesting the transfer.

The market generally was lower in sympathy with the trend in New York, where leading shares sold down to new low prices. Commonwealth Edison lost 1¾ points to 50¾ and Public Service no par sold off a fraction to 29½. Swift International was easier at 16½.

ATLAS UTILITIES EXTENDS TIME ON MERGER OFFER

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, June 27.—The Atlas Utilities corporation has announced that, in accordance with its offer dated June 4, it had extended to July 15 its proposal to acquire by the exchange of shares capital stocks of its affiliated investment companies.

Atlas Utilities is notifying also the stockholders of the Goldman Sachs Trading corporation, in which Atlas Utilities corporation and affiliated interests have a substantial block of shares, that the offer to acquire their stock has also been extended to July 15. The shareholders of the affiliated companies were advised that no further extensions beyond July 15 will be granted.

ILLLINOIS CITIES ATTACK PRICE OF NATURAL GAS

Ask Cut of Millions on Pipe Line.

Springfield, Ill., June 27.—(AP)—Retail rates for natural gas in Central Illinois were declared 50 per cent too high, in a brief filed by municipalities with the Illinois commerce commission today. The plaintiffs asked that the commission establish its own cost basis for wholesale natural gas instead of accepting the cost basis proposed by the Panhandle Illinois and Panhandle Eastern pipe line companies.

Should the cities' contention for a lower rate basis be sustained, domestic rates will be reduced. Today's briefs, however, concerned only the wholesale rate structure.

Ask Cut of Millions.

The cities asked the commission to cut $4,800,000 from the rate base, reduce the total fixed charges on the Panhandle property from 14 per cent to 9.405 per cent and apportion charges to Illinois and Indiana deliveries at a saving to Illinois consumers of about $700,000 to $2,000,000 yearly for the first ten years of operation.

The municipalities pointed out that retail rates for natural gas now in effect in Central Illinois are 50 per cent higher than in other states; that the volume of gas sold in this state will increase almost directly as rates are reduced and that the cost per unit of gas delivered will be reduced as sales increase.

Want Profits Limited.

The cities contend that 7 per cent on the fair value of the property used in the enterprise is a fair and reasonable return to the Panhandle system. The company has asked for an 8 to 10 per cent return.

The cities also contend that gas transported by the main line of the Panhandle Illinois across this state to Indiana should pay its fair share of the cost of delivering gas, and that with costs properly allocated to Indiana gas.

AMERICAN TEL. SUED BY STANLEY COMPANY IN EAST

Wilmington, Del., June 27.—(AP)—The Stanley Company of America, Inc., filed suit in federal court today against the American Telephone and Telegraph company, the Western Electric company, Inc., and Electrical Research Products, Inc., alleging violation of the Clayton anti-monopoly act.

The bill alleges the defendants have unlawfully conspired to monopolize the interstate business of supplying recording equipment to producers of talking motion pictures and reproducing equipment for theaters.

The bill contends the Stanley company has been damaged to the extent of $1,500,000 by reason of acts of the defendants and asks the court to decree the agreement to be illegal, to enjoin the defendants from enforcing it, and to decree that the reproducing equipment now in possession of the complainant is the property of the Stanley company.

American Radiator Co. to Reopen Buffalo Plant

Buffalo, N. Y., June 27.—(AP)—The American Radiator company announced today that it would reopen its plant here tomorrow, after a shutdown of more than two months, and would recall more than 350 employes. Several hundred workers returned to the Du Pont rayon plant when it resumed operations last week after being shut down for several months.

The Wickwire Spencer Steel company also announced that it would reopen some time this week an open hearth furnace which had been inactive for several months.

27 N. Y. Mutual Savings Banks Set 3½ Pct. Rate

New York, June 27.—(AP)—The twenty-seven mutual savings banks of New York will have a uniform interest rate of 3½ per cent for the current quarter with the exception of the Seaman's Bank for Savings, the Savings' Bank association of New York announced today. The Seaman's has a split rate of 4 per cent on deposits ranging up to $1,000 and 3½ per cent on amounts over $1,000 to $7,500.

WINNIPEG, Man., June 27.—(AP)—Application to have the Manitoba Wheat Pool declared bankrupt was made today in the Supreme court of Manitoba by A. B. Hudson, on behalf of the Gillespie Terminal Grain company of Fort William.

WHEAT PRICES ADVANCE, THEN SUFFER SLUMP

Close Is Near Low Mark of Season.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Action of the wheat market yesterday was the reverse of that of Saturday. Small early advance was followed by a break of 1⅞@1⅞c from the high point. The break carried all deliveries within a fraction of the lowest level of the season to date. The close was at net losses of ⅝@⅞c. Uneasiness was apparent shortly after the opening and with the break in stocks more than offset the effect of heavy rains in the southwest and relative firmness in Winnipeg.

Many of the local longs went out of their holdings on the way down, and the downturn in wheat was helped along by the liquidation which developed in corn. Old July closed at 48@48⅛c; old September, 50½@50⅝c, and December, 53⅛@53⅝c.

Heavy Rains Southwest.

Harvesting of winter wheat in the southwest promises to be delayed for several days at least, and the trade had reports during the day of more or less damage to the starting crop. The latter was said to be dead ripe in some sections and to have been beaten down by the rains. Reports of 1 to 2 inches of rain over the weekend were numerous from parts of Oklahoma and Kansas, with as much as 7 inches claimed to have been received at Utica, Kas. What little bullishness that developed on the rain reports vanished later when the market started downward, although a good part of the news during the day was favorable for holders.

The trade is preparing for a black rust scare in the American northwest and if weather conditions are favorable for its development some damage is anticipated in Manitoba. The rust was said to have been found at one point in the latter province. Cool and breezy weather prevailed this side of the international line which was unfavorable for its spread.

Between the delay in harvest and the smaller crop there is a material difference in the movement of new wheat in the southwest as compared with 1931. The five leading southwestern markets, including Kansas City received 870 cars yesterday against 3,127 cars a year ago, and some of the grain was reported as showing the effect of the persistent rains in the way of excess moisture.

Visible Supply Decreases.

World's shipments of 9,918,000 bu were well below the average of recent weeks, and the supply on ocean passage was reduced 6,448,000 bu dropping to 51,830,000 bu or 1,672,000 bu less than a year ago. Liverpool was affected by the reduction and closed 1⅛@1¼c per bu higher with July at 51⅞c, or 2⅝c above Chicago, while Winnipeg was ¼@½c lower with July at 53⅞c in Canadian funds.

A decrease of 1,633,000 bu was shown in the domestic visible supply of wheat the past week with the total 165,095,000 bu against 187,320,000 bu last year. The Bureau of Agricultural Economics in a summary of the worlds situation suggested a carryover of 640,000,000 bu at the end of the current crop year, compared with 656,000,000 bu last year.

Longs Sell July Corn.

Scattered longs were on the selling side of July corn, not caring to take a delivery of the cash grain. Stop loss orders were uncovered on the way down and the nearby future dropped to 23⅝c, or within ⅜c of the lowest figure of the season. There was buying of July against sales of September credited to changing over hedges by cash interests, while some longs in the July replaced by purchases of the more distant position.

Net losses were ⅝@1⅛c with July at 28⅞@29c; September, 31½@31⅝c, and December, 32⅜c.

There was no change in the character of the crop reports, with practically all sections in the main belt receiving more or less moisture. A decrease of 1,516,000 bu in the visible supply made the total 16,841,000 bu against 7,197,000 bu last year.

Oats were sold by longs with all futures selling close to the lowest figures of the season, and closed ⅝c lower. July was 19⅞@20c; September, 20⅝c, and December, 22½c at the last.

Houses with northwestern connections were on the buying side of rye early, but the market eased later with wheat and closed ½@¾c lower. July finished at 29½c; September, 32c, and December, 35¼c.

800 Millions Due on July Stocks, Bonds

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, June 27.—Although many dividends have been reduced and some passed entirely, approximately $300,000,000 will be paid out in dividends by American corporations on July 1.

The outflow will lend a substantial addition to the investment public's supply of money and by far the greater part of it is expected to find its way promptly back into circulation, according to the Associated Press.

Larger Sum on Bonds.

In addition to dividend payments American corporations will distribute $500,000,000 in interest payments to bondholders. July 1 is the most important summer settlement day of the year. Total payments by corporations on that date are equaled only by their Jan. 1 disbursements.

A leading statistical organization which lists virtually every corporation in which there is a public investment estimates that approximately one out of nine are still paying dividends. Nearly 6,000 corporations are included in this study and approximately 650 of them are continuing dividend payments.

Several Absentees.

Several important corporations will be among the absentees this summer. Two with large families of stockholders which fall in this group are United States Steel common and the Cities Service group. Approximately 500,000 persons will miss their usual dividend checks from these companies.

While the movement of $300,000,000 of money from corporations to security holders—$300,000,000 in dividends and $500,000,000 in bond interest—entails a vast and complicated amount of bookkeeping detail, the corporation should bring nothing more than a buzz of activity, so far as the banks are concerned, it is said.

B-M TRANSIT BOARD COMPLETES PLANS TO HANDLE NOTES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, June 27.—Director of the Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit corporation held a special meeting today at which the final details of the financing plan arranged by the management and banking interests for taking care of the company's Aug. 1 note maturity were completed.

There will be no public financing in connection with the maturity, but a group of banks including the Chase National and a large Brooklyn bank will purchase $13,500,000 of the company's notes, the funds so obtained being exclusively devoted to the payment at maturity on Aug. 1 of the company's three year 6½ per cent secured gold notes due on that date.

Arrangements have been made to amortise the short term note issue from earnings and from the additional funds which will be available as the result of the recent omission of common dividend disbursements.

BY FRED HARVEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, June 27.—Most of the leading shares listed on the New York Stock exchange dropped to new low prices for the long bear market today. Losses ranged from 1 to 3 points.

Allied Chemical, American Can, United States Steel, Du Pont, Coca Cola, National Biscuit, National Dairy, Western Union, Westinghouse, Atchison and issues of that caliber bore the brunt of the selling.

Anxiety as to Dividends.

Anxiety over the outcome of a number of important dividend meetings scheduled for tomorrow and later in the week was the main factor of the street's fresh pessimism. The board of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé railway will start the series, and the talk is that it may find it convenient to omit payment completely at this time. The meetings of American Can and Allied Chemical are also being anticipated with the greatest interest. The present rate of $4 on American Can has been in force since February, 1930, but in view of the curtailed earning power and modified cash position few in the street expect a continuance of the payments. Later in the week the directorates of Delaware and Hudson, Westinghouse Electric, and Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railway are to meet, and the trading fraternity expects further "bad news" from most of them.

Brokers reported a rather heavy barrage of selling orders due to the so-called Chicago bank situation and the need of cash among security holders out that way. Some of the weaker issues of the day are among descriptions which have been referred to here of late as being well thought of in that particular section of the country.

Follow Convention.

The Democratic convention proceedings were followed with close interest, of course, but observers are not inclined to rate the big powwow as a market factor of any considerable consequence — certainly not until it has shot its bolt. Lausanne and Washington have both receded into the background for the time being.

Uncertainty as to just how far the Reconstruction Finance corporation may be willing to go in lending assistance to the railroads worked against the carrier stocks, and this group made one of the poorest showings of the entire list. Union Pacific was down about 3 points most of the time and Atchison and most of the others were off from a fraction to around 2 points. Norfolk and Western took a tumble of 8½ points on scattered and limited offerings, showing just how thin its market has become. At one time the issue was down nearly 10 points to the lowest levels since 1908.

Find Going Rough.

In the industrial division, Auburn Auto and Coca Cola found the going particularly rough, the last named taking a header for nearly 4 points. Auburn rallied slightly after dropping about 3 points and recouped about half its setback in the final hour of trading. Auburn has been on the toboggan for the better part of two weeks now.

A long list of preferred stocks gave up from 2 to 8 points, among them being those of American Radiator, International Silver, National Lead A, Reading first, United States Leather prior, United States Steel, Yellow Truck, and Virginia Electric. Another group of preferreds, including American Brake Shoe, Bucyrus-Erie, Consolidated Cigar, and National Lead B, moved against the trend, however, to record gains of from 2 to 6 points or so.

Estimated receipts at Chicago today: Cattle, 5,000; hogs, 17,000; sheep, 12,000.

The advance in hogs gained momentum yesterday. Both the top and average prices jumped 20c, registering the biggest gain for one day since the rise started less than a month ago. Abnormally light receipts, sharp advances in wholesale prices of fresh pork, the appearance of $5.00 hogs at most of the eastern points, the broadest outside demand since March, and the reports that supplies in the country now are in much stronger hands all contributed to the growing confidence in the hog market.

Top grades reached $4.70 yesterday. This price is highest since March 23 and $1.40 above the the low day, May 25. The average advanced to $4.30, showing $1.15 gain since June 4. The spread between eastern and western hog prices became still wider. This warrants further expansion in eastern buying orders on the Chicago market according to traders.

With the supply short of requirements again order buyers met stiff local competition. Following last week's good clearance of fresh pork the wholesale market all smaller interests were eager to replenish their supplies, resulting in the shortest session for hogs in many months. Only pen holders and the inferior grades remained at the close. Shipments from here yesterday at 6,000 were largest since March 21, and some orders had to go over unfilled because of the shortage in the supply. Receipts at Chicago this month are expected to fall short of 435,000, the smallest June since 1883.

Cattle Are Strong.

Cattle carried last week's full strength into this week's market, but only one or two classes managed to forge ahead further. Last week's peak price, $8.25, was more common yesterday, more than 200 steers averaging 1,071@1,293 lbs, going to local packers and for shipment at that figure. The largest single sale at the top price was made on 65 steers averaging 1,262 lbs that sold to Wilson. The bulk of all beef steers sold at $6.50@8.00, highest since early in January.

Quotations were almost on par with a year ago yesterday. On that date top steers reached $8.50, but the bulk stopped at $6.75@7.75. As a rule top cattle prices record an advance late in June and during the month of July. In the last eleven years there has been only one exception to this rule, that being in 1929.

While best grades of steers are gaining strength, plain quality cattle and grassy stock are weakening and are becoming harder to dispose of. However, only a very small proportion of the steer supply is of the kind that has to sell at $6.00 and below. Buyers showed little interest in grassy cows and heifers which sold at a further slight discount yesterday, but good grain fed butcher stock held firm. Yearling heifers again sold up to $7.00. Most dry fed cows sold at $4.00@4.50, a few making $5.00 and slightly above. Calves slumped 25@50c, the break in lambs having some influence on veal calves.

Sheep Receipts Larger.

Lamb offerings increased yesterday and pressed prices down 25c more to the lowest spot in exactly a month and $1.00 under the recent high point. Arrivals at 15,000 were largest for Monday since May 16, but 13,600 of them were billed direct into the packing houses. City butchers took Idaho range lambs at $6.40, while packers bought at $6.25. A few native ewes and wether lambs topped the market to yard traders at $6.50. Packers refused to pay above $6.00. Barring a year ago sheep receipts at Chicago this month are running smallest for June since 1926.

Receipts at Chicago for today are estimated at 5,000 cattle, 17,000 hogs and 12,000 sheep, against 4,812 cattle, 12,101 hogs and 10,709 sheep, the previous Tuesday and 5,102 cattle, 19,607 hogs and 9,293 sheep, a year ago.

SAXON POWER NOTE PAYMENT PLAN AWAITED

Saxony Stands Back of the Security.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, June 27.—Bankers for Saxon Public Works, Inc., a corporation to which the German Free State of Saxony deeded all its electric power plants and coal mines in 1923, are expected to announce shortly a plan for meeting a July 15 maturity of $18,000,000 of 5 per cent notes.

Those notes were floated in this market two years ago by the National City company and Lee, Higginson & Co.

While details of the plan have yet to be completed, it is regarded as certain that the bankers will offer a compromise from the indenture requirements, or, in other words, that the notes will not be paid in American dollars.

Arouses Wide Interest.

The disposition of this maturity is being watched with keen interest here and abroad because it is felt that the formula adopted by Saxony to avoid the difficult task of gathering in necessary dollar exchange may be accepted as a pattern for the numerous maturities which German states, cities and corporations must meet within the next year. Prominent among these is an issue of $25,000,000 Deutsche bank 6 per cent notes, which fall due on Sept. 1, 1932.

The National City company would not state today what the nature of the forthcoming plan is, but it is understood that such a plan is being worked out. The offer to Saxon Public Works noteholders may be a combination of cash dollars plus some cash in German marks in part or complete payment of the face amount of the notes. If only partial payment is to be made in this way, the balance would be made up by a refunding note.

Guaranteed by State.

The Saxon Public Works notes are guaranteed unconditionally as to principal and interest by the Free State of Saxony, which also guarantees payment of close to $38,471,000 other Saxon Public Works and Saxon State Mortgage Institution bonds. The problem involved of obtaining enough dollar exchange to meet maturities is one involving not only this state but all the states, cities and corporations which, since the war, have put out dollar bonds payable in gold.

To date all German interest or sinking fund payments have been met when due.

COTTON MAKES GAIN

Cotton was the one strong market in the speculative list as it closed around the best prices with net gains in futures in Chicago of 5 to 6 points and in other markets of 3 to 9 points on futures and 5c up on spots in New York at 5.35c, with New Orleans up 10 points to 5.25c, Galveston, 5.20c. Liverpool was 2 points net higher at the close. Rains were reported over the belt. Temperatures were higher and boll weevils active. It was claimed, however, that extreme high temperatures and rains would be detrimental to them.

Exports for the past week were 98,739 bales against 48,382 bales last year. For the season to date they were 8,200,000 bales against 6,500,000 bales last year. Spinners takings of American cotton last week, 180,000 bales against 176,000 bales the previous week and 146,000 bales last year. Trade sentiment was more mixed with an increased disposition to take on moderate lines on breaks. Prices follow:

Why pay more than Household's low rate?

The nationally known HOUSEHOLD LOAN PLAN offers cash loans of $300 or less to husbands and wives at reasonable rates.

Loans above $100 and up to $300 are made at a rate less than the usual small loan rate.

If you are working and keeping house you have all the security needed for a Household loan.

Quick service. Strictly confidential. Husband and wife only need sign. No endorsers. 20 months to repay.

Story of the First Day's Proceedings in Democratic Convention and Its Committees Told in Pictures

KEYNOTER STIRS DELEGATES' ENTHUSIASM. Senator Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky, temporary chairman, who started demonstration by his advocacy of vote on repeal of eighteenth amendment. (Story on page 1.)

SCENE IN DEMOCRATIC NATIONAL CONVENTION BEFORE START OF DEMONSTRATION IN FAVOR OF REPEAL OF THE EIGHTEENTH AMENDMENT. As was the case on the first day of the Republican convention, there were many empty seats. The balconies contained a larger audience than they did at the Republican convention, but there were fewer persons in the mezzanine seats. Shortly after this picture was taken the delegates, aroused by utterances of Senator Barkley, staged a thirteen minute demonstration, carrying the banners of the states with them. (Story on page 1.)

CHICAGO'S MAYOR GETS FIRST APPLAUSE. Mayor A. J. Cermak making his welcoming address. He was cheered when he declared for the repeal of the eighteenth amendment. (Story on page 1.)

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

DELEGATES IN DEMONSTRATION AFTER FORMER DRY CHAIRMAN DECLARES FOR VOTE ON REPEAL. Scene in the convention when, after cheering the speaker, Democrats from all parts of the country started a parade, carrying the banners of states generally considered as dry into line with those of communities known to be wet. There were a few fights over the possession of the standards of some of the states. (Story on page 1.)

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

WINS FIRST ROUND IN CHAIRMANSHIP FIGHT. Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana, who was recommended for permanent chairman by a vote of 36 to 12 for Jouett Shouse. The fight will be carried to the convention floor. (Story on page 1.)
